5-Year Deadline Cited by Kennedy

Nation Must Buy Trade Fleet to Keep Prestige, President Says.

By William V. Nessly.

Launching of the "long-delayed rehabilitation" of the American merchant marine was called for by President Roosevelt yesterday as he sent to Congress a request for $10,000,000 to be added to the Maritime Commission's ship construction fund, together with authorization for the commission to contract for new ship construction up to $150,000,000.

The Maritime Commission hopes to bring about construction of 95 ships with the money asked for, Chairman James P. Kennedy said at a later press conference. By types, the total would be divided:

Cargo ships, 46; cargo, C-2 type, 14; passenger and cargo, type P-1, 10; passenger and cargo, P-2, 10; passenger and cargo, P-4, 4; special Manhattan type, 1 (to replace the Leviathan), and tankers, 10.

Firms Can Finance Cost.

Assurances have been received that private companies can finance their share of the cost of building 28 in the near future. Others could be built by the Government, for charter, or by other private companies.

The commission is authorized to contribute up to 50 per cent of the cost of building a ship, to meet the difference between the cost of construction in this country and the lower cost abroad. In addition, the Government may lend an additional 25 per cent of the cost at 3½ per cent interest, loans to be repaid within 2 years. Thus, the private company would be required to finance 25 per cent of the cost to build the vessel.

The only way the country can get an adequate merchant marine, the President said at his press conference, is to buy it. He told reporters that with the exception of oil tankers not a single sea-going vessel of the passenger, combination or general cargo type was under construction in an American shipyard in 1936, and for the fifteenth consecutive year not a single seagoing ship of the general cargo-carrying type has been built in an American shipyard for foreign trade.

Kennedy said the commission estimates an outlay of $400,000,000, spread evenly over five years, would be necessary for a cargo-ship replacement program sufficiently comprehensive to rehabilitate the Nation's freight service operating from North Atlantic, South Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Coast ports.

Replacement of certain combination passenger and cargo ships in the trade with the east coast of South America "and in other essential services" would increase the

Committee Favors Limit on Taxicabs; Fare Boost Urged

A favorable report on a bill to limit the number of taxicabs operating in Washington was indicated yesterday at a hearing before a subcommittee of the House District Committee headed by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia.

At the same time both Randolph and Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, urged an increase of 5 cents for each taxicab zone.

Randolph expressed the opinion the scale rate beginning at 20 cents is too low to permit drivers to earn a decent livelihood, while Nichols pointed out the increases would enable the operators to pay for liability insurance.

Boos and cries of "baloney" greeted a statement by Harry H. Bettleman, of the Consolidated Cab Association, that a conscientious cab driver could earn from $5 to $15 a day.

Riley Elgen, chairman, and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, of the Public Utilities Commission, testified in support of the bill. Keech said there are 4,737 cabs licensed to operate in Washington, or more than are in operation in Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh combined.

McAdoo, Jr., Weds North Carolinian In New York City

New York, June 8 (AP).—William Gibbs McAdoo, Jr., 42-year-old broker-son of the California Senator, and Sarah A. Lummus, 24, native of Charlotte, N. C., were married today in the Municipal Building Chapel.

McAdoo's first marriage to the former Mollie Tackaberry Ferguson, whom he wed in the Municipal Building 15 years ago, ended in a divorce at Riverside, Calif., last Wednesday.

Two years ago McAdoo and a Miss Lummus were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct following a dispute over a $6.50 restaurant check here. The charges were dropped, after the pair spent the night in jail, when McAdoo paid the check.

Europe Today

British Reaction to Edward After Coronation Is 'He Let Us Down.'

This is the second in a series of articles in which Eugene Meyer, publisher, and Felix Morley, editor of The Post, are collaborating during a tour which permits them to study social, economic and political trends abroad.

By Felix Morley.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

London, June 1 (By Mail).—Slowly, and almost reluctantly, England is taking down her coronation decorations. It is as though the country were loathe to return to routine after the great outpouring of well-directed emotionalism which marked the crowning of George VI.

Significant overtones have been apparent in the consecration of the new monarch and his Queen. Together with this couple the entire population has re-dedicated itself to the national service. A new energy, and a new determination to be a dominant force in world affairs, has replaced the apathy and defeatism which until lately seemed to beset the British lion.

Paris, June 8 (AP).—Eugene Meyer, former Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and publisher of The Washington (D. C.) Post, was received today by Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister. Meyer was accompanied by Felix Morley, editor of The Post. They conferred yesterday with Premier Paul van Zeeland of Belgium, who shortly is to confer with President Roosevelt.

A large part of the explanation for this striking change centers in the circumstances surrounding the abdication of Edward VIII, last December. In his own country the former King is not a beneficiary of the romantic glamour which in America is cast over him and "the woman I love." On the contrary, the general reaction, in every class of society, is "he let us down."

The former Kaiser is not much less influential in Germany than is poor Edward, for all his former popularity, here. If the Duke of

Nazi Press Demands Germans Decide Between Hitler, Vatican

Official Paper Denies Religious Leadership Is at Rome in New Attack on Catholics; Two More Church Leaders Sentenced.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 8.—The official Nazi press demanded today that Germans choose between Hitler and the Vatican.

The latest manifestation of the breach between church and state was published in the party newspaper Westdeutscher Beobachter at Cologne.

"We must now demand one single decision," the government-controlled newspaper stated editorially—"Are you willing to obey Adolf Hitler more than a church government, which long ago became a secular power?

"It is quite evident in Rome that there is not a religious leadership but a purely secular center of power, fighting to maintain its suzerainty over whole peoples."

Two Brothers Sentenced.

Trials of Catholics on immorality charges were continued at Koblenz, where two Catholic brothers were sentenced to 2½ years and 1 year, respectively.

The heavier sentence was imposed because the offense was alleged to have occurred within Cologne Cathedral, which the prosecuting attorney assailed as "horrible sacrilege."

The editorial was another of the many in the past few weeks directed against Pope Pius for his failure to rebuke George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, who criticized Hitler and charged that undue publicity was given trials of German Catholic monks and lay brothers on charges of immorality.

The press continued its criticism of the cardinal and the Vatican on this count, but took no outward notice of the Sunday incidents—which included fist fighting in Munich.

Nazis Jeered.

The outbreaks occurred during celebration of the "Sunday of Youth." Priests led processions of Catholic youths through the streets amid jeering from Nazi youth groups.

Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels had warned in his speech on May 28 that Catholic clergy might be haled into court if the church again questioned fairness of the immorality trials, but there was no apparent action today—despite reading of answers to the Rebels' Bombs Kill Hundreds In Loyal Towns

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 8.—Gen. Francisco Franco's rebel bombing planes, warships and siege guns today killed hundreds of civilians on a half-dozen fronts in one of the most terrifying chapters of Spain's 11-month-old civil war.

In Madrid alone 120 persons, including women and children, were reported killed and 200 were wounded when rebel guns in the Guadarrama Hills poured 250 big-caliber shells into the Puerta del Sol, piling streets with wreckage.

Southern Front Bombed.

Sixty insurgent war planes virtually wiped out the town of Galdacono, important Basque defense point 5 miles east of Bilbao, forcing the loyalists to abandon it.

In the south, on the Granada front, heavy aerial bombardments were reported.

Three insurgent planes, appearing from the direction of the Balearic Islands, bombarded Valencia, provisional loyalist capital on the east-

Judge in Puerto Rico Escapes Gun Shots of Revolutionaries

Sentenced Conspirators' Friends Fire on U. S. Jurist in Auto.

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 8.—United States Judge Robert A. Cooper, who sentenced eight Puerto Rican Nationalists to prison for conspiring to overthrow the United States Government on the island, escaped injury late today as between 12 and 15 shots were fired at him.

He was returning to his home when the incident occurred.

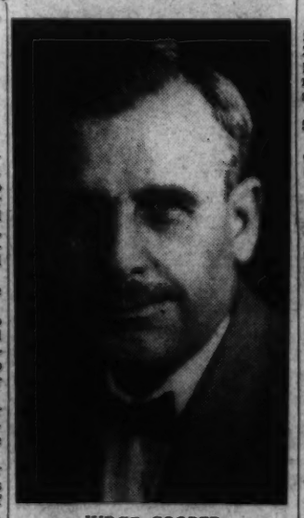
The Nationalists were flown to the United States yesterday and arrived in Atlanta early this morning at the Federal penitentiary to begin serving their sentences. Their terms ranged from 4 to 10 years.

The shots were fired by three or four men, the judge afterwards declaring that for a few seconds there was a regular fusillade.

Judge Cooper, former Governor of South Carolina and United States district judge for the District of Puerto Rico since January, 1934, was in his car at the time of the incident.

One bullet pierced the windshield, narrowly missing Detective Francisco Davila, the judge's personal bodyguard for the last year.

The assailants were grouped about an automobile, upon which they appeared to be working. As the judge's car passed them, they opened fire.



JUDGE COOPER.

Acting Gov. Rafael Menendez Ramos, who called upon the judge soon after the incident, attributed the shooting to Nationalists.

An investigation was begun by the chief of police and Robert Thompson, a United States Federal authority.

D. C. Heads Back Senate Supply Bill

Accept 'Stop-Gap' Plan Without Seeking More Local Taxes.

Imminence of Crisis Is Cited; Vote Sends Measure to House.

By James D. Secrest.

No new local taxes beyond those incorporated in the omnibus bill before the House District Committee, will be recommended to the Senate by the Commissioners at this session, it was reliably reported yesterday, providing the measure is adopted by the House without substantial change.

This was learned after the Senate had perfunctorily passed the $46,629,781 District supply bill, raising the House figure by $1,513,197 and increasing the deficit from $6,149,000 to approximately $7,500,000.

Chairman Kennedy, of the subcommittee which prepared the District tax bills, promptly announced he will not attempt to add new levies or to raise any of the rates to offset the increase in the deficit, although the subcommittee drew up its program with the $6,000,000 goal in mind.

Goes to House Group.

This tax program will be presented to the House District Committee this morning, but there is some uncertainty as to whether it will be acted upon because of the absence of Chairman Mary T. Norton.

The Commissioners are prepared to accept this four-point tax plan, it is understood, in the hope it may be adopted by the House and the Senate before July 1, when the new fiscal year begins, but they consider it only stop-gap revenue legislation and not a final answer to the District's fiscal problem.

Consequently, when the tax bill reaches the Senate, the Commissioners probably will ask that an amendment be attached to authorize that a thorough municipal tax investigation and report be made so that a more permanent tax plan may be recommended to the next session of Congress.

This survey was proposed in a rider on the District supply bill reported to the House, but it was eliminated on a point of order raised by members of the House District Committee.

Twofold Reason.

The reason why the District heads are willing to accept the tax program is twofold: (1) an emergency condition confronts the District and speedy enactment is essential if the city government is to escape a fiscal crisis; and (2) the fact that no one knows how much money the income tax and the business privilege levy will raise makes additional taxes at this time appear superficial.

An essential feature of the omnibus bill, however, and one upon which the Commissioners condition their approval, is the first title, which authorizes them to obtain advances from the Federal Treasury as needed.

With this authority, it was explained, the District will be able to cope with any fiscal problem that may arise. If the new revenue measures fall short of expectations, the temporary loans will make up the difference. Moreover, the advances will keep the municipal government operating on a cash basis until the new tax-collective machinery begins making returns.

The tax issue was injected lightly into a brief discussion of the District supply bill on the Senate floor yesterday. Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, asked Senator Thomas, chairman of the District sub-committee, regarding reports of a sales tax threat.

Senator Thomas explained that was one of the tax proposals made to meet a deficit that now appeared to be about $7,500,000 and might run as high as $10,000,000 if revenue

Repeal Majority Rises as Georgia Counts Up Votes

Atlanta, June 9 (AP).—An increasing majority for repeal of Georgia's 22-year-old prohibition law appeared tonight when a tabulation of more than 110,000 votes early today showed:

For repeal, 58,252; against repeal, 52,294.

The returns came from 761 precincts—more than a third of the approximately 1,700 in the State.

Warm Springs Votes Wet.

Warm Springs, Ga., June 8 (AP).—President Roosevelt's "other home" county went both wet and New Deal in early returns from today's constitutional amendment and prohibition repeal election.

Voting for an amendment allowing Georgia to start old-age pensions in conformity with the plan Roosevelt inaugurated, one precinct gave a majority of 213 to 18.

On the wet-dry issue, two precincts gave 224 for and 130 against repeal.

Pray for Dry Victory.

A victorious election for the dry forces of the State of Georgia was asked yesterday in a special prayer by the World's W. C. T. U.

"No question is settled until it is settled right," Dr. F. B. Harris, pastor of the Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, said when Dr. Ella A. Boole, president, asked him to pray for "our friends in the South."

Dr. Harris prayed that Georgians might be guided to "realize that whatever the political aspects of the vote may be, God and their own consciences must be satisfied."

Republic Threatens Lawsuit To Compel U.S. Mail Delivery Of Food to Besieged Workers

Letter to Farley Calls for Full Service to Plants.

Youngstown Mob Assaults Deputies

McKellar to Investigate Interference Charge; Strikes Spread.

On the Labor Front.

The Republic Steel Corporation advised Postmaster General Farley that it would take legal action unless the mails were opened to it for the delivery of food to its workers in strike-besieged plants.

Senator McKellar, head of the Senate Postoffice Committee, said he would investigate charges by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, of interference with the mails in Ohio strike territory.

Philip Murray, leader of the strike pickets at the gates of the independent steel operators, called for a Senate investigation of the strike.

Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs, of Monroe, Mich., asked civilians with military experience to enlist as special policemen to enable the Newton Steel Co. to reopen its strike-closed plant tomorrow morning.

The American Newspaper Guild in annual convention voted to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Legal Action Threatened.

By the Associated Press.

The Republic Steel Corporation, asserting it was denied use of the mails for sending food to its workers in strike-besieged plants, advised Postmaster General Farley yesterday it would take legal action unless the mails were opened to it.

John S. Brookes, jr., member of the Republic's executive committee, demanded in a letter that Farley order postmasters in Warren and Niles, Ohio, "to accept for delivery and deliver all matter" properly presented and destined for the company's plants. The letter added:

"Unless you see fit to comply with this request, which we believe to be entirely within our legal rights, we shall feel compelled to take such legal steps as may be available to us in the premises." Suit was threatened.

"Abnormal" Mail Refused.

Jesse M. Donaldson, Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General, had contended the department should accept for delivery only mail usually delivered under normal conditions.

Brookes said postal regulations do not authorize Donaldson to discriminate between what Donaldson termed "irregular service" and regular service.

The company's threat to take the question to court came while Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, was pressing for a Senate investigation of alleged interference with the mails at strike-bound plants.

Bridges received yesterday from Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee a request that his proposed investigation be broadened to determine whether the refusal of three men to sign contracts with the union violates the Wagner labor relations act.

The New Hampshire Senator told reporters he probably would bring Murray's request to the Senate's attention in a speech today.

Chairman McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, of the Senate Postoffice Committee, has promised that his committee would consider Bridges' proposed investigation on Friday.

Calls Suit "Fraud."

Judge Samuel H. Silbert, of Cleveland, ordered Tom Girdler, chairman of Republic, to appear in court Saturday along with Robert W. Northrup, Toledo, Ohio, who brought suit as a Republic stockholder, to enjoin Republic from spending company funds "for strike-breaking purposes."

Saturday's hearing will be on a motion by the company to dismiss the suit. Attorney Luther Day, counsel for the company, charged at a hearing before Judge Silbert yesterday that the suit "is a fraud upon the court" and that "the plaintiff acquired his stock interest in

Throngs Seek Final Glimpse Of Jean Harlow Lying in State

Actress Had Premonition of Death, Friend Reveals; Doctor Denies Fear of Operation; Private Funeral to Be Held Today.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 8.—Persistent thousands crowded tonight outside the private, guarded mortuary where the body of lovely Jean Harlow lay in a dainty reposing bed—fulfillment of her strange premonition of death.

No one, not even attendants or studio representatives, was allowed to enter without credentials. Detectives guarded every door.

Despite a request of Los Angeles police that they stay away, crowds gathered in the streets hoping for a last glimpse of the 26-year-old actress who died unexpectedly of uremic poisoning.

Death came to the screen's glamorous "platinum blonde," who had amassed an estimated $1,000,000 in her 7-year career before the cameras, as a corps of nurses and an inhalator squad battled frantically to defeat the poison seeping through her system.

Her physician, Dr. E. C. Fishbaugh, said "no" today to reports Miss Harlow's own fear of the surgeon's knife prevented an operation that might have saved her life.

"Neither she nor her mother expressed any fear to me of an operation," he said, "and there was no surgery that could have helped her."

The actress' fear "the end was coming," expressed two weeks ago when she was not actively ill, was

"As happy as clams" because the show came off amid ideal weather conditions, 13 American scientists on far off Canton Island, in the South Pacific yesterday observed a 213-second total eclipse of the sun.

While it is yet too early to determine the success of their study of the phenomenon, colleagues in Washington expressed confidence the National Geographic Society-U. S. Navy Ellipse Expedition will be one of the most fruitful that ever went forth.

Seated in the radio room at National Geographic headquarters here, a select group of Washington scientists "saw" the awesome spectacle, most prolonged solar eclipse in 12 centuries, through the medium of a special broadcast originating on the tiny mid-Pacific atoll on the other side of the world.

Audience Applauds.

When the voice of George Hicks, National Broadcasting Co. announcer in the expedition, sounded the "one minute to go" warning at 2:05 p. m., his rapt listeners included Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the Bureau of Standards; Dr. James Robertson, Naval Observatory astronomer; Capt. A. S. Hickey, acting director of the Naval Observatory, and Vice President John Oliver La Gorce, of the National Geographic.

"The weather is absolutely perfect," announced Hicks.

Spontaneously, there came a burst of applause from the audience, mindful of past expeditions which have traveled thousands of miles only to come back empty-handed because fair weather did not accompany the eclipse.

Edward and Wife To Visit Virginia, Says Spokesman

Richmond, Va., June 8 (AP).—The News-Leader today quoted Herman L. Rogers, in an interview obtained at Tours, France, as saying that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor "undoubtedly" will visit Virginia at an undetermined time in the future.

The interviewer, Clyde H. DuBose, Richmond Seminary student, quoted the spokesman for the couple as saying before the wedding:

"Undoubtedly the duke and duchess will go to America, and this will include a trip to Virginia. But, frankly, they have made no actual plans beyond their stay this summer in Austria. Just when they will go to America will be hard to say."

House Passes Bill for Inquiry In Tax Dodging

Publicity, Treasury Power Reduced Through O'Connor Fight.

By Robert C. Albright.

After alternately storming at "brain trust" interference and panning the tax views of J. P. Morgan, the House yesterday quietly approved a joint Congressional inquiry into wealthy tax-dodging methods, without so much as a record vote.

Spurred on by tax evasion exposures by President Roosevelt, members adopted the resolution previously approved by the Senate. But beforehand they modified publicity features, and scaled down powers sought by the Treasury.

Modifications were quickly voted into the bill on recommendation of Chairman John J. O'Connor and his House Rules Committee, O'Connor took the floor to charge original publicity provisions were "proposed as a blackjack, and nothing less than a blackjack, on the American taxpayer."

O'Connor was applauded when he urged members not to "surrender" their prerogatives "to certain individual employes holding small jobs in the Government, still bearing the print of the clout, to dictate not only the form of what we do, but dictate our policy."

He said his modifying amendments were offered "to preserve the independence of this legislative body."

Gen. Ben Fuller Dies; Former Marine Leader

Succumbs to Pneumonia at 67; Was in Service Since 1891.

Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, former commandant of the Marine Corps and one of the Nation's foremost "soldiers of the sea" died late yesterday at Naval Hospital of pneumonia. He was 67 years old and had been ill only about two days.

A native of Big Rapids, Mich., Gen. Fuller, who was retired on March 1, 1934, was appointed to the Naval Academy from his home State in 1885. Upon his graduation, he was transferred to the Marine Corps and appointed a second lieutenant on July 1, 1891. He became a first lieutenant on March 16, 1893, and a captain March 3, 1899.

On December 27, 1903, he became a major, and on February 3, 1911, a lieutenant colonel. He became a colonel on August 29, 1916, and a brigadier general, with temporary status, July 1, 1918. His appointment as a brigadier became permanent on February 8, 1924.

He was made commandant of the Marine Corps, with the rank of major general, on August 7, 1930.

As a young officer, Gen. Fuller saw service in the Philippines. He participated in the Battle of Navaleta in the autumn of 1899, and was commended for gallantry, meritorious and courageous conduct in the Battle of Tientsin, China, on July 13 and 14, 1900.

His next tour of duty took him to the Naval Station at Honolulu, where he served with distinction

Medical Association Approves Birth Control; Society to Study Federal Medical Aid for Poor

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, June 8.—Birth control was recognized as proper medical practice by the American Medical Association today, when a unanimouse vote of its house of delegates, governing body of American medicine, ended completely a 25-year-long opposition to contraceptives.

On government participation in medical care, the proposal made yesterday by the New York State doctors, which is generally referred to as a turning point in American medical history, the house of delegates ordered immediate hearings.

They will last all day tomorrow, with any of the nearly 10,000 doctors attending this meeting having the privilege of presenting views. The hearing committee is ordered to report Thursday, at a secret executive session, for action by the house of delegates.

Secret executive sessions are the regular rule of the medical house legislation on important matters. At the Thursday meeting, United States Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, is expected to deliver the message on proposed Congressional medical legislation that was scheduled for today. Senator Lewis wired he could not attend today.

Today's debate on Government medicine proposal lasted 15 minutes. None of the remarks was made public.

Witness Assails New Wage Bill, Admits Profits

Va. Manufacturer Again Views With Alarm as Business Soars.

By Sidney Olson.

The man who told the Senate Finance Committee last year passage of the undistributed surplus profits tax law would wreck hundreds of businesses throughout the country appeared yesterday before the joint Congressional Labor committees to testify that passage of the Black-Connery wage bill would ruin hundreds of small corporations in the country.

Last year this man, E. H. Lane, of Alta Vista, Va., president of the Lane Co., furniture manufacturers, tangled verbally with Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, a member of the Finance Committee.

Yesterday Lane, whose firm specializes in streamlined cedar chests, found himself once more before Black, who is chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee. Black, urbane and polite, waited until Lane had completed his denunciation of the bill and had been questioned closely by Representative Reuben T. Wood (Democrat), of Missouri. Then, ever so gently, a disarming smile wreathed around the unlit cigar he was gnawing, Black began:

"What was your volume of business last year, Mr. Lane?"

Admits Gain in Business.

Lane admitted "about $3,000,000." Pressed, he recalled that the volume was $2,400,000 in 1936, and had increased proportionately from $1,200,000 in 1933.

He testified that while he had employed 330 workers in 1932, 800 men worked for him today.

In 1932 the company's standard work week was 55 hours. Today it is 40, Lane said, under the gentle prodding of the soft-spoken Alabaman. In 1932 the minimum wage level in Lane's company was 30.2 cents an hour; today it is 46 cents an hour, he admitted.

He makes a very good profit despite these conditions, he said.

Both Wood and Black went over this ground lightly to show that, in their view, Lane was wrong, by his own admissions, in his statements that the Administration's measures by keeping wages high tended to destroy business.

Saw No Statistics.

"You testified last year that the surplus tax would throw out the little fellows in business?" asked Black.

"Yes," said Lane.

"Have you seen any statistics on the mortality of small businesses since then?" Black continued.

"No," said Lane.

"You testify now that this bill would destroy small businesses?" asked Black.

"Yes, I do," said Lane.

"Thank you," said Black.

Lane, who asked Congress last year to go home and forget about writing a tax bill, and who said then he would be unable to build a new addition to his plant if the bill were enacted, admitted yesterday he had built the addition.

"We started building the addition right after November 3," he stated. "That was election day."

Roosevelt Against Amendment.

President Roosevelt yesterday expressed doubt of the advisability of amending the Black-Connery bill to exclude goods produced by monopolists, as suggested by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, on Monday. He said he was always a little suspicious of anything that made a bill more complicated or difficult of passage.

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, introduced in the Senate yesterday an amendment to the wage-hour measure which would eliminate the child labor provision of the bill, and then proposed a separate act to abolish child labor.

Black and Representative William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, stated in turn that retention of the child labor act might be held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Both also expressed opposition to the view expressed by one witness, Paul F. Brissenden, of the New York-New Jersey millinery manufacturing industry, that farm workers should be included under the bill.

Lane's View Not Shared.

Lane's view that "it is one thing for a bunch of college graduates who never had practical experience in business to write laws, and another thing for business management to live under them," was not shared by most witnesses appearing at yesterday's hearings.

Nearly all witnesses said they favored the bill, but nearly every one proposed changes in the measure. These included Fred M. Wylie, of the Wisconsin Trade Practices Commission; Howard A. Dawson, of the National Education Association; William H. Collins, of the Waltham Watch Co.; E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Nonpartisan League; John M. Keating, representing the millinery manufacturing industry, both employers and unions; Katharine F. Lenroot, Children's Bureau chief, Department of Labor; Lucy Randolph Mason, general secretary, National Consumers League; Mrs. Dorothy Kirchwey Brown, of Boston, director, National League of Women Voters; Courtenay Dinwiddie, general secretary, National child labor committee; Anne S. Davis, assistant chief, minimum wage division, Illinois State department of labor, and Donald Comer, Birmingham, Ala., cotton mill operator.

New Faces in Congress

Laboring Man Main Interest For Rep. Teigan, of Minnesota

REPRESENTATIVE HENRY G. TEIGAN.

Explains His Actions By His Feelings; Voted for Bryan, Smith; Turns to Scandinavia for Philosophy.

The outstanding interest of Henry George Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, is the working man and the farmer. But sometimes he catches a strain of music running through his mind, and that's because he once played solo cornet, when he wasn't doubling on the violin.

Now Teigan talks to you and while he talks he smokes incessantly. His talk pops and explodes like a hunter's gun in the great North Woods which he lives near, but never hunts in. You can quote him on anything he says—"I don't care who knows what I'm thinking and what I'm saying," he tells you.

And in the course of this sometimes explosive conversation he admits a great fondness for Heyward Broun and calls him a great man. He admits that he once voted for William Jennings Bryan, cast the vote in a Republican stronghold, and he says with tremendous feeling that Mooney and Billings are innocent and that they "were outrageously framed."

Thinking Began Early.

He runs the length of his feelings by way of explaining his actions. He voted for Al Smith in 1928 because he was angered at the attacks made on Smith "because of his religion." He thinks the disfranchisement of District of Columbia citizens "an indictment of Congress" and he would like to see something done about it. Also, he would like to see industry taken over by the men in the shops. And he is proud of the way that Scandinavian people "are proceeding to solve the problem through public ownership and co-operation."

He turned to the Scandinavian theme for a reason, and the reason is interwoven with the beginnings of his political philosophy. He was quite young when he began to think of politics—just 10 years old. His father and mother were Norwegian immigrants. He recalls that they were very poor. That set him to thinking. He wondered if something couldn't be done for poor people; he wondered if the way wasn't through politics.

But he never hewed too closely to political lines. His record of voting shows that. It was his feelings that made him first vote for Bryan, later for Al Smith, and in the interim for a number of Socialistic candidates. Now, he is strongly ensaddled with the Farmer-Labor group. When he asked them to send him to Congress, he made little promise, other than to abide by the party's platform, to represent farmers and working people and business people who perform "necessary functions." He said he could not represent everyone, because some people's philosophy is in conflict with the philosophy of those to whom he has dedicated himself. There is no compromise in his attitudes.

Teigan is the only member of either House to hold a Newspaper Guild card. Right now, he holds an honorable release card, because he gave up editing of the Minnesota Leader, organ of the Farmer-Labor Party, when he came to Congress. "Broun," he said, while puffing on his ninth cigarette, "is a great man." And then: "If the guild affiliates with the C. I. O. it will do so because it appreciates the life and militancy of the latter organization."

Teigan was born at Forest City, Iowa, on August 7, 1881; was graduated from Valparaiso (Ind.) University in 1908, with A. B. degree; was secretary of the National Non-Partisian League, 1916-23; was secretary to Senator Magnus Johnson, 1923-25, and was a State Senator, 1933-35. He won the race for Congress in a walk.

In off-moments — when politics and the strains of music aren't in his mind—he engages in the affairs of the Sons of Norway and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, and follows the ways of baseball.

Roosevelt Asks Power to Build Merchant Fleet

total about $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 each over the first two years.

In five years, Chairman Kennedy said, 90 per cent of the Merchant Marine will be 20 years old. The Merchant Marine act forbids operating subsidies for vessels beyond that age.

The commission now is engaged in adjusting the 42 ocean mail contracts into operating subsidies, a task that must be completed under the law by June 30. The chairman said yesterday he expected the work would be completed within the time limit.

Throught adjustment of the mail contracts, the commission is boosting the construction program by requiring that those who receive operating subsidies shall be prepared to join in the replacement program. The commission, Kennedy made clear, does not intend to continue subsidies on old ships whose operation will cost more each year. For this reason, the operating subsidies are being placed on a six-month basis, so the commission will not be committed to continue help in running the old ships if the owners do not begin replacing them.

The mail contracts have been costing the Government $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year. Kennedy said the operating subsidies to replace them will cost less than $30,000,000. This money will be taken from some $90,000,000 now available, not from the $160,000,000 asked yesterday.

American shipyards are adequate to care for the five-year building program, reporters were told. There are 67 ways capable of handling vessels of 3,000 tons or upward, with 37 reserve ways that would require some rehabilitation.

However, an obstacle may be encountered in the scarcity of trained shipyard workers. Kennedy pointed out that with shipbuilding practically suspended for 15 years, the supply of competent labor would not be large.

Terming the condition of the merchant marine "a mess," the chairman declared yesterday's action was a first step in obtaining a supply of modern ships adequate to the needs of the country in peace and in war.

"If the program is approved by Congress," he said, "we can get the country pretty good results."

The commission made public figures on the American merchant marine, showing a total of 1,444 ships, with a tonnage of 8,462,000. The Government-owned fleet includes 235 ships, the domestic fleet 487, tanker fleet 341 and the foreign trade fleet 381.

By 1942 the Government-owned fleet will be 10 per cent over age (20 years), the domestic fleet 91 per cent, tanker fleet 88 per cent and foreign trade fleet 85 per cent.

"These old and slow ships," the commission statement said, "are unable successfully to meet foreign competition, even with the most liberal subsidies. New and faster vessels would be more economical to operate, attract more and better-paying cargo, and require less aid from the Government. The Nation's prestige, defense, trade and income would all benefit from the new ships. We would have a prosperous as well as a competitive merchant marine in the foreign trade."

Towboat Crewmen Postpone Strike

New York, June 8 (AP).—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the American Marine Labor Council, announced tonight the postponement of a strike threatened among 8,000 workers on the city's harbor towboats.

Ryan said the postponement followed settlement of a jurisdictional dispute between two unions representing boatmen, and a subsequent conference with James Conway, chairman of the harbor arbitration board.

Roosevelt on Merchant Marine

Text of President Roosevelt's letter to Speaker Bankhead on the American merchant marine:

It is proposed to insert in the third deficiency appropriation bill an item of $10,000,000 to be added to the ship construction fund (revolving fund) established and made available to the United States Maritime Commission under the 1936 act. In addition the commission is to be authorized to enter into contracts for ship construction in an amount not to exceed $150,000,000.

The additional appropriation and authority to make commitments are essential for launching the long-delayed rehabilitation of our merchant marine.

Our national policy with reference to merchant marine is clearly set forth in Title I of the 1936 enactment:

"It is necessary for the national defense and development of its foreign and domestic commerce that the United States shall have a merchant marine (a) sufficient to carry its domestic water-borne commerce and a substantial portion of the water-borne export and import foreign commerce of the United States and to provide shipping service on all routes essential for maintaining the flow of such domestic and foreign water-borne commerce at all times; (b) capable of serving as a naval and military auxiliary in time of war or national emergency; (c) owned and operated under the United States flag by citizens of the United States in so far as may be practicable; and (d) composed of the best-equipped, safest and most suitable types of vessels, constructed in the United States and manned with a trained and efficient citizen personnel. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to foster the development and encourage the maintenance of such a merchant marine."

Over 85 per cent of the present American merchant marine will be obsolete in five years. In order to carry out our policy this country must build ships immediately.

To illustrate the problem in another way, except for oil tankers, there was not a single seagoing vessel of the passenger, combination or general cargo-carrying type under construction in an American shipyard in 1936 for either the domestic or the foreign trade, and for the fifteenth consecutive year not a single seagoing ship of the general cargo-carrying type has been built in an American shipyard for foreign trade. During that same period, only a few cargo vessels were built for domestic sea-going trade.

There is no sense in talking about an adequate or a first-class merchant marine in the face of such facts. For us an adequate merchant marine has to be a new merchant marine. The question comes—What are we going to do about it? The answer is build ships!—the best and most modern ships—and build them right away.

An orderly and economical program of replacement in American shipyards in accordance with the statute requires that the commission be given authority now to make commitments.

It is not our intention to expand our merchant marine to drive out the ships of other nations. However, we must have facilities adequate for the protection of the American shipper and for purposes of national defense. As I said on March 4, 1935, in my message to the Congress on this subject:

"Free competition among the nations in the building of modern shipping facilities is a manifestation of wholly desirable and wholesome national ambition. In such free competition the American people want us to be properly represented. The American people want to use American ships. Their Government owes it to them to make certain that such ships are in keeping with our national pride and national needs."

Spain Owns Ship, U. S. Court Rules

New York, June 7 (AP).—Setting aside a libel against the steamship Navemar obtained by its dispossessed owners, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today the vessel is "part of the territory" of the Spanish loyalist government.

This was the contention of the crew when it seized the Navemar in Argentina last October 10, depriving the captain of his command.

Operators of the ship, Marcelino Garcia and Manual Diaz, both of New York, whose libel action was upheld by a Brooklyn court after the ship arrived there, were recently named in Congress by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, as "spies" in the service of Gen. Francisco Franco, insurgent Spanish leader.

Nebraska May Acquire Utilities at 100 Million

Lincoln, Nebr., June 8 (AP).—Purchase of Nebraska's major private power facilities by the State's three PWA financed hydro-electric projects would cost $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, district directors estimated today.

The proposed sale would be financed by issuance of bonds which the public districts plan to retire from operating profits. When the Nebraska officials conferred in New York with Guy C. Myers, Wall Street financier who is conducting the negotiations, they predicted lower electrical rates would result.

Hugh Wilson May Get Sumner Welles' Post

By the United Press.

It was reported last night, without official confirmation, that Hugh Wilson, United States Minister to Switzerland since 1927, may be named Assistant Secretary of State, succeeding Sumner Welles, who recently was promoted to Undersecretary.

An official said the department soon will send the name of Welles' successor to the Senate for confirmation.

Markham Charges 'Economy' With Blocking Flood Control

Army Engineer Chief Expects Boost in Grants After 'Wave' Subsides; Says 125 Lives Were Menaced When U. S. Blasted Floodway.

By the Associated Press.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army engineers, predicted yesterday a substantial increase in Congressional flood control appropriations "after the economy wave."

He testified before the House Flood Control Committee on a proposed $800,000,000 reservoir and levee program for the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers and their tributaries.

"If flood control is good business for the Federal Government, to reduce the terrific damages caused by floods," Markham said, "appropriations will doubtless be very vastly speeded up after the economy wave."

He said that while the Federal Government's share of the proposed program would cost about $500,000,000, appropriations totaling only $52,000,000 had been recommended thus far.

Markham disclosed that the lives of at least 125 persons had been jeopardized by the dynamiting of a floodway at New Madrid, Mo., during last winter's floods.

Asserting the blasting had been delayed "as long as we dared" while fruitless efforts were made to evacuate all persons, Markham said:

"We actually blew that floodway when, to the best of our knowledge, 125 people still were in there."

He said the dynamiting was necessary to save Cairo, Ill.

Markham cited the incident as the major factor which had impelled him to recommend that in construction of future floodways, the Government acquire fee-simple title to the lands to be flooded.

President Cold To Fifty-Year Housing Plans

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt yesterday at his press conference turned thumbs down on any housing program that would obligate the Federal Government for 50 or 60 years to provide subsidies to make possible reduced rentals for the benefit of low-income groups.

Such a proposal is in the pending Wagner-Steagall housing bill. At the same time the President asserted he is hopeful conflicting viewpoints can be reconciled and a satisfactory compromise achieved. But in view of the attitude taken by the President at his press conference yesterday it was not clear what this compromise would be.

It was learned, however, that Senator Robert F. Wagner, sponsor of the pending housing legislation, would be willing to modify the scope of his program, without, however, changing the underlying principle. As his bill now stands it provides for a housing program of $1,000,000,000 to be financed by an issue of Treasury guaranteed bonds. This sum would be loaned over the next four years to public housing authorities established by States and municipalities.

In addition it is proposed that the Federal Government should pay an annual rental subsidy for a minimum of 40 years and a maximum of 60 years. It was this latter feature of the measure to which the President yesterday seemed to take exception and to which Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau also has objected.

May Reduce Program.

A solution for the impasse over the housing legislation may be a reduction of the extent of the program to $700,000,000 of construction over a three-year period, with the maximum period for the payement of subsidies to be set at 40 years. Under this compromise not more than $20,000,000 annually would be disbursed in subsidies.

The subject came up in the President's press conference when he was asked whether any solution for the housing program had been found. Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative.

He said that everyone was anxious to get a housing program started. He added the lesson had been learned, however, that it was not possible to clear slums, get a return of 100 percent on the money disbursed and still provide housing for the lowest income groups.

"Gift" Necessary.

As other nations had found, the President said, it also had been demonstrated in this country that in such a program some kind of gift must be made through a governmental agency—Federal, State or local. This gift, he said, might be of money, in an outright grant, in the form of labor or in the nature of tax remission.

On the average, he asserted, it appeared that a public gift of approximately 40 per cent of the capital outlay necessary for housing would be required if the projects are to benefit the low income groups for which they are designed.

There were two theories, he went on, as to the nature of this necessary gift. One theory was that originally proposed in the Wagner bill where an annual subsidy was provided, for a period up to about 60 years, obligating the Government to make disbursements in order to reduce the rental which the tenant must pay.

Under this method of approach to the problem, the President pointed out, more slums could be eliminated and more housing could be accomplished.

Favors Other Theory.

The second theory, he asserted, did not obligate the Government for long periods. This method, he said, contemplated a gift of 40 per cent of the capital outlay, thus permitting housing authorities to obtain private capital for the remaining 60 per cent. Under this plan, he explained, it is not possible to carry out as large a program as under the first approach. But, on the other hand, he said the Government did not obligate itself for a long period. He said efforts now were being made to reconcile these two theories.

The President was asked which plan he favored. He replied that he did not think the Government should be obligated for 50 or 60 years in advance—indeed, he added, he did not think his Administration had a right to place an obligation on the Federal Treasury for such a long period. But he said that if minor changes were made a solution might be found.

Bus-Truck Crash Kills 3, Injures 8

Burlington, Iowa, June 8 (U.P.).—Three persons were killed and eight others injured, one critically, late today when a passenger bus crashed into a truck on Highway No. 61 near Morning Sun, Iowa.

The accident occured on a long hill. According to a witness, one woman passenger in the bus saw the truck approaching on the wrong side of the road and screamed.

The driver tried to swerve out of the way of the oncoming vehicle, but the attempt was too late. The bus and truck were thrown into a ditch.

Will Support Crosby Bill for High Pensions as 'Essential.'

By the United Press.

Internal strife rocking the old-age pension movement founded by Dr. Francis E. Townsend spread to Congress last night when 20 members of the House, in secret session, voted to desert the Long Beach, Calif., physician and continue their drive under a new leader.

The new leader is said to be Arthur Johnson, who was head of the Townsend legislative committee until the wholesale resignation of Townsend aides here and in Chicago during the last week-end.

Townsend's former congressional supporters, it was understood, will divorce themselves completely from the parent organization and will throw their support behind a "general welfare" bill already introduced by Representative Charles N. Crosby (Democrat), Pennsylvania. The measure proposes to defend the large pensions to the aged as essential to the general welfare of the country and for recovery reasons.

Want 2 Per Cent Tax.

Costs of the penions would be defrayed by a 2 per cent tax on all business transactions. No estimate is available on the exact amount of money that would be needed to pay pensions of upward of $200 a month to all persons over the age of 60 but the figure is said by economists to run into billions of dollars.

Informed persons believed last night that there was little chance that the Crosby bill would be enacted at this session or at the next meeting of Congress and forecast that the revised pension organization probably would devote its efforts to increasing the old-age grants already provided for in the social security act.

"Recovery and general welfare is our new issue," Johnson said last night after the "rump" session of the former Townsendites. "The Supreme Court has pointed the way in its recent decisions. This is the only way to recovery, relief and to aid the unemployed.

"It will even solve our tax problems. Without the Townsend name, we will go places."

The split within the Townsend organization developed after the California physician took issue with President Roosevelt's measure to reorganize the United States Supreme Court. Townsend told his followers in Congress in a secret meeting last week that he would campaign to defeat them for reelection if they voted for the court plan.

Peru Accuses Ecuador Of Arming Border Area

Lima, Peru, June 8 (AP).—The Peruvian foreign office today accused Ecuador of moving military forces into a disputed area along the Peru-Ecuador border in an attempt to provoke frontier incidents.

An official announcement declared Peruvian troops had been ordered to maintain Peruvian sovereignty in the region.

Peru's charges, which were denied by Ecuadorean Minister Gonzalo Zaldumbide, asserted Ecuador had authorized an Indian chieftain to exercise authority in Peruvian territory.

Actress Had Premonition of Death, Friend Reveals; Doctor Denies Fear of Operation; Private Funeral to Be Held Today.

described today by Violet Denoyer, a makeup artist and friend of Miss Harlow.

Miss Denoyer said she was applying makeup to Miss Harlow's face at the time. The actress had been suffering from a deep-seated influenza infection, but was not seriously ill. For several weeks she had been working with Clark Gable in a picture. Suddenly, Miss Denoyer said, Miss Harlow looked at her and said:

"You know, Violet, I have a feeling I'm going away from here and never come back."

Two hours later while she was on the set, she turned to Robert Golden, a director, and gasped:

"I'm terribly sick, Red. Call Bill."

She referred to William Powell, suave film star who had been her constant escort for more than a year. Since Christmas she had worn a huge star sapphire ring on the third finger of her right hand. It was a gift from Powell.

He and a studio nurse took her home the day she became ill. Miss Harlow never returned.

Powell was with her when she died. When the end came he flung himself out of the hospital room, his hands over his face, sobbing, "Why did this have to be? I loved her. I loved her."

Nearby, Warner Baxter, another close movie colony friend of Miss Harlow and her mother, Mrs. Jean Bello, waited.

Mrs. Bello was under a physician's care today, suffering from shock, he said. Her former husband, Marino Bello, returned to her side, and her first husband, Dr. Montclair Carpenter, Kansas City dentist, flew to Hollywood. Dr. Carpenter is Jean's father.

Funeral to Be Private.

The same guarded seclusion that prevailed at the mortuary today will attend Miss Harlow's funeral tomorrow.

Services will be said at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, where Hollywood gathered to pay last respects to the memory of Will Rogers, Marie Dressler and many others. Funeral plans were not complete, but it was known that fewer than 200 friends would be asked to attend.

Police, mindful of disturbances that occurred at the funerals of other movie stars, planned careful restrictions. They will be reinforced by detachments from the State highway patrol and special studio deputies.

In the small mortuary room today, Miss Harlow lay as though in a deep sleep. Her face showed no trace of the ravages of her illness. A faint smile was frozen in the corners of her lips. Her heavy, luxuriant hair—a shade darker than the platinum blond hue that made her famous—fell in a rippling cascade around her shoulders.

She was in the "Tennyson Room."

Some time before morning the same studio hairdressers who made her coiffure for the screen will arrange her hair for the last time. Her mother asked it be placed in the form she wore in pictures. A gown of white, her favorite color, will clothe her body.

The bronze casket will be closed at the funeral tomorrow. It will not be sealed, however, attendants said. Except for her family and closest friends, no one will be allowed to see her face.

"Her mother wants everybody to remember her as she was in life," said attendants.

Christian Science services will be held, with Mrs. Genevieve Smith, reader and friend of Miss Harlow, officiating.

Pallbearers will be Edgar J. Mannix, film executive; Clark Gable, Hunt Stromberg, producer; Jack Conway, director; W. S. Van Dyke, director, and Ray June, cameraman.

Nelson Eddy will sing "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and Jeanette MacDonald will sing "Indian Love Call." They were favorite songs of Miss Harlow.

Honorary pallbearers will be: Louis B. Mayer, Ben Thaw, Sam Katz, Joseph M. Schenck, Robert Montgomery, Nelson Eddy, Spencer Tracy, Chico Marx, Harpo Marx, Groucho Marx, Warren William, Harry Rapf, Bernard Hyman, Laurence Weingarten, Norman Krasna, Joseph Mankiwicz, Jack Commings, John Considine, jr., John Emerson, J. Court Sustains Ban on Pupils Refusing Salute

Md. Judges Dismiss Plea to Reinstate Six of Religious Sect.

The Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday sustained the action of the Prince Georges County Board of Education in expelling the six children of August A. Ludke from the Oxon Hill Consolidated School because they refused to salute the American flag in classroom exercises.

In an order signed by Judges Joseph C. Mattingly and William M. Loker, the petition for a writ of mandamus filed by Ludke's attorneys to compel school officials to lift the ban against the children was dismissed. The court gave no reason for its decision except to state the grounds for the writ were "insufficient." It is understood, however, that an opinion is being prepared by Chief Judge Walter Mitchell, who is ill at a Baltimore hospital.

The children, members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, were refused admission to classes last September when they persistently declined to salute the flag because they believed it constituted a violation of the biblical tenet, "Thou shalt not place false gods before me."

The children are Ruth, 14; Frances, 13; Frederick, 12; Anna Louise, 10; Walter, 9, and Esther, 7. Since their expulsion their parents have set up a classroom in their home at Oxon Hill, where daily instruction is given.

A. F. of L. Workers Win Heinz Fight

Pittsburgh, June 8 (U.P.).—The Canning and Pickle Workers Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, tonight defeated the Heinz Employes Association, an independent union, in a labor board election to determine who shall represent 2,000 employes of the H. J. Heinz Co. in collective bargaining.

The vote, as announced by Ernest C. Dunbar, active regional director of the National Labor Relations board, was: Canning and Pickle Workers Union, 1,079; Heinz Employes Association, 803.

Degrees Given Graduates of Southeastern

123 Students Hear Rep. McCormack Speak at Exercises.

With Representative John McCormack, of Massachusetts, delivering the commencement address, 123 Southeastern University graduates were awarded certificates and academic degrees at exercises last night in Memorial Continental Hall.

Coincident with the graduation was the award of honors to students with high scholastic records. The award for the highest standing in the school of law was given to Raymond G. Dunne. W. J. Burns received the second-place award.

In the school of accountancy Anna Louise Price was honored with the award for highest place, and Harold W. Savage with that for second place.

Sara A. Hulcher, for maintaining the highest average of any woman in the school for her 3-year law course, was given an award by the Kappa Phi legal sorority.

Representative McCormack was introduced by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, who is a member of the university's accountancy faculty.

Representative McCormack, addressing the graduates, declared it was the responsibility of educated men to lead the Nation over the obstacles that threaten our democracy.

"Our Nation is passing through a crisis," he said. "The advance of science and technology is pressing against our laws and customs. Under the pressure of new inventions and processes we are faced with new problems. Our job is to solve the problems.

"This country needs men of learning and culture to settle the stupendous and far-reaching problems, or it must stumble through the very chaos of blind experiment. It needs lawyers and business men who can think in the terms of society itself, mediate between interests, establish equity and peace that will come with genuine and hearty co-operation."

Amelia Earhart's Plane Tuned Up For Sudan Flight

Dakar, French Senegal, June 8 (AP). Blonde Amelia Earhart tuned her twin-motored monoplane today for a hop across Africa as the next leg on her "Just for fun" flight around the world.

The slim American flier, who yesterday flew the South Atlantic from Natal, Brazil, to St. Louis, Senegal, made leisurely plans for her next jump.

She indicated she would take off tomorrow following the British air route to Khartoum, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. By this route she planned to avoid flying over the Sahara Desert.

Miss Earhart, accompanied by Capt. Fred Noonan, her navigator, made the 1,900-mile Atlantic crossing in 13 hours 22 minutes, which aviators here said set a new mark for the eastward journey.

Rotary Chiefs Make Plea for World Peace

French, German Children to Exchange Visits, Culture.

By the Associated Press.

Nice, France, June 8.—Exchange visits between thousands of German and French children this summer to promote international understandings were announced today at the twentieth annual convention of Rotary International.

Will R. Manier, of Nashville, Tenn., told the delegates that French and German Rotarians had agreed to take visiting children from the other nation into their homes.

"Through Rotary," Manier declared, "France and Germany which have profited by one another's culture may help in establishing international peace."

During a "battle of flowers" spectacle arranged for the convention a woman was killed and 12 persons were hurt when a horse plunged into a crowd.

Pledges of "peace and friendship" were exchanged by Maurice Duperry, president of French Rotary, and Franz Schneidermann, governor of German-speaking Rotary clubs.

Manier presided at a luncheon meeting attended by the international representatives as well as the American Rotary committee heads.

Also present were Paul Harris, of Chicago, founder of Rotary, Ed R. Johnson, chairman of the convention committee, and O. B. Sellers, Fort Worth Tex., third vice president of the international organization.

At the morning session, H. Roe Bartle, president of the Kansas City, Mo., club, appealed for "continuous service" to make Rotary effective.

The movement's work for crippled children was called "the brightest page in the history of Rotary" by Paul H. King, of Detroit.

Senate Gets Bill To Nationalize Arms Making

To Monopolize Producing, Not Materials, Bone Explains.

By the Associated Press.

A bill to nationalize the manufacture of war supplies reached the Senate floor yesterday backed by five Senators, four of whom were members of the famed munitions investigating committee.

Senators Bone (Democrat), of Washington; Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, and Nye and Frazier, both North Dakota Republicans, offered the measure "to round out a program to take the private profit out of war and preparations for war."

Senator Bone said the new bill would give the Government "a monopoly of the function of manufacturing" war materials, but does not call for Government ownership of the sources of raw materials.

"The extortionate profits exacted from this Government by private industry during the World War is an indictment of private control of this vital function of national defense," he said.

"The proposed bill would * * * reduce cost * * * while strengthening the defense establishment."

Bone said studies by the munitions committee had convinced many of its members that the Government could expand its navy yards to handle all contemplated naval construction for "little more than the price of one modern cruiser."

The bill would authorize the War Department to construct, or purchase, facilities for the manufacture of needed propellants and explosives, shells and projectiles, artillery, gases, rifles, machine guns and small arms and ammunition for them.

It would authorize the Navy to expand, through purchase, or construction, its navy yards, armor plate plants, naval arsenals, naval gun factories and ship-building plants sufficiently to handle all naval construction and repair work, except that already under contract.

Burke Is Installed By Dental Society

Dr. John P. Burke was installed as president of the District of Columbia Dental Society last night at the organization's annual meeting in the Public Health Building.

Dr. James W. Brown was elected president for 1938, to take office a year from now. Dr. Harry Kaplan was elected vice president, taking office immediately. Five members of the executive committee also were elected: Dr. Marion Falls, David Fitzgibbon, Walter Bernhard, R. G. Lamb and George Clendenin. All terms are for one year.

The society also nominated four candidates for the one vacancy on the District Board of Dental Examiners: Drs. Manly Michaels, Harold Hertford, David Gates and R. Bain. The appointee will serve a five-year term.

Police All Pass Physical Tests; To Stay on Force

Every member of the police force over the retirement age of 55, for the first time in several years, has passed the required physical examination, it was announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent.

"This is the first year that every man required to be examined annually by the board of doctors has come through," said Maj. Brown, who passed the examination himself. "There are three classes into which the board divides the men," he continued. "Class A, perfect; class B, normal; and class C, referred to the board for retirement.

"Not one of our men fell into class C. This means that there will be no retirements this year for disabilities found in the strict physical examinations.

Escaped Maniac Killed In Fight With Officer

Millbury, Mass. (Wednesday), June 9 (AP).—A gunfight between a policeman and Homer Robbins, 31-year-old escaped maniac, ended in death for Robbins early today in an abandoned cellar hole in Sycamore street.

The policeman, Elliott Harris, was shot in the leg.

Robbins' death came 12 hours after his 60-year-old mother, Mrs. P. Orrin Putnam, went alone into rainswept woods in nearby Sutton, pleading, by shouts, for him to surrender. He was sought since Sunday night when he shot at a State trooper who had attempted to return him to Worcester State Hospital, from which he had fled.

Secret Report Holds Jordon's Hopes for Life

Commutation Predicted as Pardon Attorney Makes Recommendation.

The fate of Thomas Jordon, sentenced to die Monday for the Garden T Shoppe murder of Mrs. Lizzie S. Jaynes, was sealed last night in a confidential report on the desk of Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Although believed to contain favorable recommendations from Federal Pardon Attorney Daniel M. Lyons, the report was not made public and Attorney General Cummings refused to comment on his next move.

Lyons' confidential report resulted from a lengthy investigation of purported new evidence in the Jordon case. Unofficial predictions held that Jordon's death sentence would be commuted to life imprisonment.

Pending final action by President Roosevelt, however, Department of Justice officials would not discuss the convicted slayer's chances of escaping the electric chair. A formal report to the White House is expected the end of this week.

It was further predicted yesterday that Lyons' recommendation will at least result in a new stay of execution for Jordon. He has already received six postponements.

Important new evidences uncovered in Jordon's behalf was a police "incidental" describing Mrs. Jaynes' slayer as one of two men "six feet tall." Jordon is 5 feet 6¼ inches in height.

Meanwhile, Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the District Jail, reported last night that Jordon had adopted an apparent attitude of "watchful waiting" in his cell along dingy "death row."

Briton, Yoshida Talk of Peace Pact

London, June 8 (AP).—The proposal of Joseph A. Lyons, Premier of Australia, for a peace pact of all nations bordering on the Pacific was discussed in a half-hour meeting of Lyons and Shigeru Yoshida, the Japanese Ambassador to London.

The talk was considered significant as the first discussion of a possible Pacific understanding between a representative of Japan and a high official of the British Empire. Diplomatic authorities, however, emphasized the meeting had no official importance.

J. R. Edwards Named Pastor Of Union M. E.

Conference Gives D. C. Charge to Former Superintendent.

Dr. John R. Edwards, who was for eight years superintendent of the Washington district of the Baltimore Methodist Episcopal Conference, will return to Washington to be pastor of Union M. E. Church, it was announced yesterday following closing sessions of this year's conference in Baltimore.

Dr. Edwards left the superintendency here to become secretary of the board of foreign missions in New York. He declined re-election to that post last year and went to Illinois to be superintendent of the conference in that State. Desiring to return to the Capital, he asked for a pastorate, and was assigned to the Union Church.

Other Changes.

In other Washington changes the Rev. John E. Forat, pastor of Union Church, was transferred to the Anacostia M. E. Church, and the Rev. T. S. Davis, pastor there, was changed to the Caroline Street Church in Baltimore.

The Rev. E. A. Ross, pastor of Gorsuch Memorial M. E. Church, asked for leave to permit him to begin studies next fall at Oxford and Cambridge, England. He will be succeeded at Gorsuch in August by the Rev. W. S. Chism, who comes here from Baltimore.

Next year's conference will be held in Hagerstown, Md.

U. S. Agent Wounds Sheriff in Mix-Up

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury reported yesterday one of its revenue agents shot Frank White, Marked Tree, Ark., deputy sheriff, after White had fired on the agent "by mistake."

The shooting occurred when revenue agents raided a still which previously had been seized by county authorities.

Reporting on the incident to Dwight Avis, assistant deputy commissioner of internal revenue, W. G. Malsie, in charge of alcohol enforcement work for the Kansas City area, telegraphed:

"Investigator James R. Jones was fired on by Deputy Frank White by mistake in deep underbrush while closing in on an illicit distillery.

"Jones returned fire and White was shot in the shoulder.

"Special Treasury agents are en route to the scene to make a complete investigation."

Fee Enforcement Asked.

Winchester, Va., June 8.—Strict enforcement of an ordinance which calls for a license fee of $1,000 from carnivals and similar shows is to be asked of City Council by the Winchester Ministerial Association, it was announced today.

Physicians Reveal Simple Pain Often Is Symptom of Syphilis

Kink in Big Toe, Mental Bewilderment May Be Signs of Disease; Patients Frequently Complain of Other Minor Disorders.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, June 8.—Five leading physicians said today a pain in the neck, a kink in a big toe or mental bewilderment may be a sign of syphilis.

In a special symposium before the American Medical Association, the group, headed by Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, brought together for the first time the newest information on the spread of syphilis and the war under way to check it.

Dr. A. Benson Cannon, of New York, declared he had discovered that a large number of patients found to have syphilis complained they had one or several of the common ailments, such as intestinal disorders, colds, nervous disorders, anemia, arthritis, asthma, diabetes, hernia and goiter.

In addition, he added, the early stage of syphilis which attacks the central nervous system may be ignored because a person only seems awkward, stupid or temperamental. No case of illness should be treated, Dr. Cannon declared, until a Wasserman test for syphilis has been performed.

Dr. Parran agree fully and added that more than 10 per cent of all deaths from heart disease are the direct result of attacks on the heart by the syphilis germ.

More than a half million new cases demanding medical aid arise each year, the surgeon general declared, and "when we look for syphilis we find at least one hidden case for each one previously recognized."

Dr. Paul A. O'Leary, of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., declared he had found the old fever treatment for syphilis in which the patient is given an intentional case of malaria, to be just as effective as the new artificial fever treatment in a "hot-box." In either treatment the use of drugs must be continued, he added.

Birth Control Wins Backing Of Physicians

A. M. A. to Study Federal Medical Assistance for Poor.

rick, of New York; E. F. Cody, M. D., New Bedford, Mass.; E. H. Cary, M. D., of Dallas, Tex.; J. H. Cannon, M. D., of Charleston, S. C., and John H. Fitzgibbon, M. D., of Portland, Oreg.

Traditionally Turned Down.

Birth control has been traditionally turned down by the American Medical Association for many years. The controversy came actively into debate four years ago. This led to appointment of an investigating committee two years ago.

The committee reported today the following recommendations, which were unanimously adopted:

"That the association undertake investigation of materials, devices and methods recommended or employed for the prevention of conception, with a view to determining physiologic, chemical and biologic properties and effects, and that the results of such investigations be published for the information of the medical profession."

Study of Fertility, Sterility.

"That the council on medical education and hospitals of the American Medical Association be requested to promote through instruction in our medical schools knowledge with respect to the various factors pertaining to fertility and sterility, due attention being paid to their positive as well as negative aspects."

To this was added a proviso that information and advice about contraceptives be given in legally licensed clinics under medical control.

The report declared that medical complications have been observed from ill-advised contraceptive practices "resorted to by women on their own initiative and without medical advice."

Spacing of Pregnacies.

The report recognized that voluntary spacing of pregnancies may be desirable for health of mothers and children.

"This," the committee continued, "raises the question of how many pregnancies are biologically desirable and physically safe, and of the best practical means for determining the proper interval between them. No arbitrary interval can be stated.

"Each case must be determined by the individual judgments of parents and physicians, based on the conditions present."

Thomas Assails Wallace Stand For 'Deflation'

O'Neal Urges Monetary Authority to Senate Agriculture Unit.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, said yesterday the Senate Agriculture Committee "hoped to halt" the "deflationary propaganda of Secretary Wallace and other Administration officials" by its current program of hearings.

"Some of the members," he said, "have been trying for 60 days to get farm leaders here to testify—not so much in the interest of new legislation as to counteract an official attitude that farm prices are high enough."

Thomas, advocate of cheaper money, made the statement after the executive committee of the powerful American Farm Bureau Federation had thrown its support to the Oklahoman's bill to set up a Federal monetary authority.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, leaving a White House conference at noon, said it was "pretty late" in the Congressional session for general farm legislation.

"But our committee will proceed to study the matter," he said. "It might be that we can agree on a measure before adjournment."

Democratic leaders have put only the Administration's farm tenancy bill on a preferred list.

Farm Bureau leaders turned their attention to the agricultural price structure when it became apparent, they said privately, that there was little hope this year for their proposed "agricultural adjustment act of 1937" to regulate production.

"The time has come," President Edward A. O'Neal told the Senate Agriculture Committee, "when Congress should exercise its constitutional obligation to regulate the value of money on an index of basic commodity prices * * *.

"Congress should establish as soon as possible a monetary authority and invest in it ample power, including the repricing of gold and regulating the gold content of the dollar. * * *."

U.S. Newspaper Guild Decides To Join C. I. O.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 8.—The American Newspaper Guild, now a member of the American Federation of Labor, voted today at its fourth annual convention, 118½ to 18½, to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The resolution did not of itself withdraw the guild from the A. F. of L., but there was no doubt the federation, in pursuance of its established policy of opposition to industrial unionism, would suspend the guild from membership, as it had other unions affiliated with the C. I. O.

Vote on the resolution came after three hours of vigorous debate on the issues raised in two amendments proposed by Robert M. Buck, of the Washington, D. C., Guild.

His proposal that the convention consider C. I. O. affiliation and admission of office workers as two separate subjects was defeated, 91½ to 49½.

House Committee Urges Completion Of Florida Canal

By the Associated Press.

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee described the Florida ship canal yesterday as a project "of unusual merit" and recommended that Congress authorize its completion.

The report, submitted to the House by Chairman Mansfield (Democrat) Texas, vigorously defended the cross-State waterway against the attacks of railroads and other opponents. It declared the canal's benefits would "accrue to a larger portion of our country and its population than those of almost any other Federal public work."

Six Republicans and three Democrats objected to the project in statements attached to the majority report.

The Republican minority said the Nation's financial condition would not permit the large expenditure at this time, while the dissenting Democrats declared there was not sufficient justification, either from an engineering or economic viewpoint, for undertaking the work.

The committee voted May 21 to recommend completion of the waterway, and instructed Chairman Mansfield to prepare a report setting out the majority views.

Senate Groups Fight to Study New Power Bill

Copeland Denies Norris' Charge of Private Firms' Interest.

A battle between two Senate committees for control of the Administration's new power planning bill yesterday brought a warm verbal bout in the Senate and a charge of private power company interest in the fight.

The bill has been referred to the Senate Agriculture Committee, but the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday directed its chairman, Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, to seek control of the measure.

Copeland was explaining his committee's position when Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, rose to champion Agriculture Committee jurisdiction.

"It is not a question of navigation, although that is the Constitutional peg on which the legislation hangs," said Norris. "It is not going to be a question of flood control, although that is a Constitutional privilege."

Then Norris charged that "the enemies of the bill are fighting it for another reason—because it has power in it, and the private power companies of this country are going to try to send it to the Committee on Commerce or any committee to get it away from a committee which has studied the subject for 20 years, and has had hearings on it, and has favorably reported bills which have not suited the private power companies."

Copeland bluntly interjected that "I do not like the implication of the words of the Senator from Nebraska about the power companies. I have not been approached by any power company. * * * The main problem of the bill as I see it is flood control and river control."

The exchange became heated, as Norris shot back:

"The Senator said that he knows nothing about power. Well, for God's sake, why not refer this bill that has power features in it to a committee that does know something about power?"

Copeland Again Denies.

Copeland hotly denied he had made such a statement.

"My reply to the Senator related to the possible influence of power companies," said Copeland. "We are just as competent in the Committee on Commerce to deal with power in connection with river and flood control progress as are the members of any other committee of the Senate, and I think it is quite unfair for the Senator repeatedly to make implications which reflect upon the Committee on Commerce and its chairman."

Norris said he would "take that all back" if "the Senator does know something about power," and continued:

"There is no insinuation against the Senator or his committee or anybody else. I do not object to the private power companies trying to get an advantage if they think they can get one. They know what to expect from the Agriculture Committee, but they do not know what they will get from some other committee, and they would rather jump into the dark and take a chance than to run up against a certainty as to what they may expect from a committee that has given the subject attention."

Here Copeland persisted: "Does the Senator think for one moment it was because of the influence of the power companies and the utilities that this protest has been entered here?"

Cites "Implication."

"I do not know who makes the protest or where it originates," replied Norris. "Here is a committee that the power companies know nothing about and here is another one with which they have had experience. They do not like it and they would rather get away from it."

"And on that account they have influenced us to take this position?" Copeland asked. "That is the natural implication of the Senator's words—that we are trying to get possession of this bill in order that we may serve the power companies."

Norris insisted there could be no such implication.

Copeland's position was supported by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, who served notice he later would make a motion to reassign the bill to the Commerce Committee.

Copeland announced that Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, also had given notice of intention to ask for the discharge of the Agriculture Committee, and that "Senator Clark, who is absent, desires to press this matter."

U. S., Poland Act To Enlarge Trade

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Officials of Poland and the United States today began exploratory work on a reciprocal trade pact to enlarge the commerce between the two countries.

Preliminary conversations started when Polish vice minister of commerce, Mieczyslas Sokolowski, called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull. He conferred also with others in the department and later will visit Department of Commerce officials.

The talks envisage a pact similar to those the United States has recently concluded with 16 other countries, for lowering of import duties, enlargement of quotas where found in other countries, or stabilization of tariff rates.

Negotiations for such a pact with Poland have come later than those with other countries, not because of an absence of desire to co-operate with Poland, but because the similarity of Poland's major exports to goods produced in the United States made such a pact difficult, officials indicated.

Cummings Hurries Aluminum Co. Case

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings has acted to break a deadlock in the Government's anti-trust suit against the Aluminum Co. of America by issuing a certificate designed to remove the aluminum case from Pittsburgh, Pa., to a special three-judge court at Philadelphia.

Last month Federal Judge Robert M. Gibson issued an order at Pittsburgh restraining the Government from prosecuting the case anywhere outside western Pennsylvania.

At first Cummings said this "stalled" the Government, but today he said he had mailed an "expediting certificate" to clerk of the Federal District Court at Pittsburgh.

In an accompanying statement, the Attorney General asserted he did not propose to play "judicial chess" with "the Nation's number one monopoly."

4 Colonels Named For General's Rank

Four colonels in the Regular Army were nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt. The nominations were sent to the Senate for confirmation.

The nominees are Col. Ernest D. Peek, Corps of Engineers; Col. Frederick H. Smith, Coast Artillery Corps; Col. Philip B. Peyton, Infantry, and Col. William Bryden, Field Artillery.

All four of the prospective brigadier generals are well known in the service and have long and distinguished military records.

Buffalo Sex Murder Confession Introduced

Buffalo, N. Y., June 8 (AP).—New York State introduced in court today a 22-page document purporting to be the confesssion of Tommy Smith, 19, on trial for his life in the pocketknife murder of 17-year-old Mary Ellen Babcock.

Senator Black Says Wage Bill Aids State Law

Forecasts Supplementary Action in Answer to Vandenberg.

Enactment of the Black-Connery wages and hours bill will enable the States to adopt supplementary legislation bringing benefits of the measure to additional millions of workers, according to Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, veteran battler for such legislation.

The bulk of Black's speech Monday was an answer to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who assailed the bill as a "straitjacket" on employers and urged action be postponed until "matured recommendations" can be made.

To this Black said:

"The critical Senator says that the prompt consideration of a well-worked-out legislative proposal on a subject which has commanded the attention and thought of statesmen and economists for years would be 'a travesty upon prudence.' On the contrary, I should think the 'travesty on prudence' would be to abandon the 1936 Democratic campaign pledge and adopt the 1936 Republican promise to do nothing."

Black, in his radio address, also outlined benefits of the measure, defined its difference from NRA, called it "a large part of the answer" to the unemployment problem, and concluded:

"We have waited too long for it already—at what cost in dollars and cents as well as in flesh and blood no one will ever know.

"Now we are through waiting. The Democratic Party has promised the country this kind of legislation. The President has pledged it. The mandate of the election has ordered it.

"And at long last the American people are going to have it."

Corporation Code Bill Is Received by Senate

A revised bill aiming to bring up to date the District code relative to corporations was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas.

A similar bill was introduced by Senator Sheppard earlier this session and is now before the Senate District Committee.

Two rebel warships, believed to have been the Baleares and Canarias, appeared off the east coast city at Palamas and bombarded it for a half hour with 63 high-power shells.

There were no victims of the Palamas bombardment, the United Press correspondent at Barcelona reported, and damage was slight.

Cuban Consulate Hit.

The rebel bombardment of Madrid heralded the opening of the eighth minth of the rebel siege of the city and began during the night when eight-inch shells, crashing at the rate of two a minute, roused Madrilenos from their beds.

Frontier dispatches said the Palace of Justices was badly damaged, and that the litter of wreckage prohibited traffic in streets around the once gay Puerta del Sol.

The Cuban consulate in the so-called "neutral zone" also was damaged.

Loyalist Advance Claimed.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 8.—A 3-mile advance along the Asturian front west of Bilbao was announced tonight by a government communique while heavy rain paralyzed operations around the Basque regional capital.

Government reports said that defense troops pushed into the village of Rivota and rolled their guns into positions dominating another village in that sector, Oceja de Sajambres.

Bilbao dispatches declared the feverish Basque defense, coupled with rain, apparently had halted the insurgent besiegers almost ringing the city.

A French steamer, laden with food supplies donated by French Communists, sailed up the River Nervion to Bilbao after being protected to the 3-mile limit by French warships.

Spy Ring Discovered.

Madrid, June 8 (AP).—Police officials of besieged Madrid tonight said they had discovered a spy network and propaganda system which they charged spread Fascist propaganda throughout Spain even before the civil war broke out almost a year ago.

Madrid authorities raided the apartment of a former German resident who is now in Paris and declared the seized documents revealing pre-war activities of the ring.

Correspondence found in the apartment indicated the network was extensive, police said, adding that they found quantities of Nazi propaganda in both German and Spanish.

"It appears that German authorities were not unaware of these activities—particularly the diplomatic representatives and consular agents of that country," officials charged.

Two Spaniards were seized in the raid and placed under arrest. One carried a letter of introduction from the late Jose Primo de Rivera, former Fascist leader, to a "German chief."

Rebel Port Shelled.

Gibraltar, June 9 (Wednesday) (AP).—Two warships navigating without lights bombarded Ceuta, Spanish insurgent post in Spanish Morocco, early today.

Shore batteries, both at Ceuta and Carnero Point, which is on the European side of the Strait of Gibraltar, blazed away at the raiders as searchlights picked them out.

The attacking vessels fired more than 20 rounds at Ceuta. They could not be identified but it was taken for granted they were Spanish government warships.

Stronger Fleet Proposed.

Paris, June 8 (AP).—France proposed strengthening of the Spanish neutrality control fleet today as a measure to gain Italo-German cooperation in re-establishment of the internation non-intervention patrol.

The French proposal was contained in a note replying to a British request for suggestions on how to bring Italy and Germany back into the non-intervention fold. Unification of the four-power fleet, with co-operation among the participating nations and neutral observers aboard the warships, were recommended.

Authoritative diplomatic sources declared that France and England remained strictly opposed to Italo-German threats to resume freedom of individual action in case of another incident similar to the bombing of the German pocket battleship Deutschland.

Optimism prevailed in official quarters that Germany and Italy would resume their places, perhaps this week.

speech in some Catholic churches today.

Nevertheless, it seemed likely that Goebbels' address charging widespread immorality among German Catholic clerics had heralded a fight to the end.

"The conflict between Dr. Goebbels and the Cardinal Archbishop of Chicago, Mundelein, is not a duel between two men, each of whom is truly representative of his circle," wrote the Lakalanzeiger the morning after Goebbels' address.

"It is a conflict between two systems of philosophy."

It is interesting to observe that the two men who personally were criticized by Cardinal Mundelein were reared as Catholics—Hitler and Dr. Goebbels.

The conflict between the Vatican and Nazidom has come to a head with a rapidity that has caused universal surprise here.

During the first years of Hitler's regime attention had been directed toward organization of the Protestant Evangelical Church, while Catholics quietly won a concordat safeguarding rights of the church in 1933.

There was disagreement on interpretation of the concordat, however, especially as it concerned the bringing up of youth—a right reserved by the Nazis insofar as political and physical education were concerned.

There were brief flareups in 1935, when a number of monks and nuns were tried for smuggling church funds out of the country in violation of foreign exchange laws.

A year later, in May, 1936, the first trials of Franciscan lay brothers for sexual offenses were held.

Open Breach in March.

But an open breach came really with Pope Pius' encyclical in March of this year, read from German pulpits and denouncing national socialism as unchristian.

The document was delivered secretly. The Vatican outwitted Berlin and even the secret police were caught napping.

The press was roused to undestrained denunciation of the Catholic clergy. The courts resumed the morality trials.

Then came Cardinal Mundelein's speech calling Hitler a "paperhanger, and a poor one at that," and referring to Dr. Goebbels as the "crooked propaganda minister."

The German government asked that Pope Pius censure the cardinal. The Vatican took no action. Whereupon, Germany advised the seat of church government conditions for normal diplomatic relations between Berlin and Rome no longer existed. Some thought this to be the first step forward formal severance of relations with the Vatican.

Spanish Envoy, Departing Today, Visits Roosevelt

On the eve of his departure for Valencia, war-time Spanish capital, Ambassador Don Fernando de los Rios paid a short visit yesterday to the White House to take leave of the President.

The Spanish envoy denied there was any discussion of the 11-month-old civil strife.

De los Rios will sail from New York today for France. From Paris he will fly direct to the temporary seat of the Spanish government. Asked if he will have a military air escort for the hazardous journey, he smiled and said "I don't know."

The governmental conference in Valencia which the ambassador has been summoned to attend will be held June 15. He said he hopes to return to Washington by the end of July. In his absence Senor Enrique de la Casa will be charge d'affaires.

Hitler Wrecked Christian Ideal, U. S. Cleric Says

Nazi Chief Assailed in Letter Supplementing Church Study.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 8.—Dr. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary emeritus of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, advised Chancellor Adolf Hitler in a letter made public here tonight that "whatever you may have done for the economic life of Germany, you have wrecked its Christian ideals."

Dr. MacFarland, who made a study of the religious situation in Germany four years ago with the approval of the Third Reich, emphasized his letter was written in a personal capacity, as well as in a spirit of friendliness.

He recalled that the Reichsfuehrer on January 30, 1933, "begged to be given 'four years'" time before people should judge."

"I have waited those four years," he said, "and what is the judgment? * * *

"You are isolating Germany from the rest of humanity, while, by persecution and exile, you are contributing to other peoples many of Germany's finest minds and spirits."

Supplement to Study.

Asserting his letter was in the nature of a supplement to the study he published in 1934, Dr. MacFarland continued:

"As the conclusion of my study, I can only say that you have, by consenting or approving, permitted the desecration of ideals of honor, integrity, truth and humanity associated with the Germany of my student days; that you are forfeiting the respect of the civilized world and that you are leading your adopted nation to an abyss, for you cannot build an enduring nation upon force and hate."

Dr. MacFarland, who since his student days there has revisited Germany almost annually, often to lecture at the University of Berlin, declared Hitler had "violated every assurance" which he made at a conference with the churchman in 1933.

"* * * You have seized control over the church, arrested multitudes of its pastors, confined many of them, and permitted not a few to be assaulted without open rebuke of their attackers," he said.

Church Split 3 Ways.

"Instead of uniting the church you have divided it between those who comply, those who are neutral, and those who courageously oppose your domination.

"Instead of regarding the 'confession' of the church as sacred ground, you have endeavored to crush out its basic doctrine of the universal fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of mankind.

"Instead of doing justice to the Jews, you have permitted them to be harassed and despoiled."

Co-incident with the release of the letter, already delivered, the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches isued a statement saying events in Germany were of importance to Christians the world over.

The German government's refusal to permit delegates from the Reich to attend the forthcoming world conference on church, state and society at Oxford, England, coupled with other events, the statement said, leaves no doubt "as to the hostility of the present government to the life, the teaching, and the influence of the Christian church."

Bans Women on Juries.

Springfield, Ill., June 8 (AP).—The State Senate today refused to align Illinois with the 23 States permitting women to serve on juries. The Senators voted, 21 to 19, against adoption of legislation that would enable women to sit as jurors.

British Reaction to Edward After Coronation Is 'He Let Us Down.'

Windsor is wise it will be many years before he will even think of revisiting his native land.

But the reaction against the Duke, and the women who will be a duchess by the time this report is printed, has taken a constructive form. The English virtue of turning disaster into triumph was never more apparent than in the evident national will to find a useful moral in the shattering episode of Mrs. Simpson. And the form taken by this universal desire is a repudiation of the jazz psychology which Edward VIII was perhaps unjustly held to personify, and to which conscientious George VI and his homely, healthy Scotch Queen are antipodean.

MORE THAN A KING EXILED BY BALDWIN.

More than a King was exiled from England by "good old Stanley Baldwin," whose retirement from the premiership last week was marked by an outpouring of esteem second only to that accorded the newly crowned monarch. Together with the Duke of Windsor the whole neurotic, indifferent post-war attitude has been ostracized.

It is no longer fashionable in England to be blase, cynical, arrogant or smart. The solid bourgeois virtues are in the ascendant, a development with very real implications for the political and commercial future of the nation. The final downfall of the decadent Stuart monarchy was followed by a world-wide flowering of British enterprise. Future history may trace somewhat the same results to the abdication of Edward VIII.

One inclines to the prediction because of the obvious relationship between the coronation and the very important Imperial Conference, now holding its sessions in London. The scope of this conference, and its vital bearing upon future Anglo-American relations, will be examined in other articles. Here it is sufficient to point out the orientation given to the inter-empire negotiations by the abdication and its aftermath.

WEAKENED CROWN WEAKENS EMPIRE.

It is generally understood that the crown is the symbol of union between Great Britain and the great self-governing Dominions which compose the bulk and much of the strength of the empire. It follows that if the crown should be discredited there would be a serious weakening of the ties which hold together the British Commonwealth of Nations, and an impetus to the centrifugal forces always operating on such a loose-knit and far-flung political combine.

The events which culminated in the abdication had exactly that effect. It was apparent to the most superficial observer in the prompt advantage of the situation taken by the Irish Free State, and to a lesser extent by the nationalist movements in both South Africa and India. But on the more British dominions the influence of the whole affair has also been pronounced. When Canadians discuss it, for instance, they pass naturally to an emphasis on the non-British character of a majority of Canada's population, and to the fact that over 40 per cent of this population is Roman Catholic, as against 6 per cent in Great Britian.

Confronted with the disintegrating tendencies supplied by the abdication the Baldwin government acted vigorously. The coronation of George VI was made a bigger and more pretentious show than had been intended in the case of Edward.

Both the ritual and the traditions involved were subtly emphasized to carry the idea of British stability and permanence in a chaotic world. Particular attention was paid to broadcasting every detail of the ceremony throughout the empire. Very successfully the government concentrated its energies on a tremendous demonstration of the continuing vitality of the crown as the emblem of co-operation between the British nations.

CORONATION HELPS PROMOTE CONFERENCE.

The underlying plan was to carry the imperial conference through on the tidal wave of emotion and empire loyalty aroused by the coronation ceremonies. Indeed, it is for that purpose, beyond the advantages of tourist trade, that every public appearance of the royal couple is being so carefully exploited, making the coronation a seasonal rather than an inauguration day event. The extent to which the rather hard-boiled dominion statesmen now concentrated in London are impressed by this is a subject for later analysis.

But there is no doubt that the British people themselves are impressed. By and large, they do not give much thought to imperial policy. The political stability of England itself, however, is in the minds of all. The protracted and enthusiastic celebration of the coronation reveals the reality of past anxiety by its very quality of thanksgiving for the passing of a crisis. The threat to constitutional monarchy has made that institution stronger and more popular in this country than it has been for many years.

REARMAMENT HELPS RESTORE SELF-ESTEEM.

The factor of rearmament is also a vital component in this new feeling of relief and self-assurance. A year ago Mussolini's contemptuous disregard of British interests had disturbed this country's leadership more than it was willing to admit. On top of the Ethiopian episode came the Fascist intervention in Spain and then the greatest indignity, as the British see it, of the abdication.

While the huge preparedness program has no connection with the latter event, it is helping to revive the national self-esteem, which suffered so greatly thereby. There is no party demarcation in that determination to revive British prestige which rearmament reflects.

In other matters than the universality of support for the rearmament program the absence of rancor in politics is pronounced here now. It is true that the national government, now reconstituted under the premiership of Neville Chamberlain, is primarily conservative in complexion. It has only a small infusion of "National Liberals" and "National Laborites." And Mr. Lloyd George, as titular head of the Liberal Party, resents the former group as much as the Labor Party, now His Majesty's opposition, dislikes the Socialists who followed Ramsay MacDonald when he joined hands with Mr. Baldwin in 1931.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT DESERVES ITS NAME.

None the less the national government, as Stanley Baldwin turns over its direction to his successor, deserves its name more truly than at any time since its formation nearly six years ago. A great deal of its growth in popularity is due to the sterling personal qualities of Mr. Baldwin, whose triumph has been one of character rather than mercurial brilliancy or slap-dash improvisation.

In part also the strength of the national government can be attributed to the trend toward dictatorships elsewhere in Europe, which naturally tends to consolidate all Englishmen who believe in parliamentary government behind the party in power.

But it is his handling of what is here euphemistically called "the palace crisis," which has most assisted Mr. Baldwin to leave office on the crest of a wave of unprecedented popularity. He is credited with bringing the British monarchy, on which the empire centers, through a most serious crisis, in a manner which has consolidated its strength and enhanced its prestige.

Naturally, the party coalition which he headed is the gainer by that achievement, even though one may look in vain among the coronation bunting, or in shop windows, for any photograph of Stanley Baldwin. They are as scarce as those of the man whom he literally forced into exile.

There is no display for either the victor or the vanquished in this epic struggle. Instead, there are the myriad portraits of George VI, who will undoubtedly handle creditably the wearisome task to which Stanley Baldwin called him. Being sure of that, the kingmaker retires contentedly to the apple orchards of his beloved Worcestershire. And the country takes his self-effacement as a matter of course.

- Travels the most direct rail road between Chicago and Denver—and it's Burlington all the way.
- Glides west to Denver in 16 hours, leaving Chicago at 5:30 p.m. East to Chicago in 15 hours 38 minutes. Overnight—every night. There is no faster train service, no route as short.
- Carries every conceivable accommodation. 4 specially built Pullman sleepers, 3 having extra wide berths, the other offering bedrooms, compartments and drawing-room (singly or en suite); full length lounge car; diner for 40; separate cocktail lounge; carpeted coaches with revolving, reclining chairs; all cars completely air-conditioned; inter-car phone service; radio; valet and hostess service. All at no extra fare.
- The above facts are interesting—but to you, as a traveler, by far the most significant of all is the fact that the DENVER ZEPHYR is the most popular Chicago-Denver train.

Drama Of The Heavens.

For only a few moments on Tuesday the cone of the moon's shadow swept over a portion of the earth and wholly obscured the sun. To certain scientists who many weeks ago began preparing for the unrolling of this celestial drama, these were precious intervals of time. It provided them with a none-too-frequent opportunity to delve, with the most effective instruments that the ingenuity of man has been able to devise, into the mysteries of solar radiation and other astrophysical problems. It gave them a chance to check up on the movements of the earth and the moon.

Not since 699 A. D. has there been an eclipse with so long a period of totality at its maximum—seven minutes and four seconds. Unfortunately, the point of maximum duration was a desolate waste of sea in the middle of the Pacific. The nearest bit of land was many miles away and anything but an ideal point of observation. Nevertheless, scientists studying the eclipse from many points are grateful for even a slight addition to the very limited time they have had to observe such phenomena since modern astronomy came into being.

It was a pity, too, that this, the most dramatic of all solar spectacles, could conveniently be witnessed by so few, whether scientists or laymen. For it is an awe-inspiring sight when the shadow of the moon begins to creep over the flaming face of the sun until all is obscured but the dazzling corona, and shadowy waves sweep over the darkened earth.

The world may have become sophisticated in many ways. The old fears and superstitions regarding eclipses may have vanished among civilized peoples. Nonetheless, in the face of such a majestic spectacle, even the most blase cannot help being moved to his spiritual depths. It is a reminder that the universe is more than an agglomeration of atoms and elements, that it is essentially a mystery which, try as one may, the human mind has not been able to fathom.

Another $800,000,000.

The June financing of the Treasury will add another half-billion dollars to the national debt, which had already reached $35,274,000,000 on June 4. It so happens that the amount of the new offerings, of which $300,000,000 is for refunding purposes, roughly approximates the amount of the debt contracted since last December for the purpose of sterlizing gold acquisitions. This continued gold inflow, in fact, is considered responsible for the decision to borrow new money at this time.

The higher interest rates on the current note issues combined with other factors to make the Treasury offering a notable success, the issue being more than six times oversubscribed before the books were closed. The ease with which these financing operations were consummated should not, however, distract attention from the fact that the budget remains unbalanced while Congress continues to debate measures that would impose new heavy drains upon an overburdened Treasury.

If it were not for this political irresponsibility at home and political alarms abroad, we could look forward with confidence to the future. Our debt, though large, is not beyond our capacity to carry and there is a tremendous unsatisfied investment demand which provides broad support for Government issues. Moreover, we are in possession of vast gold supplies which should provide a firm foundation for our monetary and credit system.

Two things are needed, however, to allay the misgivings of those who look beyond the immediate present. They want more certain assurance that the era of excessive spending is over and they urgently desire some solution of the problems presented by a steady gold inflow. While the debts contracted to purchase unwanted gold are offset by the metal itself, this borrowing, nevertheless, adds to the taxpayers' burdens in the form of interest charges. As interest rates are now on the upgrade, this obligation will become increasingly heavy. Furthermore, the larger the gold hoard becomes, the greater the anxiety over possible losses to the Treasury from changes in price.

The gold problem would no doubt soon be solved if a measure of international stability could be restored. But that is a consummation which now seems remote. Meantime some sort of preventive international action may have to be taken that will enable us to avoid adding to our debt for the sake of acquiring unneeded and unwanted gold.

The way to put a stop to debt accretions incurred for other purposes lies in a decision to cut expenditures and live within our means. For failure to do that, there is no longer any excuse. The rise in the public debt emphasizes the importance of immediate and vigorous retrenchment.

Gains And Losses For D. C.

Ordinarily the District relies upon the Senate to purge the local appropriations bill of any obnoxious items and to make adequate provision for municipal activities. The Senate is usually sympathetic with the aims of the local government. After correcting some serious defects of the 1938 local supply bill, however, the Senate yesterday wrote into that measure several blunders of its own.

Without apparent rhyme or reason, the House had ordered a shakeup of District playgrounds that would have merely accentuated the present division of authority over public recreation. It had also voted to abolish the Children's Receiving Home and place young law violators in boarding homes to save a few thousand dollars. Both of these mistakes have been corrected by the Senate. Likewise, it struck from the bill "riders" effecting other questionable administrative changes in the District government and imposing unwarranted limitations upon school teachers.

The Senate also added a number of constructive features to the bill. Its division of the expenses of the Federal courts serving Washington is an important step toward relieving the District of obligations that are really national in character. Hereafter, if this amendment is permitted to stand, the national and local governments will share the expenses of these courts in accord with the service rendered to each.

Restoration of the salary for a people's counsel will be appreciated, as will the increased allowance for the Tuberculosis Sanitoria, Gallinger Hospital, etc. The appropriation for a new medical center was reduced and a special site was designated, but presumably that action will permit this urgent project to go forward. In view of the necessity of enacting a new tax program to balance the local budget, few citizens will be inclined to favor more liberal appropriations than the Senate allowed.

Turning to the weaknesses of the bill, however, a much less pleasing outlook is presented. In spite of the fact that a special committee is studying reorganization of the local government, the Senate hastily indorsed the proposed transfer of Gallinger Hospital and the Tuberculosis Sanitoria from the Board of Public Welfare to the Health Department. Whether or not this shift may be ultimately desirable, the practice of making such important changes through the medium of legislative riders on appropriation bills can not be excused. Since the House has already stricken this provision from its own bill, it is to be hoped that it will demand the normal course of procedure.

Elimination of the motor vehicle department and several other agencies related to the maintenance and operation of streets from the gasoline tax fund seems to be especially arbitrary. If this fund is to be maintained separately, expenses incurred by highway traffic should certainly be charged against it.

Denial to the District of the right to borrow from the Treasury until revenue from its prospective new taxes is available will doubtless prove temporary. That provision is also included in the tax bill. Presumably the Senate will accept it when passing upon the tax measure. The purpose of eliminating it from the appropriations bill was to make the enactment of new taxes the more certain. But if delay is encountered in passage of the revenue bill, the District will face a distressing predicament, for which Congress will be entirely responsible.

Planning For Health.

A new liberalism is apparent in the American Medical Association which represents some 106,000 of the country's 141,000 physicians. Yesterday the association's house of delegates by unanimous vote recognized for the first time the medical practice of birth control. Tomorrow the same group is generally expected to approve a resolution recommending the establishment of a national public health policy.

The resolution, introduced by the Medical Society of the State of New York, is quite in key with enlightened medical thinking. Only a few months ago a wide canvass among physicians and surgeons conducted by the American Foundation revealed a considerable number who see group practice and health insurance as inevitable; a few even predict the coming of outright state medicine. The resolution under consideration by the A. M. A., however, does not go as far as these ideas. In fact, it expressly disapproves of compulsory health insurance and puts at discount the growing hospitalization insurance movement—both of which run counter to long established policies of the association.

The resolution, nonetheless, represents a marked improvement in the approach to the problem of public health. Affirming that health is a direct concern of government, it proposes the establishment of a Federal department of health and the partial support of private institutions by public funds. It further suggests the use of tax money to promote medical education and particularly studies and researches in preventive and curative medicine. These are details that must be carefully analyzed, but there will be no dissent from the general plan of strengthening public health systems.

This, clearly, is not socialization of medicine. But it is a welcome admission that a need exists for revisions in medical practice based on the changed conditions of society today. As unemployment has come to be recognized as a responsibility of the whole country, so now disease is seen to be a national concern. Wisely, the A. M. A. contemplates no headlong rush into a new way of life. Rather, the resolution recommends first merely the extension of existing public health services to the end that more adequate protection and care can be afforded the indigent.

The District, for one, will applaud any such move that promises expansion of its health department and, presumably, every other forward-looking community will react with similar favor.

Dangers Of Wage-Fixing.

President Green, of the A. F. of L., and Chairman Lewis, of the C. I. O., are for once in accord. Neither approves of the Black-Connery wage-and-hour bill in its present form. Both urge stronger safeguards against legislative interference that might impair labor's chances to obtain better employment conditions through collective bargaining. Both object to giving the proposed Labor Standards Board power to determine minimum wage rates and maximum hours of work, preferring to see these standards set by law.

In his testimony before the joint congressional committee Mr. Lewis went so far as to recommend elimination of the entire section 5 of the bill authorizing the board to determine fair wages and reasonable hours for industries in which collective bargaining has not been effectively established. He would like to limit Federal regulation of wages and hours to those unorganized groups requiring protection against exploitation. Moreover, he does not even trust a Federal regulatory agency to determine what the basic standards shall be, but favors incorporating in the law itself a minimum wage rate of 40 cents per hour, with a maximum working week varying from 30 to 40 hours.

This stand is in sharp contrast with that taken by Secretary Perkins, who would vest in the Labor Standards Board full discretionary power to determine basic wages in industry by industry as well as reasonable wages in the better paid occupations. If we intend to sanction legislative wage-fixing, the method suggested by Miss Perkins is unquestionably the one to be preferred. It at least affords opportunity for variations to meet special conditions, whereas statutory minimum standards applied indiscriminately to men and women, with no allowance for regional differences in wage standards, would work havoc in some cases.

In fact, the minimum hourly wage rate suggested by Mr. Lewis is above the amounts earned by a large proportion of women workers in certain industries. To impose a higher standard upon employers by legislative fiat would undoubtedly result in displacement of certain classes of unskilled labor, such as occurred under the NRA codes, and might lead to serious reduction in the number of available jobs.

Mr. Lewis is rightly opposed to vesting in a Federal agency the vast discretionary powers conferred upon the proposed Labor Standards Board by the Black-Connery bill. But his reason for objecting appears to be merely fear that the standards thus set would interfere with the progress of collective bargaining and tend to drag down higher wages to the levels set for weak unorganized groups. That is a very real danger which any experienced labor leader would naturally be quick to perceive. But there is equal danger that rigid statutory wage-and-hour standards might indirectly depress wages and reduce employment opportunities.

Certainly, if statutory minima applicable to unorganized, unskilled labor were set so high as to result in the closing down of shops and factories, all classes of labor would suffer. Mr. Lewis professes to be alarmed at the prospect of government wage-fixing. Yet the kind of bill he favors provides for the worst kind of wage-fixing since it leaves no room for exceptions for good cause.

We Hope It's Catching.

For the responsible head of a great government, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Japan's new premier, has struck a new and wholly refreshing note in public statements.

He has admitted, point-blank, that the job he has just undertaken has him scared to death and is much too big for him. "I am really not capable and not worthy to be premier," he said, "but if I can make old enemies bury the hatchet and become friends; if I can weld the whole nation into one peaceful family, with the Emperor as the father of the household, I shall be content." And, he added, he has lost 8 pounds in 6 days.

Self-deprecation is, of course, an Oriental form of politeness which the Japanese took over from their Chinese teachers. Prince Konoye's remarks must be taken with a grain of salt. Nonetheless, it is clear that Japan's new premier refuses to take himself with the same preternatural seriousness that far too many of his contemporaries have assumed. Subject to incessant adulation, the Fuehrers and Duces of the world come to believe what is forever being dinned into their ears, to regard themselves as the repositories of all wisdom. And, to some extent, it is because their sense of humor is atrophied that they are so dangerous.

Prince Konoye's lack of solemnity augurs a new day for Japan and the Far East. We hope his mood is catching.

"Immoral" Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under his interesting, but sometimes misleading, caption, "Fair Enough," Mr. Westbrook Pegler, on June 7, suggests that when the Federal Government collects an income tax based on profits derived from gambling, prostitution and other illegal activities, Uncle Sam is a "silent partner" in such unlawful businesses, and exhibits a "low code of morality." The Government, he opines, is not "hampered by any fastidious moral concepts in such matters."

The rule under which these "immoral" taxes are imposed and collected was laid down in a Supreme Court opinion written by Mr. Justice Holmes in 1927, in United States vs. Sullivan, 274, U. S. 259. In that case the court unanimously held that there is no "reason why the fact that a business is unlawful should exempt it from paying the taxes that, if lawful, it would have to pay." That, it would seem, is not only hard, but also moral, common sense.

Mr. Pegler's criticism suggests that the Government has an obligation, before it imposes a tax on profits, to make an investigation and ascertain whether the money is tainted. That such a procedure would be absurd does not seem to be open to argument.

But still more absurd is Mr. Pegler's general conclusion that there is something morally wrong in taxing the profits in question. On the contrary, to not tax them would be both morally and economically indefensible; for if John Doe, who makes a profit of $10,000 illegally is not taxed, Richard Roe, who makes $10,000 legally and is taxed, will unjustly have to pay an additional sum to make up for the tax-free status of John Doe. Moreover, not to tax such profits would encourage crime by making it more attractive and profitable.

Sutherland And Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a contrast to the report of the unwarranted remarks of the President concerning the Supreme Court made at his press conference on June 4, it was most gratifying to read the simultaneous report that Justice Sutherland has stated that he does not plan to retire from the Supreme Court at the present time and expects to be on the bench when the Court reconvenes in the fall. This applies as well to the other justices who have expressed similar intentions.

With the disturbing conditions which now exist the country urgently needs these able and high-minded justices on the bench.

The Vicar of Darlington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am thoroughly English, and only visiting these United States. Being English, I know our ecclesiastical laws, and I know there is no defense for the action of the weak and wicked Vicar of Darlington, who disobeyed every one of his superiors in the Church of England. Why the head of our church, the Archbishop of Canterbury, has not dismissed that disobedient, weak, wicked, Vicar of Darlington—not for marrying them, but for disobeying the definite orders of every one of his superiors in the church—is a mystery to all England and our Dominions.

On Making Promises.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Saturday Evening Post has, at considerable length and in considerable detail, arraigned the President for making many promises and then making little or no attempt to keep the most important ones. Surely this attitude smacks of the horse and buggy days, if not of the "one-hoss shay" days.

It is true that prior to 1868 to make promises and not keep them, or try to keep them, was regarded as reprehensible, but in that year Mark Twain published the "Innocents Abroad." In chapter 23 he ridiculed many of the works of the old masters in Italy, and then said, "I promised that I would hide my uncouth sentiments in my own breast, but alas! I could never keep a promise. I do not blame myself for that weakness, because the fault must lie in my physical organization. It is likely that such a very liberal amount of space was given to the organ which enables me to make promises that the organ which should enable me to keep them was crowded out, but I grieve not. I like no half way things. I had rather have one faculty nobly developed than two faculties of mere ordinary capacity."

Here we have a scientific contribution on the ethics and psychology of promise making and promise breaking, which is, or ought to be, conclusive in doing away with the old ideas, and thinking men who read the quoted sentences must be convinced that to make promises and not keep them indicates a beautifully developed, if somewhat one-sided, mind, and that men who have a friend that does not, should be proud of him.

Then also the indignation at the Administration attitude that men who are taxed almost to death should not enjoy it is absurd. I am reminded of an incident in another classic—Boswell's Johnson. He tells us that in 1779 Dr. Johnson was much upset because in his walks about London he came across a fishmonger who was skinning an eel alive and "cursing it because it would not lye still." Surely we must see that under the New Deal it is the fishmonger who was rightly angry at the eel, and not Dr. Johnson, who disapproved of the fishmonger. We should realize the advances in thinking which we have made under the New Deal in the last four glorious years.

Washington's Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a man who is graduating from the George Washington University Law School this week and as a man who has had some 10 years' experience in newspaper work, may I take this opportunity to congratulate you on the excellent story about D. C. college students and law students in particular appearing in The Post June 6.

Mr. Eugene Guild has furnished a most excellent and accurate picture. Many of my classmates have remarked as I did, "I felt like that story was my own biography."

The high standards of four or five of the universities in Washington is deserving of more public and governmental attention. It is a pity that the operation of these schools is financed largely from the tuition received from students who are "working their way through." Just why the Federal and District governments have never assumed any responsibility for higher education here, whereas cities, States and even the Federal Government operate hundreds of schools elsewhere, is sometimes hard to understand.

G. W. LAW SENIOR.
Washington, June 6.

Couples in Federal Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a matter of fair play, if for no other reason, married couples should not be permitted to monopolize positions in the Government service to the extent which now prevails, and any law that permits this state of affairs should be speedily repealed.

Salaries of all grades in the public service have been increased to such an extent as to be a tempting bait to many in getting something for nothing, the result being that the Government service is overrun with people whose services might well be dispensed with, to the relief of an over-burdened tax-paying public.

Where a married man holds a Government position, the wife of such employe, instead of remaining in the service, should stay at home and attend to the affairs of the household, thus affording another married man an opportunity to find employment and support his family. It is a well-known fact that some married women employed by the Government use the money they receive according to their own personal wishes, concerning which their husbands have nothing to say. This is, of course, in keeping with the "woman suffrage code," but evidently does more to disrupt families than is generally supposed.

It is time to put a stop to the present tendency in the employment of husbands and wives in the public service, and if Congress and the Administration have the best interests of the country at heart, action in this matter will not long be delayed.

JUSTICE.

"Champion Goat."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pin a medal on Mr. Voteless Citizen of Washington, D. C. We herewith tender him "Gold Award No. 1" for being "the champion goat" among American taxpayers.

Not satisfied with plastering the pernicious "personal tax" on any and everybody that happens to own a little something, we are now threatened with an additional levy, in the form of a local "income tax" (which duplicates the Federal tax) and are cheerfully assured that real "teeth" will be put in the "personal" assessment, in order to compel local sufferers to "come across."

The time has arrived for docile, subservient taxpayers to show their own "teeth" and then carefully wrap this obsolete personal tax measure in a neat, little package and consign it to the waters of the Potomac.

Who remembers the Boston Harbor tea party? Let's stage a similar show in Washington. The vapid conversation emanating from Capitol Hill, concerning the abundant life, doesn't impress us any more. The "champion D. C. goat" is finally prepared to show his little horns and bleat his defiance! E. K. G.
Washington, June 7.

For Less Noise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Four months of hot weather, of semitropical heat but sans trade winds to temper the atmosphere: that is the fate of thousands of Government workers and many others who are obliged to stay in Washington during the summer. Windows remain open day and night and through them come all the sounds whose gamut ranges from traffic noise to loud radios.

The Post's public-spirited activities might well include a campaign of noise abatement, especially after dark when the number of cars in our streets greatly increases as people go out for an airing and children stay up late because school is out, adding their shrill voices to the blaring radios.

Modern city life, with its discordant din, is no doubt well adapted for deaf persons, and medical science has found that constant exposure to noise is affecting the sense of hearing of normal people. Can't something be done here to emulate New York's example where a city ordinance forbids unnecessary noise?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Loophole Experts.

THE best income tax and loophole experts in the country are the accountants employed in the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue to comb the returns for mistakes and evasions. They are kiver-to-kiver men who know the law and the regulations forward, backward and sidewise, and they can sort out the deliberately snarled relations of a dozen or a hundred phony corporations as unerringly as an old woman by a fireside unwinds a castoff sweater.

These agents know all the Government's tricks, snares and loopholes, too, the existence of which Mr. Roosevelt somehow forgot to mention the other day, and any big taxpayer, corporate or individual, who wants the best advice on evading taxes and avoiding the traps set by the Treasury Department can save money by hiring an agent out of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to come and point out how.

These agents get small pay from the Government, but they pick up all the trade and business secrets of business firms by delving into their affairs, and there is nothing to prevent their resigning to sell their information to private employers.

Andrew Mellon, when he was the best Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton, ordered a survey showing the most effective income tax escapes as revealed by the intimate experience of the Government's experts. He received a report listing nine methods and, according to testimony given later, used some of those methods himself.

• • • •

The Government, however, also uses technicalities to trick, harass and, as far as honesty and decency are concerned, to rob the taxpayers. I cite the case of a widow of a man who died a year ago, who has been compelled to preserve and recently to drag out for inspection by a party of ghouls from the Treasury Department the few old suits, the socks, worn underwear and hats and the rusty, curly-shafted golf clubs of her late husband that they might be appraised as part of his estate. He was not a dressy man and his clothes, when new, didn't stand him much, but a second-hand dealer wouldn't pay his own brother $50 for the whole wardrobe in its present condition.

The widow would have given them away, except that this would have been regarded as an attempt to evade appraisal and might have resulted in a punitive, arbitrary appraisal in the absence of the clothes. A tax on the wardrobe would not yield more than a few dollars, but the Government has a cunning idea. This wardrobe, at an arbitrary Government appraisal, might raise the total amount of the estate into a higher bracket, and by that trick the wife and the child of a dead citizen who worked hard and saved for their protection may be robbed of an amount greater than the value of his garments.

Speaking of ethics, morality and loopholes, as Mr. Roosevelt was the other day, I submit that the grave-robbing policy of the Government in this instance smells somewhat more foul than that of the rich evader who forms a phony company to save a few dollars from the clutches of the deserving Democrats.

Mr. Roosevelt speaks feelingly of the unemployed poor as the victims of this withholding, and in the abstract he is correct. But my own feeling on this subject is influenced by the first appointment that Jim Farley made when he became Postmaster General. Mr. Farley's first appointment was that of his own personal coat-holder and court jester to keep his personal souvenir scrapbook.

• • • •

To be sure, it was generous of Mr. Farley to make a job for his personal entertainer, but it is my thought that his personal generosity should not be carried on at public expense, and I suggest that 10,000 such acts of kindness scatterd through the national Administration also present a scandalous, merciless and immoral robbery of the unemployed poor.

Mr. Roosvelt has done nothing to dispel the natural suspicion of the income-tax payer that the money comes earmarked for keepers of the scrapbooks in a thousand and one guises and that the unemployed poor get second chop at the dough.

Peat Smoke.

To the returning Irishman, it is said, one whiff of peat smoke recalls memories, wistful and tender, not to be bought with gold. "It is literal truth," says R. M. Sayer, in Industrial Britain, "that many an Ulsterman of the counties, returning to the haunts of his boyhood after making name and fame in other countries, has been moved to tears by the arresting fragrance of the burning peat."

As the fragrance of burning peat to the Irishman, so is the smell of pluff mud to the coastal South Carolinian. When a low countryman returns after a long absence, this smell is exciting to his emotions. When it gets into his nostrils he know, he has come back home. The effect of burning peat on the Irishman is understandable by the low countryman because of this pluff mud smell.

The Poet as a Poet

By Russell Smith

CRITICISM appears to be more complaisant to modern corruptions than any other department of literature, if one may assess such matters by mere varieties of heresy. In our day, any dogma which promises a fixed scale for estimation attracts the critic. If Mr. Eliot has rushed to Catholicism and monarchism, many have turned to Marx, and some, as instance the Humanists of recent years, have reverted to even more ancient architectures of thought. The impact of science, however, has been heaviest for the obvious reason that it not only provides its own absolutes but even measures its own error. For a time which requires the definitive in everything, it was sure that the scientific mind would force an easy invasion of literary criticism.

Eminent among the practitioners of this criticism are Mr. I. A. Richards and Mr. Herbert Read, both English and both oppressed by necessitous modernities. Mr. Richards has carried farthest of our present critics, perhaps, the mad requisitions upon certainty. Not only does Mr. Richards demand a system of values for poetry, but he insists the values themselves be utilitarian.

Mr. Read is illustrative of a different aberration, the psychological. In his view, Shelley's irascible squire of a father is almost as important to a discussion of "Prometheus Bound" as is the poet himself. Therefore, in his view, "Hart Crane: The Life of an American Poet," reviewed in these pages recently, probably would be an admirable book. From Mr. William Rickel's reflections upon this biography by Philip Horton, one understands that the important things in the life of Hart Crane were the incompatibility of his parents, his addiction to drink, his homosexuality, indeed, almost anything save his poetry. Possibly, Mr. Horton's book does not make so close a connection between Mr. Crane's homosexuality and his poetry as the review would indicate. I have not read this biography, but Mr. Rickel's review offers an excellent text for the statement of an opposing view, both as to the nature of criticism and as to Hart Crane.

* * * *

THE following lines from "The Bridge" do not bear the impress of a man to whom the normal ecstacies were strange:

"There was a bed of leaves, and broken play;
"There was a veil upon you, Pocahontas, bride—
"O Princess whose brown lap was virgin May;
"And bridal flanks and eyes hid tawny pride."

If it be objected this stanza is insufficiently masculine, it is possible to cite "National Winter Garden," also from "The Bridge," which begins: "Outspoken buttocks in pink beads Invite the necessary cloudy clinch of bandy eyes," and concludes:

"Yet, to the empty trapeze of your flesh,
"O Magdalene, each comes back to die alone.
"Then you, the burlesque of our lust—and faith,
"Lug us back lifeward—bone by infant bone."

Here is intended no defense of Mr. Crane from the charge of homosexuality. He was, quite conceivably and irrelevantly, inclined in that direction. All of this preamble is intended simply to establish the thesis that it makes no more difference whether Mr. Crane was homosexual than it does if he was a vegetarian, an F. F. V., or a Volunteer Fireman. Granted he was homosexual, can it be said with conviction that he was unable to write into his poetry the quaint innocences of first love or the quainter delicacies of lust?

With the passages above staring face upward, it appears to be a trifling with words not to answer in the affirmative. It is just here that Mr. Read and the "psychological" critics find the point of departure for their tangents; for criticism should be empirical. This is not to say it should be pragmatic, but that the true critic must keep his eye on the verse as unwaveringly as the tennis player watches the ball while it is in play. Criticism is always parasitic, but it is a fungus upon the poetry itself, not upon the forever mysterious processes which produced it. Who is it can say why Homer wrote "the wine-dark sea" or Shakespeare wrote "all our yesterdays have lighted fools the way to dusty death" or Hart Crane wrote "O terraced echoes prostrate on the plain?"

* * * *

SIMPLY to ask such a question announces its absurdity. The concurrence of the sound with the words, the mysterious privacy of the evocation such words confer upon any single reader, the untranslatable give and take of rhythm—these will remain forever closed to science. As life itself is secret, so is literary creation. There is more than mere analogy in this statement. The spark which is physical life is also the spark which lights the brain; and as an unaccountable cellular miracle gives this spark an infinite diversity of form, so does the tremendous firmament of human thought, "fretted with golden fire," have its spring from recesses forever obscure to the factual analyst.

In a measure, this very resistance to an easy accounting is the mark of a great poet. And Hart Crane was a great poet, perhaps the greatest of his time. Certainly, no other contemporary comes to mind who forced his words—old words that have been worn thin by centuries, and words so new they already have disappeared from American billboards—into such heart-seeking blades. It is true, perhaps, that "The Bridge" is a failure as an epic poem; probably Mr. Crane was simply a lyric poet; but this means little, so far as his stature is concerned. Perhaps his reach, in the phrase of that man he could never have understood, Browning, exceeded his grasp; but that such a statement can be made about him only italicizes his achievement.

For Summer Reading

"ELEVENTH HOUR," by Robert Clive. (W. W. Norton, $2.)

This is a book about Germany and the rise of the Nazis to power—or rather it is a book about a foreign correspondent and his clandestine romance with the wife of a man who is away on business in South America. Take whichever viewpoint you like.

Whoever the author is, he must have been a newspaper man himself with his hand at one time on the feverish pulse of Unter den Linden, or else he must have done a lot of research work on the crisscross politics of the period. Many of the chapters begin with what are virtually dot and dash reports of front-page events . . . and if most foreign correspondents could be persuaded to send in their scoops in this manner, their fortunes would be made. It would save cable charges for their employers and boredom for their readers.

The rest of the book shows the influence of the Hemingway manner. Here is the glorification of the unpleasant reality and the dramatic commonplace—for it is silly to suppose that you can loud-pedal the heavier and more stalwart emotions and expect to sound clever at the same time.

Peter Felton and his associates who work hard during the day (though you never catch them at it) travel the rathskellers of Berlin by night, sopping up beer here and going on binges with brandy there. Their conversations don't spare your blushes either.

Then Peter meets Caroline Voss. At first he isn't interested, but that's just a build-up. Finally after a lot of jaded speeches about gathering rosebuds and why-does-life-have-to-be-like-this—which don't fool you one bit although the author keeps them down to words of one or two syllables—they take a nice little house in the country until hubby gets home.

ELIZABETH FORD.

"BLIND MAN'S YEAR," by Warwick Deeping. (Knopf, $2.50.)

If small things in a book don't irritate you too much . . . such as the story's heroine constantly calling her Alsatian dog "my dear" and its characters greeting each other always with "Hallo" instead of "Hello," the rather unusual plot of this latest novel by the author of others that are certainly much better will probably hold your interest from its start to within, at least, the last several pages.

"Blind Man's Year" is a book about a successful English novelist, Rosamund Girard, who keeps away from the rest of the world in a house and fenced in estate on the Sussex coast because of a facial blemish that she thinks makes her ugly to everyone who sees her. She has two pretty horrible married sisters, who make her life miserable by their continual sponging. She has two retainers: a competent housekeeper and cook, Janet; a competent gardener, Will. This pair have little or no conversational lines and, as a consequence, are the most delightful and sympathetic characters in the book. She has a friend and confidante, Margaret Hayle, who is a doctor and is almost the only other person she ever sees.

Into her secluded existence, by way of an airplane crash on her grounds in a fog, comes Clive Strange. Badly mashed in the cracked-up plane, Rosamund nurses him back to life, but to a life in which he will not see, for the accident destroyed his eyes. During the period of his hospitalization, Strange comes more and more to depend upon the woman whose face . . . and blemish . . . he has never seen. They marry and the remainder of the book tells the story of how Rosamund Girard goes about the business of making over her husband's blind life for him, to discover that he, perhaps, even more competently and completely, is remolding her life, too.

Rascoe Writes It All Down

Author and Critic Looks Back on Full and Happy Life.

By Clarence Earle Vrooman.

So apt is the title of this autobiography, covering the early struggles of one of our outstanding literary critics, that the reader wonders why such a simple, attractive appellation has not been used previously. It fits the book like a glove.

The partial life story of Burton Rascoe, kindly sponsor of latter day literati, is certain to interest all biography faddists, everyone who loves books and book people, and those who desire a reading acquaintance with many of today's leaders in varied fields. The text follows the present trend of modern biographies with its blunt truthfulness, which disregards laudatory embellishment and presents an unbiased recording. This autobiography is a fully documented journal giving an entertaining picture of literary reproduction and introducing much "back-stage" gossip.

The detail and accuracy of a born reporter are displayed in Rascoe's account of his boyhood in southwestern Kentucky and Oklahoma. This portion of the book is unusual in that the author has been able to keep alive in his memory an active account of child life as a part of American pioneering. Here is definitely no middle-aged man glorifying a lost youth, but the very spirit and feeling of boyhood recaptured by reference to his diaries, copiously penned through adolescence.

Attention to school work, serving as class president, captaining the football team, editing the student monthly, delivering newspapers, working at odd chores and finding time to entertain the young girls of his community with extracts from Schopenhauer, picture him as a typical schoolboy leader. The staggering facts of this sum total include the amount of literature he not only read and digested but also recorded, interest displayed in learning the classical languages and discussing this type of literature with older men, writing of editorials for the local paper, service as local reporter for neighboring city papers, work at the public library, and lastly, his capacity as ghost writer for most of the members of the local women's clubs. Of this period the author says, "How I managed to survive without a breakdown . . . I can account for only on the grounds that I have always been slight in weight and stature but have always had a strong constitution, much nervous energy, a good digestion and an ability to sleep any time and at any place soundly and without dreams." The account of ghost writing for the Entre Nous, the Hawthorne, the New Century and other clubs is not only very amusing but points out what a splendid training ground this served him. Even during this early period in his career he paralleled his classical learning with the daily routine of the work-a-day world, and was living to an intense degree the full life.

The theory of predestination seems to have played a great part in Rascoe's career. He says of this, "I have never doubted that, whatever I felt, I knew it would occur; and it always has occurred . . . Experience has taught me discrimination by the very ease of anyone's accomplishing that which he or she resolutely sets the heart upon doing; and it has taught me, too, that accomplishment is usually not half so gratifying as one thinks it might be. But to have vaguely but determinedly before one the consciousness of a goal which one knows somehow, not rationally or explicably or in detail beforehand, will be achieved—that is the sweet illusion which keeps life from being a bore."

Following this preordained theory, Rascoe went to Chicago and entered the University of Chicago, finding work on the Chicago Tribune. His college days were as full as the period of his secondary education had been, and once again we find him getting along with four or five hours sleep daily. He left the university at the end of his second year, having a well established idea that universities should be seats of learning, and not run as "institutions." This fact is here revealed as the common fault of a large number of higher seats of "learning." Fortunately for the young student, he had already taught himself more English literature than he would have been likely to acquire at any university.

Rascoe's career on the Chicago Tribune from campus reporter through special investigation assignments, critic of music and the drama, book reviewer on to literary editor, occurred during an important era in journalistic history, and his intimate picture of these animated times, and of the literary giants of that period, are both diverting and informative. The trials of all critics are clearly pointed out, and he shows the fortunate financial condition of the Tribune at that time, when canceled advertising from disgruntled publishers and theater managers, who fumed at outspoken reviews, could be accepted with a smile. On the Tribune it was not necessary to give a coating of whitewash to poor books or plays in fear of losing one's position.

The latter part of the text not only serves as a "Who's Who in Literature and the Press," but deals with this matter in such a sympathetic way that the reader feels both the heartaches and the joys of many interesting characters.

The campaigns waged by the author for recognition of new genius over old traditions are of absorbing interest, but his enthusiasm in this direction is perhaps a bit too habitual. He deserves high praise as a sympathetic but discerning critic who helped many a young writer toward his due.

Rascoe persisted at times in a romantically idealistic viewpoint in defense of Chicago and the Middle West as titans of literary appreciation compared to New York and the Eastern seaboard cities. This autobiography serves as the messenger of his opinion at that time. If a further volume is forthcoming, after some years association with the most important papers and magazines in the East, it will be interesting to note if there has been a change with the years in his conviction.

"BEFORE I FORGET," by Burton Rascoe. (Doubleday, Doran. $3.)

"THE GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS," by Laura Thornborough. (Thomas Y. Crowell Co., $2.)

Hardly a better testimonial for a book could be found than that there should be a demand for a reprinting after a quarter of a century. Such has been the well-deserved fate of Dr. Clarke's book on the Gaspe country, first published in 1913 and now reissued after being long out of print.

John Mason Clarke died in 1925. He was one of America's foremost geologists and was State paleontologist of New York and later director of the New York State Museum. He was, too, a man of broad culture, and he brought to bear in his writings a great store of other knowledge along with the geological. In geology, however, he finds the key to the country's settlement and to the very lines of the Gaspesians.

The tourist, at the time Dr. Clarke wrote, had not yet "brushed the bloom" off the Gaspe country; so his book is not a tourists' guide but a book for those with deeper geographical interest and with unfretted time to spend on a real classic in the field of travel, and one charmingly and ably written. The author seems to have been steeped in the history of the Gaspe Peninsula and its inhabitants.

Miss Thornborough has written of a country at the other end of the great Appalachian system. Hers is a book more in the nature of a guide for the increasing numbers of visitors to the recently established Great Smoky Mountains National Park and vicinity. She gives information about roads and trails, camp sites, side trips, the fauna and flora, and something of the history of the park and the mountain people and the Cherokee Indians. The author has included some excellent photographs of the Great Smoky country, and the end papers consist of a map of roads to and through the park.

There are, unfortunately, a number of departures from orthographic and rhetorical standards in Miss Thornborough's book (it is, for example, the pileated woodpecker, not "piliated," and Bewick's wren, not "Bevick's"), but these slips perhaps are unimportant except to those who think that the printed page should be reasonably sans tache. It seems to me that proofreaders are becoming noticeably lax, this being the third book I have recently had occasion to criticize in this respect.

The American Prix Femina Committee, of which Edna St. Vincent Millay is president, has nominated three books by American authors, one of whom will receive the Prix Femina Americain . . . They are: "All Brides Are Beautiful," by Thomas Bell . . . "The Late George Apley," by John P. Marquand . . . and "Candle Indoors," by Helen Hull . . . Of Mr. Bell's book, a Post reviewer said: "The rather vague radicalism of the book, expressed largely through Peter's theorizing in somewhat labored prose, neither justifies nor explains Mr. Bell's simple pleasure in the form of presentation, which he has used; it seems somewhat extrinsic, a belated attempt which definitely does not come off to superimpose intellectual honesty on a routine form of sex novel." . . . Of Mr. Marquand's book another Post reviewer said: "After the book has been closed, one wonders whether Mr. Marquand has chosen the best way to tell his story." . . . Glad to be of help, Miss Millay.

"Wise Guy"

Do you know who the Wise Guy is? He's the Coney Island barker. He's the pitch man who sell gadgets from a portable sidewalk stand. He's the descendant of the prohibition bootlegger. He's the fellow who has the snappy comeback on every occasion. He's the one who knows there's none finer in the world. He's the mug who finds it easier to stray just beyond the bounds of the law. He lives in New York City, is born there, works there, dies there. He's just about everything you don't like. Joseph Weidman has just caught one of this species, inhabiting the garment industry of New York, and has put him into a first novel. Meet Harry Bogen, the biggest heel who ever got in the ready-made wear business on Seventh avenue! The Wise Guy himself!

Joseph Weidman ought to know his man, for he worked for years in the garment trade as an accountant. The "hero," Harry Bogen, begins as a shipping clerk, and saves a hundred dollars. After leading the shipping clerks in a strike and tying up the whole garment district, Bogen starts a package-delivery service, thereby selling out the strikers. After that it is play high, wide and handsome with friendship, with his mother's love, with the love of his girl, until he owns one of the swankiest dress manufacturing establishments on the avenue. His mother is forgotten, his partner goes to prison, another partner loses all his money.

Joseph Weidman writes with a staccato, two-fisted style. The story is told in the first person singular, so that the reader hears Harry Bogen's side only. Yet the story has an appearance of impartiality, and you get a definite understanding of the other characters who are just so many puppets in Bogen's hands. No doubt a great part of the narrative vigor which Weidman displays arises from his discovery of an original character who has been awaiting pen.

The exploitation of a character from one locale, following one set of ideals (those of aggressive money-getting, norms of our society, for success), with one attitude toward people. Such a ground-plan involves an essential narrowing of range of material and emotions. Of course, Weidman gains in power. But unless a greater plan of action and a deeper spiritual insight accompanies his growth as an artist, he will be forgotten as quickly as he has sprung to our attention.

Prose From a Portrait

By Agnes DeLano

HANGING over the mantelpiece of one of the inner rooms of the Pitti Palace in Florence is one of those arresting portraits of Titian's in which the great Venetian caught, as was so often his wont, not alone the external features of a man, but the intimation of that eternal ebb and flow of conflicting forces that move in the deep undercurrents of a personality. This particular portrait is of Ippolito de Medici, and so great was the picture's power to awaken her interest and hold it captive that it led Mrs. Susan Hicks-Beach into a long research which finally culminated in her writing of a novel which she calls "A Cardinal of the Medici."

Mrs. Hicks-Beach's book is bound to find an enthusiastic audience among the cultivated set of readers whom she is so obviously addressing. The book is so spirited, so stimulating and so thorough that it promises to become one of those books that must accompany the eager traveler to Italy, whether his journeyings be remembered ones, anticipated ones, or the actual and absorbing ones of the moment. The people whose Roman-striped bags and Florentine leather book-covers customarily bulge with Symonds' "Life of Michelangelo," Young's "The Medici" and Merejkowski's "The Romance of Leonardo da Vinci" will have to find room from now on to slip in Mrs. Hicks-Beach's book, too. It is another of that company of volumes, rich and living in the detail of Renaissance backgrounds, and although its author calls it a novel, one ventures to say that the usual novel reader will lose his story-seeking way in the maze of fascinating irrelevancies, while the lover of history and biography will revel in every sparkling page.

MRS. HICKS-BEACH writes in the first person, assuming the character of the mother of Ippolito de Medici, the bastard son of Guiliano Duc de Nemours. One recalls Michelangelo's tomb-figure of Guiliano, pensive, his head lowered, his brow helmet shaded. It is easy to think that a lady in waiting at the neighboring court of Urbino might have fallen in love with this dreamily romantic and exiled member of a great house. History has reserved the actual woman's identity in its secret chambers, so Mrs. Hicks-Beach has found, ready made, a character who fits importantly into a story and of whom nothing is definitely known. On this character she has shed the light of her quickened and intelligent imagination, thus turning the mistress of the young Medicean lord to fine fictional account.

She has shown great skill in maintaining the character's reserve. She, too, keeps her identity hidden amid the "properties" of her gorgeously set Renaissance stage. She combines in the character of her narrator a rare gift for selflessness with a shrewd insight and capacity for experience. Through this woman's consistently modest but no less effusive outpourings (all of them centered in her son's destiny), not only a domestic drama unfolds, but the curtain rises on all the pageantry, intrigue and action of Renaissance Italy's historic drama. The scene shifts from Urbino, where the story opens, to Rome, with its bitter family rivalries and its eternal struggles for Papal power—and then to Florence, Fondi, Pagliano and many another court and principality whose personalities lend a love interest, a war motive or a political impulse to the complications of this tangled and turbulent story.

THE author's accumulation of facts concerning the seemingly trivial details of everyday life is very impressive. Her allusions are not confined to costumes, feastings, dancing and music in general, but she makes interesting the fashions and fabrics in detail. The richness and color of embroideries are not alone suggested, but every stitch and pattern are carefully traced; jewels are not set gleaming in a vaguely imaginative way, but one is made to enjoy the craftsmanship as the setting of every precious stone in its wreathed intricacy of design is knowingly described; foods are not whiffed across pages of loose description, but recipes are resurrected and wonderful concoctions served up in their fine faience vessels; the rhythms of the dances are not labeled and left, but the cross-crossed steps are followed through to the dainty tunes plunked on the lutes and tambours. Nothing is too trivial or commonplace to have caught Mrs. Hicks-Beach's attentive and accurate curiosity.

Familiar figures are continually making their exits and their entrances. Michelangelo and Raphael relive their ancient quarrels. Benvenuto Cellini struts his hour upon the stage and is gone. Baldassare Castiglione moves slyly and surely across the scenes, and Pope Leo gives way to Pope Clement while cardinals and princes bow and scrape in hopeful submission. Caterina de Medici appears—the little marionette, who so soon proved unruly to her powerful puppeteers. In a word, the whole drama of the age is set forth, its pageantry, its comedies, its tragedies—all brought to a focus around the personality of Ippolito, Guiliano's illegitimate son, whose assumption of the red hat of the cardinalcy when he was scarcely more than a child stands as a pretty fair indication of what a wild and whirling age it was.

* * * *

TO have unified her impressions of so teeming a time, by straining them through the personality of a woman who touched it at both its heights and its depths, has been no small achievement. Mrs. Hicks-Beach seems almost unconsciously to have fallen into the archaic and beady-eyed manner of the garrulous chroniclers of the period of which she writes. Indeed, it is the proof that she gives of being steeped in the spirit of the Renaissance that is bound to draw from the reader an extravagant and unqualified admiration. If Titian is to be praised for having penetrated behind the mask of features and costume to the living sources of personality in his portrait of Ippolito, then Mrs. Hicks-Beach must not go without honor for having penetrated below the surface of the painting to the springs of revelation that have clear the life and times of the later Medici.

"A CARDINAL OF THE MEDICI," by Mrs. Susan Hicks-Beach. (Macmillan, $3.)

"SHANGHAI, THE PARADISE OF ADVENTURERS," by a Diplomat. (Orsay Publishing House, Inc., $3.50.)

"Shanghai, the Paradise of Adventurers" is the Shanghai counterpart of the "Washington Merry-Go-Round." Composed of 11 chapters with such titles as "Graft and Diplomacy," "Pirates, Smugglers and Opium Traders," the book is a collection of incidents pointing to the corruption of religion, business and diplomacy in Shanghai. As is usually the case with this type of book, the author has gathered every horror story that he thinks will escape a libel suit and has strung them together into a tale that purports to tell the whole truth. Actually what the reader gets is a distilled essence of tabloid so powerful that only the most avid scandal mongers escape satiation after a few chapters.

Shortly after finishing this book I had the opportunity of questioning an old Shanghai resident about the authenticity of several episodes. To my surprise he assured me that such things had happened, but in most cases many years ago, and the abuses which had caused them had since been corrected. The author, however, gives the impression that the incidents he cites are current and common.

The identity of the author is a mystery. He calls himself G. E. Miller, adds in parenthesis "Pseudonyn," and then "Diplomat." It has been intimated that he was once a member of the Foreign Service, but has since resigned. Whoever he is, he evidently spent his time in Shanghai ferreting out the most lurid tales he could find. It would be so easy to write a similar book on "New York, the Paradise of Adventurers," reveling in rackets, rapes, murders and swindles, but to what purpose unless it were to correct some existing evils. The book, "Shanghai," makes no pretense at suggesting cures or analyzing abuses, it simply recounts sensational incidents ad nauseam.

The author's descriptive style is very dramatic and effective, but the dialogue borders on the sententious. The writing of the first chapter picturing the author's arrival in Shanghai is a masterpiece of sensuous imagery, but succeeding chapters are filled with conversations, over endless whiskies and sodas, that are never casual although the author is the protagonist.

CAROLINE T. SIMMONS.

Charles Dickens

Charles Dickens died at his home, Gadshill, in England, on Thursday, June 9, 1870. He was 58 years old.

He went out, taking his dogs for a walk, on the preceding Monday, the 6th. On Tuesday he took a drive with his sister-in-law, dismissed the carriage and walked awhile. Returning home, he talked about his love for his house, hoped Gadshill would be associated with his name in the future, and said he was glad he had definitely given up a plan for a house in London. He expected to be buried nearby, not knowing that Wesminster Abbey was to receive him.

On Wednesday he wrote all day, even in the afternoon, which was contrary to his custom. He was writing steadily at his last novel, "Edwin Drood," which has defied all guesses at the identity of the murderer. Although he was very tired when he stopped work that afternoon, he wrote some letters and made an appointment to see a friend in London on the next day.

Dinner was at 6 o'clock. No sooner had he sat down to the meal, when Miss Hogarth was shocked by an expression of acute suffering on his face. "I have been very ill for an hour," he said; but he told them to go ahead with the meal, and then he stood up after uttering some incoherent words, and he would have fallen had he not been supported. They got him toward a sofa, but he sank to the carpet, and his last words were "On the Ground."

He breathed heavily and without a sign of consciousness for 24 hours, dying at 10 minutes past 6 the next day, Thursday, June 9, 1870. Millions felt his death as a personal loss.

He was buried in Westminster Abbey and his friend, John Forster, closed his biography of him with these fine words: "Facing the grave and on its left and right are the monuments of Chaucer, Shakespeare and Dryden, the three immortals who did most to create and settle the language to which Charles Dickens has given another undying name."

Publicity, Treasury Power Reduced Through O'Connor Fight.

Morgan had said "anyone has a right to do anything as long as the law does not say it is wrong. I object strenuously to treating income tax evasion as a moral issue."

In the House, Representative Byron B. Harlan (Democrat), Ohio, asked: "How can you avoid a feeling of loathing, a feeling of resentment and detestation when you read that statement?"

O'Connor said "a great financier" defended the use of tax loopholes "and passed the blame to Congress for being so 'stupid' as to leave the holes open."

"That," said O'Connor, "is no answer to morals. Some taxpayers crawling through these loopholes, so stretch the holes that the world no longer recognizes them as holes."

But the liberal Representative Gerald P. Boileau, (Progressive), of Wisconsin, agreed that tax evasion was a legal and not a moral question.

"It's up to us to close those loopholes," he said.

Boileau offered an amendment to require the joint committee of 12 House and Senate members to bring in at least a preliminary report for corrective legislation by July 15. The House voted it down, 84 to 54. The resolution as adopted requires remedial recommendations "not later than February 1, 1938."

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt, at whose behest Congress authorized the loophole-plugging investigation, touched briefly on other tax questions.

Opposes Exemption.

Mr. Roosevelt said he always has advocated, and does now, the removal of tax exemptions for Federal and State employes, and the lifting of tax-exemptions from Federal and State securities. But he said he thought a constitutional amendment would be necessary to reach both, and this was an uncertain method.

The modifying amendments to the tax-dodging inquiry approved yesterday by the House were the outgrowth of a compromise reached between House leaders and the Rules Committee, after the latter group had ordered more sweeping changes in the Senate resolution.

As recommended by the Rules Committee, and approved yesterday by the House, there are three major changes. Information uncovered at secret hearings could be made public only on the vote of the entire joint committee. Under the original measure, Treasury employes holding hearings were authorized to release information in the name of the committee.

G. O. P. Cries "Red Herring."

Republican cries of "red herring" were heard as the resolution moved toward adoption. Said Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York:

"The Administration has no financial policy. It piles deficit upon deficit by issuing tax exempt securities. The investigation is a red herring, because the budget is out of balance. It was intended to distract attention. The only fiscal policy I know of is saving at the spigot and losing at the bunghole."

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, said the Democrats on that group would have to "take full responsibility." He said the inquiry was designed to "distract attention from a $400,000,000 shortage in revenue estimates." He complimented the Rules Committee on its changes in the measure.

O'Connor appealed to the membership to assert their independence, referring repeatedly to criticism of Congress "having surrendered its prerogatives and its power." He absolved the President from his charges of interference.

"I say now that he does not know what his agents are doing in their attempt to dictate to this body or to the other body," said the New Yorker.

He hinted that punishment might follow his stand.

"I know there will be more barrage, I know there will be more reprisals," he said. "You know this barrage that goes on all the time, the criticism of individual members when they stand up for those rights."

O'Connor asked why the Treasury needed any additional authority to what it now possesses to make a tax inquiry, and added: "The suggestion of publicity may be the answer."

O'Connor sent a prepared speech to the press galleries, but varied his text slightly on the floor. The prepared speech had said:

"Shall we surrender to so-called 'brain trusters,' still bearing the print of the clout and holding unimportant Government jobs to dictate not only the form, but the policy of Congressional action? May I suggest that these individuals drop their diapers of anonymity and bravely enter the political arena for election to Congress. Surely the people are entitled to decide who shall act for them in Congress."

O'Connor said he sometimes despaired "of getting support in this body to stand on our prerogatives," but concluded with a classical flourish:

"I am willing to stand at Thermopylae, but it is not very pleasant if you have to stand with your back to the wall, all alone. Yet there is nothing else I can do, but just stand there."

Washington Officers To Study Army Finance

Two Washington Army officers and one from Alexandria are included in the group of 65 graduates from West Point who will attend the Finance School at Washington from June 14 to June 16. The course, for which the 65 second lieutenants are voluntarily foregoing two weeks' leave, will familiarize them with forms, records and accounting methods in the Army.

The three officers are Alan D. Clark, 1851 Columbia road; Robert C. Gildart 2d, 1406 Webster street, and James N. Peale, 2219 Albemarle street, Arlington. Some of the group will be quartered at Fort Myer, the remainder living with relatives and friends in Washington.

Republic Threatens Lawsuit To Force Full Mail Delivery

Company Demands U. S. Carry Food to Besieged Workers in Two Cities; Youngstown Mob Attacks Deputies; Strike Spreads.

Republic May 25 solely for the purpose of inflicting great and irreparable damage to Republic and to promote labor organizations."

Edward Lamb, C. I. O. counsel in Ohio, and also attorney for Stockholder Northup, insisted "we're here for Republic" and demanded that Girdler be present to produce documents concerning "company spies, expenditures for machine guns and other instruments of murder." He charged that the funds of Republic Steel Corporation are "being looted by Mr. Girdler."

Brookes, the Republic counsel, said in his letter regular avenues for transporting food are closed by pickets "unless we are willing to match force with force."

"This we are loath to do unless all other means fail," he added.

Deliveries "Unsatisfactory."

Brookes declared a telegram from Donaldson, saying normal mail deliveries had been and would be continued at Warren and Niles, "is obviously unsatisfactory."

"We have presumed," he told Farley, "that the United States mails would afford us the same facilities which are afforded generally throughout the country. These have been denied and are being denied to us through your action and through the action of postmasters in charge of Federal postoffices at Warren and at Niles.

"Such is our emergency that if your position and the supporting practice which you are quoted as relying upon is founded in fear of violence which may be committed upon the facilities of your department or your personnel, this corporation stands ready to be deputized to function for your department in making deliveries."

Murray Asks Senate Inquiry.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 8 (A.P.).—Philip Murray, leader of the strike pickets encamped at the gates of three independent steel companies in seven States, called for a Senate investigation of the strike tonight. Meanwhile, Youngstown police told pickets to "put down their clubs under pain of arrest."

Legal, vocal and telegraphic developments overshadowed the steady grind of picketing.

Police Chief Carl Olson ordered pickets here to stop carrying clubs in the city or face arrest for "carrying dangerous weapons," and Sheriff Ralph E. Elser of Mahoning County, said he would "back up the police chief."

The sheriff added that he had sworn in 100 special deputies and said he had "no apology for them. I can get 10,000 if necessary." He said he had tear gas, hand grenades and two armored trucks for use "in preserving the peace if necessary."

It was indicated tonight that a "break" in Ohio Gov. Martin L. Davey's mediation efforts was expected soon and that he might make an announcement tomorrow.

Inland Contract Demanded.

Chicago, June 8 (A.P.).—Strike chiefs demanded negotiations for a signed contract with the Inland Steel Co. today, but the firm reiterated its refusal to make such an agreement.

Van A. Bittner, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, opened the exchange with a telegram claiming the S. W. O. C. represented a majority of Inland's 13,000 employes in Indiana Harbor, Ind., and Chicago Heights, Ill., and was prepared to prove it by a check of membership cards against pay rolls.

While both sides held their ground, Otis Jones, 43, succumbed to a bullet wound in the spine—the eighth victim of a clash between police and demonstrators on Memorial Day.

Enlist Ex-Soldiers.

Monroe, Mich., June 8 (A.P.).—Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs tonight asked civilians with military experience to enlist as special policemen to enable the Newton Steel Co. to reopen its strike-closed plant at 8 a. m., Thursday.

The company, an affiliate of the Republic Steel Corporation, employs 1,322 men. It has been closed for ten days.

Mayor Knaggs appealed to "all able-bodied Monroe citizens with previous military experience" to enlist for special police duty after Gov. Frank Murphy told a delegation the State could act only if the situation "gets out of hand or imperils the community."

Budd Wheel Strike.

Detroit, June 8 (A.P.).—A walk-out of 1,500 employes closed the Budd Wheel Co.'s plant here today, but a sit-down strike of 500 workers at a Briggs Manufacturing Co. plant ended in 45 minutes, leaving labor dispute developments at a minimum.

The one-man grand jury investigation of a recent riot outside the Ford Motor Co.'s plant in suburban Dearborn recessed until tomorrow after six witnesses were heard.

Mob Attacks Deputies.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 8 (U.P.).—Sheriff Ralph E. Elser, of Mahoning County, a major center of the steel strike, reported tonight that 12 deputies had been assaulted by a crowd that cornered them in a downtown store where they were buying "uniforms."

The sheriff and 40 deputies rushed to the scene in two armored trucks and dispersed the crowd, estimated to number about 100.

39 C. I. O. Men Sentenced.

Waukegan, Ill., June 8 (A.P.). Thirty-nine C. I. O. members were convicted of contempt of court and given fines and jail sentences today in connection with a sit-down strike at the North Chicago plant of the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation last winter.

Labor Holiday Spreads.

Lansing, Mich., June 8 (A.P.).—Organized labor on a "work holiday" interrupted activities in Michigan's capital city today for the second successive day.

Signaling an intensive organizing campaign, members of American Federation of Labor unions employed on building projects walked off their jobs to halt construction work for the day.

Their action came just 24 hours after the United Automobile Workers of America, an affiliate of the A. F. L.-opposed Committee for Industrial Organization, called a "holiday" halting industrial and commercial activity with a mass demonstration against arrest of eight pickets.

from 1904 until 1906. In June and July, 1908, he was on detached duty with an expeditionary force organized for service in Panama, and from August of that year until January, 1910, he was in command of a battalion of Marines at Camp Elliott, Canal Zone. He commanded the Third Regiment of Marines at Camp Meyer, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, from March to June, 1911.

Various posts and stations in the United States were under his command from 1911 to 1915, and during this period he completed the field officers' course at the Army Service Schools at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the course at the Army War College here.

Assigned to Newport.

Following a tour of duty as fleet Marine officer of the Atlantic fleet from January, 1915, until June, 1916, Gen. Fuller was assigned to the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

With the World War raging toward a conclusion in France, he was assigned to command the Second Brigade of Marines in the Dominican Republic in August, 1918. He remained there until October, 1920. He also served on the staff of the Military Governor of Santo Domingo as secretary of state, interior, police, war and navy, from December, 1919, until he was detached from Santo Domingo.

He served on the staff of the Naval War College from November, 1920, until July, 1922, and from July, 1922, until January, 1923, he commanded the Marine Corps Schools at Quantico, Va.

He assumed command of the First Brigade of Marines in the Republic of Haiti, with his headquarters at Port-au-Prince, in January, 1924, and held this post until December 8, 1925.

Returning to the United States, Gen. Fuller was assigned to Marine headquarters as president of the Marine examining and retirement boards, and he served in this capacity until July, 1928, when he was appointed assistant to the major general in command.

When Maj. Gen. W. C. Neville, commandant of Marines, died in July, 1930, Gen. Fuller was appointed to succeed him. He held this post until his retirement on March 1, 1934, at the age of 64.

Maj. Gen. Fuller received the Spanish Campaign medal; the Philippine Campaign medal, the Victory medal, the Expeditionary medal and the Second Nacaraguan Campaign medal.

He was awarded the Presidential Medal of Merit of Nicaragua and the medal of Military Merit of the Dominican Republic.

Drowning Is Feared As Angler Vanishes

Prince Frederick, Md., June 8 (A.P.). The disappearance of a man from a small rowboat off Dares Beach led residents of that section to report to Calvert County officials today that they believed he had drowned.

Magistrate W. W. Duke said the identity of the man was not known to any of the persons who had seen him fishing from the boat some distance from the shore during the morning. No trace of him was found after Walter D. Dresser, manager of the beach, noticed the boat was empty.

WHAT TOP-RUN MEANS

This diagram shows the curve of quality. It pictures how the peak of whiskey goodness is secured by cutting off the raw "heads" and the heavy "tails"—and taking only the best of the run to make Crab Orchard.

DOES TOP-RUN BOURBON REALLY TASTE BETTER?

You'll find the answer to that in your first warming glass of Crab Orchard. For every drop is TOP-RUN and full 93 proof. That means extra brilliance and sparkle—extra bead quality—extra flavor—extra strength. Test this TOP-RUN Kentucky bourbon with a taste—and see why Crab Orchard is such a great buy.

W.C.T.U. Urges Ships to Limit Sale of Liquor

Resolutions Mark Closing of World Convention in Capital.

The World's W. C. T. U. in resolutions adopted yesterday afternoon asked owners of passenger ships to limit the hours when alcoholic beverages are sold to boat travelers and urged the International Steamship Board to consider this recommendation.

Although reaffirming their belief in total abstinence, delegates to the sixteenth triennial convention of the temperance organization decided that "from unlimited sales to limited sales is a big step in this instance."

Dr. Ella A. Boole, president, said that while steamship lines would pay no attention to resolutions asking complete prohibition she believed they would consider hour limitations. Members who made boat trips to the convention unanimously deplored the "unrestricted flow of hard liquor on steamships at the present time."

The convention asked prohibition of sales at airports, aboard aircraft, in filling stations, and on railroad trains, and urged that drivers and pilots of these vehicles be prohibited from drinking when on duty and "for 24 hours before going on duty."

In addition, the delegates from 37 countries went on record as favoring:

1. Expansion of the scope of the League of Nations to "include expert studies of conditions contributory to war, with a view to eliminating its causes."

2. Investigation by the League of "the effect of beverage alcohol on the nutritive value of foods, and so on the health of the people."

3. The sanctity of treaties, "subject to alteration where necessary by peaceful means;" the Briand-Kellogg pact; the settling of disputes by arbitration based on international law; the responsibility of nations to prevent breaches of peace.

4. A noonday period of family devotion as a means of bringing about a world-wide religious revival.

5. The "sane teaching of social morality in churches, home and schools" as an instrument for the reduction of white slave traffic, which was declared to be "closely related to the use of beverage alcohol."

6. Systematic temperance education in schools and colleges—this to cover the use of all habit-forming drugs. In this connection, the convention warned against the dangers of "self-prescription" and urged docetors to "limit prescription to cases of necessity."

Commend League.

Although the League of Nations was commended for its intention to consider "equality rights for men and women" at its next September meeting, the convention did not vote to ask for "equal rights." United States delegates expressed belief that to ask for equality might endanger recent legislation favoring women in this country.

The extension of citizenship to women and the increasing recognition of their nationality rights were noted, and it was urged that woman suffrage be further extended "to the end that society may be protected from drink, impurity, gambling and other evils."

Eradication, not restriction, is the only solution of the worldwide liquor problem, the women declared. "The repeal of prohibition in the United States and Finland has not solved the liquor problem in those countries, nor has so-called government control," they said. "Other methods substituted instead of prohibition have proved ineffective in lessening the consumption of beverage alcohol."

Protection for Native Races.

All governments concerned were asked to "protect native races from the temptation of alcoholic liquor."

In amending the resolution asking the League of Nations to study the effect of alcohol on foods, the word "beverage" was inserted. "The League has shied away from the word 'alcohol.' It is much better for us if we say 'beverage alcohol,'" Mrs. Boole said.

At the request of the British delegation, the convention amended its belief in the sancity of treaties to include the words "subject to their alteration, where necessary, by peaceful means."

The six-day convention closed last night with presentation of a pageant called "Souls Courageous," in which more than 500 women and Washington school children participated.

Today, the executive committee of the W. C. T. U. of the United States will begin a two-day meeting at the Washington Hotel.

Pola Negri Better After Illness Scare

Berlin, June 8 (AP).—Pola Negri, "vampire" star of Hollywood's silent movie era, was well on the way to recovery tonight after an appendicitis scare and an ambulance dash from Bayreuth to Berlin. The actress said she exepected to go back to work in an European film by mid-July.

She had stopped at a Bayreuth hotel on her way to Switzerland. Feeling ill and fearing appendicitis, she consulted a Bayreuth physician and then decided to go to Berlin for treatment.

Physicians said she was suffering from an infection of the digestive system.

After a smart take-off (above), Dorothy uses the weight and position of her head to spin her body. This shows her in mid-air.

Instead of the "pike" with body bent at hips—or the "tuck" with body bent at hips and knees—Dorothy executes the somersault the hard way—by the "layout" with body outstretched.

Beginners are cautioned not to do this dive without first trying it on the suspended harness used in gyms to teach tumbling.

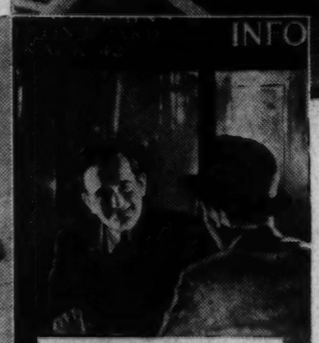
WORLD'S CHAMPION HIGH-DIVER

"I PUT great emphasis on good digestion," says Dorothy Poynton Hill, Camel smoker. "It's a long way down when I dive from the high board," Dorothy continues, "and if you add all the spins and twists I do—you can see why I enjoy Camels 'for digestion's sake.'"

Mealtimes (right), and between meals, too, Dorothy prefers Camels. "I smoke whenever I want to," she says. "Camels never jangle my nerves, and don't irritate my throat." By speeding up the flow of digestive fluids and increasing alkalinity, Camels give digestion a helping hand. Take your cue from the steady smokers. Make it Camels! They set you right!

PLAYING spectacular golf. Ralph Guldahl averaged less than 72 strokes for 65 rounds of medal play—a new record! Speaking of the strain of tournament golf, Ralph says: "Sure I like to smoke. But give me a cigarette that's mild. I mean Camels."

BOOSTER for Camels. "I love all outdoor sports," says Henrietta Donohue, an enthusiastic swimmer, golfer, and tennis player. "After going at top speed for several sets, I like to smoke a Camel. They are so mild, and yet I get such a delightful 'lift.'"



INFORMATION wanted quick! Ray Jones puts in long hours answering questions in Grand Central Terminal, N.Y. "A nerve-racking job," he says. "But I'm a good hand with knife and fork. Smoking Camels helps keep my digestion on the right track."

Bob Burns Says:

It's true that a good talker usually has a wide acquaintance, but if you want to have real close friends you have to be a good listener.

My Aunt Sofie Ledbetter joined a Ladies' Bridge Club down home one time, and the first meeting she attended she came home thoroughly disgusted. She said "I joined the club to play bridge, but all them women talked about was their operations." Uncle Hink says "Well, why didn't you tell 'em about your appendicits operation?" And Aunt Sofie says "I did, I led with that."

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Open Door Wanted.

The latest turn in the rumpus between the seven suspended lodges of the A. F. G. E. and the national office is the demand by the lodges for an open door to the room in which they will be tried Saturday morning by the A. F. G. E. executive committee.

The demand was bald faced, stinging and full of rebuke. The lodges intimated that they had none of Lot's inhibition—that they had a swell faculty for looking back. And looking back, they were full of thoughts of "five lodges who were denied reinstatement in the A. F. G. E. after a hearing which was a travesty on justice and more nearly resembled star chamber proceedings than it did a hearing conducted by a labor organization in the United States of America."

They were recalling the hearing accorded the five lodges given the pointed end of the boot by the Detroit convention.

It was a long letter which the seven lodges—officially the Committee Against False Economy—sent to the executive council of the A. F. G. E., the body that will sit in judgment Saturday morning. But the letter was sprightly, even if a trifle angered, and actually isn't bad hot weather reading. Hear some of it:

"Your persistence in sabotaging all efforts to fight false economy measures is the latest manifestation of your consistent policy of serving the interests of personnel and employment officials rather than those of the great body of Government employes. Among trade unionists, organizations dominated by such policies are called company unions.

"It also has been stated that some officials of the A. F. G. E. are using their high Government positions, not only to hamper activities in behalf of Government workers, but to discriminate against individuals who participate in such activity."

Now, and grimly, the Committee Against False Economy (they have had to surrender a lot of off-time pleasures recently to attend all the meetings they've called) sets its face and says: "Our path is clear. While we are ready to participate in a legitimate hearing of the charges against us, we shall pursue our efforts against the proposed economy measures, continuing to defend the welfare of the organized and unorganized Government employes." Their mass meeting, chief cause of the break with the national headquarters, will be held tomorrow night in the Willard Hotel. The speakers: Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, and Representative R. G. Allen, of Pennsylvania."

Gerald E. Lyons, general solicitor of the Farm Credit Administration, has just returned to Washington from Dubuque, Iowa, where he delivered a commencement address at Columbia College and received an honorary degree of doctor of law. He is the first layman to receive such a degree and the first alumnus to address a graduating class. Lyons was graduated from Columbia in the class of '13 and received a B. A. degree.

Someone writes in: "No longer do you need both a vacation and a blueprint to find the local TVA offices. For that Washington built unit has moved to more convenient location in the old Interior Building. Thus, no longer does the local TVA personnel—all ten of 'em—interrupt their work for 'the busiest Government agency by a dam site' to dash out of old Tempo Building F at the first sound of the periodic fire alarm." We congratulate them and share in their joy because that old F building was a mess of the first condition.

While trial and tribulation best certain of their brethren in another organization, the N. F. F. E. plugs quietly on—and just yesterday wigwagged: "Two more new local unions have just been chartered by the National Federation of Federal Employes. Local Union No. 613 has been organized among engineer employes of the War Department at Portsmouth, Ohio, and Local Union No. 614 is composed of Soil Conservation Service workers at Lockhart, Tex.

Capital Food Stores Close This Afternoon

Co-operation of the public in shopping either on Tuesday or Wednesday morning was asked yesterday by several food store firms which, beginning today, will grant a half-holiday to their workers on Wednesday through the summer.

Stores which will close on Wednesday afternoons, beginning today, will be the Sanitary Grocery Co., Atlantic & Pacific stores, the Giant Food Market, the New Center Market, American Stores and the Arcade Market.

2 Appointed For Posts on School Board

C. D. Drayton, Col. Hamilton Chosen for Vacant Trusteeships.

Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, President, Renamed for 3 Years.

The two new school trustees who will occupy places on the Board of Education after July will be Charles D. Drayton, Washington attorney, and Col. West A. Hamilton, active for many years in the Capital's colored civic and patriotic groups.

Both men received their appointments yesterday as justices of the District Court acted to fill pending vacancies on the board. Drayton succeeds George M. Whitwell, board member since 1931 who recently asked that he not be reappointed at the end of his term which expires June 30. Hamilton will occupy the chair left vacant by Dr. J. Hayden Johnson who also asked to be relieved of his membership when his term expires on the same date.

With these new appointments the justices also announced the reappointment of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board.

All to Serve Three Years.

All three appointees begin three-year terms next month.

Drayton has been a member of the District Bar Association since 1906, the year which followed his graduation from National University Law School.

Interested for many years in hospital welfare, Drayton is president of Children's Hospital and chairman of the Hospital Presidents' Committee. Recently he was named head of the newly formed hospital association, and served a recent United Hospital Appeal as chairman.

Drayton is married and his family, which includes a son and two daughters, lives at 2425 Kalorama road northwest. He is a member of the Chevy Chase Club. His law offices are at 1001 Fifteenth street northwest.

Because of a striking resemblance to Abraham Lincoln Drayton has frequently appeared at fancy dress events in the role of the Civil War President. He has a particular fondness for Shakespeare. Drayton was born in South Carolina.

Native of Capital.

Col. Hamilton belongs to more than a dozen civic organizations, and is an official in many of them. Born in Washington 50 years ago he is widely known here, and his name is closely linked with many projects for the advancement of his race.

Following his graduation from normal school here he taught in the public schools from 1907 to 1916. Then he served in the Army, first at the Mexican border, and later in France.

Returning to Washington, he became associated with his brother in the printing business, at 1333 U street northwest. He is a colonel in the Reserve Corps, and serves as a warden in St. Luke's Episcopal Church. He is vice president of the Community Center Council, was formerly a trustee of the Chest. He also is active in the Boy Scouts of America, the American Legion and the Masons.

Skyline Drive Free To Child Groups

From now on buses carrying Boy Scouts, school children and other "noncommercial" groups over Skyline Drive will not have to pay the usual $5 fee.

That is the order issued yesterday by Director Arno B. Cammerer, of the National Park Service, following complaints that sightseeing parties of school children had been denied the drive's scenic beauty because their bus driver didn't know about the $5 assessment.

Two bus loads of youngsters were turned back at Panorama, Va., last Sunday. Protests were lodged immediately with James R. Lassiter, superintendent of Shenandoah National Park, with headquarters in Luray. He communicated with Cammerer, who decided to exempt noncommercial sightseeing groups after consulting with George A. Moskey, assistant director in charge of land acquisition and regulation.

Cross-Country Hike to Find Husband Ends Here in Failure

Los Angeles Woman Arrives in D. C. With Bag Full of Bread and Poetry; Quest at Soldiers Home Is Vain.

Carrying a large oilcloth traveling bag stuffed with bread loaves and with poetry she had written herself, 63-year-old Anna Levin, of Los Angeles, arrived in Washington last night at the end of a 24-day "hitch-hike" from the West Coast.

She made the trip, she said, to find her husband—to whom most of the poems were addressed. She had a letter in her possession that said he was in the hospital at U. S. Soldiers Home, here.

"I have not seen him in seven years and it took a lawyer to find him," she said.

Although she was able to sell enough poetry to keep her in bread and to pay for lodging at an occasional tourist home, the trail east from California was not strewn with sunshine.

"I was picked up and put in jail one night, and plenty of people didn't want me to ride. Thought I was going to hold them up, I guess, and me half blind and deaf, too.

"I want to get a job at the home if I can, or get my husband out and take him home. If I don't find him now, I think I'm going to have a time—for my poetry don't sell much in big cities."

At the hospital the stooped old woman did not have the luck she expected.

"Is Morris J. Levin here?" she asked. It was after office hours and no one in the groups she questioned knew a thing about Levin.

She accepted a ride back to the city and said she'd come again "in the morning."

Sacred Heart Graduates 28; Awards Prizes

Father Heil Preaches Graduation Sermon at Academy.

Twenty-eight seniors of Sacred Heart Academy received their diplomas at commencement exercises and benediction services last night in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

The occasion was marked by the awarding of four prizes for scholastic achievement. Jessie Prince was winner of the gold medal for Christian Doctrine donated by Mgr. P. C. Gavan. Elizabeth Harris won second prize.

The Rev. Joseph McGee memorial gold medal for scholarship, donated by Mrs. B. Francis Saul, went to Margaret Frances Donovan, and Mabel Grace Lattin was awarded the Blanche May Golibert memorial gold medal for general excellence.

The Rev. Michael Heil, assistant pastor at Sacred Heart, presented the diplomas and preached the commencement sermon.

Junior Board Picks National Delegates

Eight members of the Junior Board of Commerce were appointed delegates to the organization's national convention in Denver, Colo., at a meeting last night in the Mayflower. The delegation was instructed to try to bring the 1938 national convention to Washington.

John S. Bleecker, jr., president of the local Junior Board heads the delegation which leaves Washington on Sunday. The other members are Minor Hudson, A. Z. Foster Wood, Lyle F. O'Rourke, Fred Linton, Walter McBroom, Jack Hayes, jr., and Dr. Robert Harper.

The meeting discussed programs dealing with national representation for the District, the possibility of a "big-brother" movement sponsored by the board, and a series of three music appreciation concerts next fall by the National Symphony.

Commissioners Propose D. C. Civil Service

Seal to Draft Bill, King Will Introduce It in Senate.

An independent civil service system for District government employes was proposed by the Commissioners yesterday, and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal was directed to draft a bill for Congress.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, has indicated willingness to introduce the proposed legislation, it was reported, and the Commissioners are hopeful of action during the present Congressional session.

Organized Washington civic groups, led by the Federation of Citizens Associations, repeatedly have advocated a local civil service system separate from the Federal program. District residents, civic officials contend, are entitled to and should have positions in the District government.

Under the United States Civil Service System, it was pointed out, Washingtonians would be subject to the quota policy for all States. Such a system, it is feared, would force District residents to step aside while out-of-towners are allotted jobs.

Except for policemen and firemen, the District now has no civil service status. School teachers also have their own merit system.

Police on Lookout To Warn Doctor Menaced by Death

Rochester, N. Y., June 8 (AP).—Somewhere west of Chicago on the automobile route to Los Angeles, authorities were on the lookout for Dr. Harold A. Cohn to warn him that he had been exposed unknowingly to spinal meningitis before his departure from here last Tuesday.

Dr. Cohn, en route to a new position at Los Angeles County Hospital, has been a radiologist for the past year in the laboratories of Strong Memorial Hospital here, where he worked on cancer research with Dr. Norman H. Baker, a fellowship student.

A few hours after Dr. Cohn left for the Pacific Coast his co-worker was stricken, and his illness was diagnosed as meningitis. He died Friday night.

Brown Tells Reason for Crime Rating

Same Person May Get Several Charges, He Explains.

Former Grand Juries Often Received Only Part of List.

Failure to present the grand jury with all cases charged against each individual criminal offender was blamed yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, for the "discrepancy" between reported crimes and convictions as detailed in the Washington Criminal Justice Association's first annual report.

In a memorandum on the association's findings, compiled at the request of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Brown explained this so-called "Willie Pye" system of presenting cases had been discontinued by arrangement with the district attorney's office and instructions to policemen.

Replying to Commissioner Hazen's assertion that the criminal justice report had given the District "a black eye it did not deserve," Maj. Brown said:

"The discrepancy between the number of charges and convictions is the result of a policy which has been in operation over a period of years. Individuals are arrested on several charges of criminal offenses and only two or three cases are presented to the grand jury. As a result, the defendant will be convicted of only the two or three while in many instances, 30 or 40 cases have been placed against a single individual."

Policy Changed.

Under an agreement with the district attorney's office, Maj. Brown added, evidence in all cases charged against a suspect is now presented for grand jury action.

Maj. Brown also submitted, without comment, a table comparing District felony offenses with those in several other large cities.

Washington ranked fifth in population among the cities chosen, the table revealed. It showed that Washington was first as to aggravated assault, first as to housebreaking, first as to grand larceny, second as to petty larceny, third as to auto thefts, third as to rape cases, second as to robberies, and fifth as to murder and non-negligent manslaughter cases.

"Statistics Misleading."

The other cities were Baltimore, Boston, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Minneapolis, New Orleans, St. Louis and San Francisco.

After reading the major's report, Commissioner Hazen declared:

"Washington's record is not as good as we would like to see, and we are trying to make improvements. But I couldn't believe it was as bad as indicated by the statement that 90 per cent of felony charges failed to result in convictions. Statistics are likely to be misleading unless they are analyzed."

A large percentage of housebreaking charges in Washington, Maj. Brown said, are due to the fact that under the District code, entering into an outhouse without stealing anything is considered a housebreaking. In other jurisdictions, he pointed out, a certain amount of property must be stolen before the offense is classed as housebreaking.

Hooe 'Resignation' Tabled by Hazen After Conference

The reported "resignation" of Rice Hooe, assistant corporation counsel in charge of Police Court, was temporarily tabled by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday.

Hooe appeared with his attorney, W. Gwynn Gardiner, before the Commissioners to protest against reputed suggestions that he resign his post.

Gardiner, as spokesman, cited Hooe's record as a prosecutor in Police Court and his standing as a member of the District bar. Hazen announced he would take the scheduled resignation "under advisement."

Reports that Hooe was to resign came after recent complaints against methods of handling traffic prosecutions in Police Court.

Prominent among candidates for Hooe's position should his resignation be accepted is Assistant Corporation Counsel George D. Neilson, who holds the Police Court record for convictions before a jury.

Two Young Capital Runaways Captured on Maryland Estate

John W. Hardell, Jr., Stanley Lister Go Back to School Today After Bicycle Jaunt Into Wide Open Spaces.

The career of John W. Hardell, jr., adventurer, has been interrupted but by no means terminated. Apprehended early in the course of his latest runaway attempt, the 10-year-old still has lots of ideas left. He expanded on them willingly yesterday at the receiving home on Potomac avenue.

John was brought to the home by the police from the estate of his uncle, William Crane, in Alta Vista, Md. He and his pal, Stanley Lister, en route by bicycle for Germantown, stopped Monday night to sleep in the upper story of the garage on the estate. They made the mistake of leaving their bicycles in plain view, however, and were discovered yesterday by Crane.

Stanley fled for home when he heard the police mentioned. John waited stoically, his mind occupied with a new scheme.

So far something has always turned up to thwart John's plans. The first time—that was when he was going to buy a boat and make a livelihood by fishing in the Potomac—he made the mistake of spending his money as fast as he saved it up. So he never bought the boat.

His second plan was to hop a tramp steamer for Europe. Preparations for his departure were well under way when his father learned of the projected voyage and asked what he was going to do about a passport. He hadn't thought of that and was immediately discouraged.

The boys conceived the latest idea jointly some weeks ago while planning to establish a cold-drink stand. Stanley thought they might make more money if they went out of town. John hit on the idea of migrating to a farm in Germantown owned by his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waters.

"I've always liked farms and camping," John explained. "I thought we could make some money working around for farmers, because I know how to plow."

John calculated that as they were going to live on a simple diet of apples and oranges and already were equipped with camping outfits, their expenses would not be very high.

John has learned a lot of the tricks of the adventure trade from the cowboy stories and other action fiction which he reads.

To conceal his destination, he hid the map with which he had plotted their course before leaving home. He knew that postmarks are clews also, so he planned to post his letters to his father, not in city mail boxes but in rural free-delivery receptacles along the way.

And because he is known in Alta Vista, he shielded his face with his arm as though the sun were in his eyes as they approached his uncle's estate Monday evening.

The boys had planned originally to wait until school was over before leaving home. John wasn't going to take any chances with destiny, however, so he checked on his horoscope. He discovered that for one born August 16, the early part of June is luckier than the latter part.

He has his doubts about the reliability of horoscopes now.

Both boys are members of a secret club, so secret that not even the name can be revealed to outsiders. They discussed their approaching journey with their fellow-members at Oyster School, where they are in the fifth grade, but could not induce the others to join them.

Stanley discovered Monday night that two cannot sleep as soundly as one in a sleeping bag, and retired to bed on arriving home.

The runaways will return to school today. John, whose father is treasure rof Barber & Ross, lives at 2226 Cathedral avenue northwest. Stanley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lister, 2848 Twenty-seventh street northwest. Lister is connected with the Farm Credit Administration.

Man Seriously Hurt In Freak Accident

Faucett was standing between his car and another car, both parked in front of 4243 Wisconsin avenue northwest. A truck struck his car and crushed him against the machine ahead. Both his legs were broken, his skull fractured and he was injured internally.

Police said the truck was operated by Milbie Locke, colored, 28, of 1341 Sixth street northwest. Locke was held on a charge of reckless driving.

Faucett was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where physicians said his injuries were critical.

Briton Allays Fear of Shift In Gold Status

Business Leaders Find Situation Abroad Is Hopeful.

By the United Press.

London, June 8.—Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, assured the House of Commons today that Great Britain would continue to buy and sell in the gold market to prevent any wide fluctuations in exchange rates.

Simon, bombarded by questions since the recent collapse in gold values, spoke to a crowded house as he said:

"I am glad of the opportunity of making this statement with the view of removing some of the misconceptions which have been prevalent. The British monetary policy remains as laid down by my predecessor (Neville Chamberlain) in his statement before the World Economic Conference in 1933, the declaration by delegates of the British Commonwealth at the same time and also in the tripartite agreement last September.

"No change in this policy is contemplated nor has one come before the imperial conference."

Accepted as "Bearish."

New York, June 8 (AP).—Wall street generally accepted as mildly bearish today the statement of Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, that Britain's monetary policy will not be changed.

The reaction was manifested more by sighs of relief than any immediate wave of purchasing in securities and commodities markets. In some of the latter there were light rallies and stocks were a little higher on small volume.

Real Trade Gains Cited.

New York, June 8 (AP).—Titans of industry, representative of wealth that dwarfed the $4,000,000 in gold bullion sealed below decks, returned on the liner Bremen today in common agreement that increased exports were the result of normally improved European trade and not of a scramble for war materials.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of the U. S. Steel Corporation, said Europe's armament program and the Spanish civil war were insignificant items in the United States trade balance. "We are not interested in those exports especially," he said. "There is a general increase in all lines of export."

Cornelius F. Kelley, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., attributed mounting copper exports to a broadening commercial use and plant expansion abroad. "I do not think," he said, "manufacturers of munitions are taking any consequental supply."

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corporation, said "trade agreements which lower barriers to free exchange of goods and services between nations * * * have improved our foreign trade."

Robbers Get $600 From Store Safe

Thieves, who evidently secreted themselves inside the building late yesterday robbed a safe of the District Wholesale Grocery Co. of $600, police were told last night.

Discovery of the robbery was made by the night watchman at the warehouse, J. M. Sweeney, and Policeman I. W. Mower. As the watchman and the officer strolled through the plant last night they noticed the safe was missing, and Mower, going to the third floor, found it in the center of thousands of dollars worth of groceries, its doors blown open.

Police said they thought the robbers had hidden in the plant, and sometime during the night took the safe upstairs in an elevator, where they pried the door and escaped with the money.

THE APPETIZING STORY OF Heinz 57 VARIETIES

REACHES WASHINGTON HOMES THROUGH THE WASHINGTON POST

Heinz advertising is written to appeal to the men and children of the family as well as the women. After all, Mother generally buys what Dad and the kids like to eat. That's why The Washington Post fits so well into the Heinz advertising program. The Post is edited to appeal to the whole family. Children like The Post for its clean, amusing daily and Sunday comics and for the Sunday "Parade of Youth." Men like The Post because, with the services of both Associated Press and United Press, it gives the widest news coverage, has excellent sports and financial news, and a Pulitzer Prize-winning editorial page. And women like The Post for its host of features written by and for Washington women—"Mary Haworth's Mail," Malvina Lindsay's "The Gentler Sex," Ethel Ehlen's fashion articles, Jessie Arndt's club news, Hope Riding Miller's society pages, Rebekah Blake's food articles, hints, menus and recipes, to name just a few. These are the things that make The Post "Washington's Home Newspaper"—and a wonderful advertising medium.

Gentlemen:

During the past four years, we have annually found it profitable to increase the amount of advertising space placed in newspapers throughout the country.

This policy has been more than justified by the steadily expanding sales of the 57 Varieties. We believe that the splendid co-operation of your merchandising staff in Washington has done much to add to the demonstrated effectiveness of The Washington Post as an advertising medium.

Because our past experience has taught us that most people like good things to eat, and depend on the newspapers for the latest food information, we again plan to increase our advertising schedule in these publications.

Intimate Story of Irish Hero Offered in "Parnell"; Coming Friday to Capitol With Clark Gable Starred

Champion of Home Rule for Ireland Was Visitor Here in 1880 and Addressed the Congress of the United States; Roadside Theater to Broadcast Scenes From It's First Production; Henderson on Junket; Notes.

BELL.

IT IS a minutely particularized story of the political and romantic life of Charles Stewart Parnell that is depicted in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the career of the Irish statesman that was unwound for the delectation of the local drama desks in the unchilled projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon.

The drama divides itself into two natural parts—one dealing with Parnell's courageous fight against Gladstone for home rule for Ireland; the other with his love for Katie O'Shea, wife of a political parasite, whose divorce almost wrecks his political prestige and power.

There is not a great deal of vivid action in this subject, but in the end it summarizes as a character study and pseudo-historical document that will hold some weight in the minds of those who are interested in the Emerald Isle's early fight for freedom from a complete British dominance. It seemed to me yesterday that much of the dialogue was not as incisive as it should have been, in view of the turbulent circumstances of state and love to which it pertained, but I may have been in the wrong mood for a picture that runs almost two full hours.

However, there can be no carping with the cast that has been employed to bring this epochal period of Irish history to the screen. With Clarke Gable in the title role, Myrna Loy, as Katie; Edna May Oliver, as Aunt Ben, and such actors in support as Edmund Gwenn, Alan Marshall, Donald Crisp, Billie Burke, Berton Churchill, Donald Meek, Montagu Love, Byron Russell, Brandon Tynan and Phillis Coghlan it seems hardly necessary to say that "Parnell" is superlatively well acted, even if slowly.

John M. Stahl's direction is evenly paced and in many of the scenes he achieves a degree of dramatic forcefulness that one suspects rather outdoes the strict demands of the working script.

There will be more of this item in these columns on Saturday, after the play has opened on the screen for the allotted run. That would be in the formal review which will particularize almost as much as "Parnell" itself does.

• • • •

It should be interesting to Washingtonians to know, or to be reminded of the fact, that on February 2, 1880, Charles Stewart Parnell, visiting in the United States, addressed the House of Representatives of this country. It may be that there still are living in Washington people who remember that historic occasion, or who have had it related to them by elders who cherished it in memory. If so, the management of Loew's Capitol would be glad to have them communicate with them so that they may be guests of honor of the house at Friday night's showing of the picture. It is, I believe, a little known fact to many that Parnell ever visited this country or that he was made one of the only three nonmembers ever invited to address our Congress.

It is additionally notable, in this connection, that as I write I have before me a photostatic copy of the front page of The Washington Post of Tuesday morning, February 3, 1880, which is entirely devoted to Parnell's appearance before the Congress. It is a solid page of type, reproducing in full his remarks and so closely printed that it is exceedingly hard to read. The story appears under the simple, one-column head of "Ireland's Champion." Mr. Parnell made quite a stir in the Capital, back there 57 years ago. He probably will do the same thing on the Capitol screen next week.

• • • •

We remarked here some days ago that Stephen E. Cochran seemed to be in earnest about his University of Maryland Summer Theater. We might say the same thing now about Katharine Cornell and her projected world-tour in repertoire.

On Saturday of this week, June 12, Ray Henderson, representing Miss Cornell, will leave New York for Los Angeles, preparatory to sailing on the S. S. Mariposa on June 23 to make a hurried trip around the world to investigate conditions and estimate the feasibility of the round-the-world tour the actress-manager is contemplating for the season of 1938-39. The first country to be visited will be New Zealand, after which the erudite Mr. Henderson will go on to Australia, Hawaii, Japan, China, the Philippines, Java, the Malay Straits, India, Egypt, Palestine and Europe, returning to New York toward the end of January.

Miss Cornell will end her present season in "Candida" and "The Wingless Victory" in Boston on June 19. She will not act again until next spring. If it is then decided that she shall make her world tour, she will make her preparations for her repertory company and open in the National Theater, in this city, on March 7. So now you know.

The expression akin to that of the cat that just swallowed the canary, being worn by that high-strung Southern gentleman, Mr. Sam Galanty, district manager of Columbia Pictures, may be attributed to the fact that he has only now been advised by his New York office that his Washington branch exchange is the winner of a $2,000 cash award for the best sales record of any exchange in America selling Columbia products. The prize, so Sam tells me, is to be distributed among all the members of the staff of the exchange, since all had a part in making the record that won it. For his own part, all he gets is an extra week in Hollywood this summer—three instead of the originally designated two—the lucky so-and-so!

A "preview" of "Wizard of the Waves," the opening melodrama of the new season of the Roadside Theater, will be broadcast over WRC Thursday night from 10:30 to 11 o'clock. Three scenes of the play will be delivered, but not the stirring climax—you will have to drive out the Rockville Pike to learn what that is all about.

The broadcast will be participated in by Ralph Fowler, Virginia True and Denis E. Connell, with entr'acte numbers by Janet Coons, Margaret Osterwald and Gene Kressin. It should be fun.

Casual-Observation Note.

Most everything should be fun—but so few things are!

Plays Role of Irish Statesman

When "Parnell" comes to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, the title role will be played by Clark Gable, whose familiar features appear above. The supporting cast is led by Myrna Loy, Edna May Oliver and Edmund Gwenn.

Contract Bridge

"Wouldn't that make you turn green?" asked South agonizedly. "That was as good a slam bid as I ever saw—and a long-shot break has to turn up!"

The kibitzers maintained a discreet silence—but not so North. That worthy proceeded to inform the disgruntled declarer that the slam could (and should) have been made. The hands were:

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ K Q 8 3 2 ♡ A K 5 ◇ A Q J ♣ J 6
♠ 9 ♡ J 10 9 3 2 ◇ 10 8 5 3 2 ♣ Q 10	North West East South	♠ J 10 7 6 ♡ 6 4 3 ◇ 9 7 4 ♣ K 8 5
	♠ A 5 4 ♡ Q 7 ◇ K 6 ♣ A 9 7 4 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 N T	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 N T	Pass	6 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

West led the Jack of hearts, and declarer counted his tricks. He could see 10 tricks that he could win with high cards and noted the two long cards in spades. When the spade suit failed to break South pulled a long face, and disgustedly conceded a spade and a club.

There was no reason for South to give up. It was true that the failure of the spades to break was a long shot; but there was another long shot that would have brought him victory had he only thought of it.

When the second spade revealed the bad break, South should have realized that his problem was to establish the club suit with the loss of only one trick. He should have visualized the five clubs out against him and tried to arrange them in such a way as to make it possible for him to develop the club suit with only one loss.

This would be possible if West held the ten-spot and either the Queen or the King. South's proper play was to lead a low club from his own hand toward dummy's Jack. If West should go up with his high card, the Jack of clubs could be led from dummy at the next opportunity. This would pick up West's ten and finesse East's high card. If West failed to put up his high card on the first club lead, but played the ten instead, dummy's Jack would knock out East's high card. The Ace would drop West's high card on the second round of the suit, and then the nine of clubs would be good for the third round.

As the cards were distributed the plan would have worked. West actually had the Queen and ten alone and a low lead from South's hand would have brought home the slam.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, June 8.

I have always said that too little honor is given supporting actors. Producers, critics and the public howl the praises of the Garbos, Gables and Temples, but there is little shouting in behalf of the Carrillos and Kibbees and Sparkses. But without such fine actors in secondary roles, what would pictures be?

LEO CARRILLO.

I receive countless letters from discerning theatergoers who choose their movies by the supporting players as well as by the stars. Just today came a letter from a woman who says that when her theater does not name the complete cast in its ads, she unfailingly telephones for that information. She will not attend a picture unless she is assured of seeing background favorites. No doubt there are millions of such fans.

Most successful photoplays owe 40 per cent credit to the players behind the star. Occasionally a movie will come along that is a one-man or one-woman affair, but these are rare. An average good picture is marked by several good performers, and as often as not the supporting players turn in better efforts than the star. For examples, Alice Brady and Mischa Auer in "My Man Godfrey" and Leo Carrillo in "History Is Made At Night."

A motion picture cast makes me think of a man-made building. Steelwork and mortar are the character players. The handsome outer veneer and perhaps the shining spire are the stars. Remove the steelwork and mortar—and veneer and spire would crumble.

In the Paramount gym yesterday I came upon George Raft hard at exercise, wet with his own perspiration. "Taking off 10 pounds," he grunted from a rowing machine. "Why?" I asked. Raft gave me a sultry look. "Maybe you don't know," he snapped, "but it's a hell of a job for a leading man to support two chins in this business."

Bob Burns tells me he is about to curtail his appearances at benefits. Always one of the first to respond, he surprised me with his "never again" declaration, but his explanation is perfectly logical. He says he was playing so many benefits that he was giving out of fresh material. Bob uses a great volume of stories for pictures, radio and his daily newspaper features, and he was "robbing Peter to pay Paul," that is, taking away from his duties to supply his benefits.

The Post's New Yorker — By LEONARD LYONS

". . . and I'm working harder for you on your home than I worked when I had a job—and with you I've got no social security either . . . What? Why'm I puttin' on my sheerest stockings? Because—these days a girl never knows when she'll run into Earl Carroll!"

12 P. M. "We were at the Little Pole first," Admiral Byrd insists at the Paradise, "and now the British are claiming it. They claim everything, don't they?" . . . "I'm going back to Spain," Ernest Hemingway reveals at "21." "That Errol Flynn yarn? All phony. Sidney Franklin and I arranged to get him a pass to visit the front. Flynn was supposed to meet us at the hotel. But he was in Valencia, a thousand miles away, when the newspapers spilled that phony story about his being wounded."

1 A. M. "That's a funny situation in 'The Women,'" an agent points out at the Cotton Club. "In the play Ilka Chase is supposed to glare frequently at Margalo Gilmore, who glares back. Those glares are real—because Ilka is running on that Independent Ticket in the Equity elections—against Frank Gilmore, Margalo's dad." . . . Margot Stevenson enters the Tavern and plays Hi-Li in the foyer . . . "Did you know?" Ted Husing queries. "The word 'putrid' no longer is in the Harvard dictionary!"

2 A. M. "I just left Michael Farmer," a blueblood relates at Mori's. "He was proposing to Honey Johnson and they made plane reservations to elope. Then Farmer spoke some words in French to Woolworth Donohue and the elopement was off." . . . "Ethel duPont and Franklin Roosevelt just blue-penciled their wedding list to a minimum," Meyer Davis testifies. "Now it includes only 1,000 guests." . . . "Greta, I cannot be acceptin' any American movie offers or contracts now," Sir Harry Lauder explains to his niece at the Ambassador. "D'ye not see it is almost time for me t'be gettin' hawm for the annual farewell tour?" . . . John L. Lewis stalks into the St. Regis, and the band misses a note. "Believe me, Mr. Lewis," Bandleader Jules Lande assures, "my men are all union members in good sitting."

3 A. M. "I just left Louis B. Mayer out on the coast," a film notable confides at Bill Bertolotti's. "I told him about that picture of his that flopped. Mayer said, 'That's not a flop. It's just the worst success we ever had!'" . . . Dave Burnstine, one of the 4 Aces, seats himself at the Versailles bar and explains: "I just put two and two together—and there's a bridge game" . . . "New York showgirls," Charles B. Cochrane informs at Barney Gallant's, "are mysterious and foreign—like caviar and chop suey" . . . "I saw Gypsy Rose Lee and she doesn't know whether she likes having her name changed," Cary Grant reports at the Hollywood. "She says we won't be able to know who she is—unless we look at her" . . . "Just look at your complexion," Martha Mears tells a Broadway columnist. "You could pose—for a bottle of milk." . . . "The New Masses isn't listing any Recommended Movies," an editor states at Tony's, "for the duration of the strike in Hollywood."

4 A. M. Lady Furness and Gloria Vanderbilt shake their heads when a photographer approaches their table at Larue's. "We'll be very cross with you if you take our pictures," Mrs. Vanderbilt warns. "I know," the camera man replies, "but my boss will be crosser with me if I don't." . . . "I don't know the Duke of Windsor," Gloria Swanson tells Neil Hamilton at the Savoy-Plaza, "but I hope that Wallis is luckier in marriage than I've been." . . . "I can put anybody's name on the front pages," Publicist Steven Hannegan assures at the Stork Club. "Of course, I won't guarantee that he'd speak to me later—but I'll get that name on any front page I want to." . . . "Dave is going to Hollywood to be an actor," Mrs. Dave Wilentz assures,

"SO I ASKED CANTOR why he insists on that extra million. The Government gets it anyway," Johnnie Hyde, the agent, relates. "So he said, 'I know it—but I want the pleasure of giving it to the Government myself.'"

5 A. M. "Margaret Crume, our palm-reader, was kept late tonight," the headwaiter at Monseigneur's relates. "Because Scudder Middleton, associate editor of Stage, called her to his table—and then read her palm." . . . "When I wrote 'Swanee' with George Gershwin," Irving Caesar reminisces at the Uptown House, "a poker game was going on in the next room. The winners, who wanted to go home, assured us that the song was fine as is. But the losers, who wanted the game to continue, kept telling us the song needed revision. We were lucky the losers got even, else we would have revised the song into a flop." . . . "In Germany," a newcomer whispers at the French Casino, "they say that Hitler, Goering and Goebbels were walking and spied a beautiful trimotored plane above. Hitler nudged Goering and sighed: 'I wish we had 5,000 of those planes.' Goering turned to Goebbels and said: 'Look, Goebbels—Adolf wants us to disarm!'"

6 P. M. ". . . so go ahead and raid the ice box before you go to bed. That's what it's for, dear . . . What? There aren't enough tomatoes—and you like tomatoes? . . . Well, I'll remember that. Of course I'll remember you like tomatoes—when you decide to play Loew's State!"

Irish to Show Movies Of Windsor's Wedding

Dublin, June 8 (U.P.)—The Irish Free State having boycotted the coronation films of King George VI, has decided to show newsreel pictures of his brother, the Duke of Windsor, getting married.

The wedding pictures, boycotted throughout the rest of the United Kingdom, are expected to draw thousands from Northern Ireland, where the coronation films were shown. Thousands of Free Staters went north to Belfast to see the coronation pictures.

Chicken Meal At Night Spot Attracts Many

Boulevard Farms Also Offers Two Nightly Entertainments.

By Chanticleer

Take a tip from this weathered night-owler and drive out to the Boulevard Farms tonight. Get out of the house and into the old bus and head for the Mount Vernon highway. Drive along the Potomac River and take your share of the fresh and cool ozone that is available to all the city folks. Down the road a spell, through Alexandria and stop at the sign of Boulevard Farms. Once inside the Farm just yell, "give me a chicken dinner." The mortality rate of these feathered delicacies is higher now than ever before in the history of the Farm. Sit in comfort and enjoy the best dinner available.

And then there's Phil Lorria. He leads the Farm's orchestra, Phil and his boys are perfectly aware of the heat around the city and they just can't wait to go to work each night. There's entertainment, too, and because of the demand for more entertainment from the guests, the Farms are offering two nightly shows each Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Mayfair Celebrates.

They're celebrating over at the Mayfair all this week. Seems like they are always celebrating over at that place. I mean, that, anytime we go around, or rather down, to the Mayfair everyone is celebrating and having fun. But this celebration is a special, special occasion. Jack Campbell, the fellow that keeps singing all the time while you attend the club, is celebrating his 100th consecutive week at the Mayfair. Last week was the tentury mark, but he liked it so well that he wants a return engagement of the hundred weeker. Jack has a new baby grand piano, too, which was brought in for the special event. Visit this downtown oasis and be sure to give the by-word . . . "I want cheer, comfort and cool weather." 'Cause that's what you are rewarded with, when you enter the Mayfair.

Lotus Has Cooling System.

Just to keep up with their usual accommodations of the patrons, the Lotus Restaurant has now in operation, one of the largest air-conditioning and cooling systems in Washington. Every square inch of the interior of the large quarters is treated equally by the cool breezes. You can be assured of a cool, comfortable atmosphere at all times. The Lotus reports to the Chanticleer that record crowds are visiting this gay night spot these hot days. Not only do they come to escape the warm streets but to get an eyeful of the "Al Norton Cocktails," which is their way of saying: "Bevy of Beauties."

The "Cocktails" have been held over this week and have a set of new routines and dance novelties. Emcee Al Norton is quite proud of the lassies who comprise the girl Rhumba team. Brinson and Hart do some mighty fine and fast stepping to delight the audience with their rhumba-fashioned dances. Then there's Vincent and Norma, dance stylists who introduce something that is really quite different in the way of ballroom dancing. Pay particular attention to the style employed in ending each routine.

'Drummer Boy' Here.

They've got a "drummer-boy" out at the Wardman's Metronome Room. He's called "Colonel" Joe Wubbold, but he would rather be called "Chief Drummer Boy." For a real treat, ask the Colonel to play your hit tune on the vibraphone, which he tingles during intermission of Jimmie Satmeyer's orchestra. Jimmie informs that "Where or When" is number one on his request list any old night. This delightful tune is from the new Rogers-Hart musical "Babes in Arms." The Santmeyer ensemble plays it in many variations, too. The good-ole air-conditioner is still doing wonders at the Metronome Room and you are assured of comfort at anytime.

First Lady's Protege.

Probably the outstanding solo entertainer here in Washington this week is one Roberta Jonay, a pretty miss, who does a toe waltz, a modern dance, a Hungarian gypsy dance, a swing, a voo doo satire and a flower waltz. Now, you'll have to admit that this is quite an accomplishment. But the real accomplishment is the manner in which Miss Jonay acquits herself. The young lady was the house guest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the First Lady visited the Shoreham Terrace to see her "protege" perform. She "enjoyed it all." Marion Wilkins and Jack Walters continue to please with their routine.

A Swing Tale.

If No. 1 trumpeter with Benny Goodman had never walked into the Madrillon the other night this would never have happened. But he did, and herein lies the tale. The Goodmanite came into the club while the boys were airing a hot swing tempo. We've yet to find out what happens when a Benny Boy hears another outfit playing swing . . . but out of the place he ran . . . and was back just as fast . . . but this time with Benny Goodman in person. It seems, but we don't hold fast to this theory, that the Swing-timers are always on the lookout for a new type swing rendition, and when the No. 1 trumpeter heard Johnny and his boys he was so pleased that he had to call Bennah himself. Benny, too, was pleased.

Third Vanishes Near Scene of Keene's Death

Passenger Disappears After Talking to Officer of Bay Boat.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 8.—Thomas A. Bailey, secretary of the Baltimore, Crisfield & Onancock Steamboat Line, said today that Joseph Sekays, a passenger, disappeared from the ship Lexington in Chesapeake Bay on Sunday.

Sekays was the third person to disappear from bay boats in the last three weeks. Charles Keene, missing from a Washington-Norfolk boat, was found dead in the water a week ago. A woman leaped from another Norfolk-Washington boat late Sunday.

Bailey said that Sekays gave a Baltimore address when he boarded the Lexington at Crisfield. This was at 6 p. m. Saturday. At 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning Sekays talked to the second officer. He was not seen again after that. There was no disorder in his stateroom.

The body of Mrs. Harriet Larkin Scott, who leaped from the steamer Northland Sunday, was identified yesterday by her husband, Herbert Scott, after it was recovered from the waters of Chesapeake Bay, according to Chief of Police Hubert A. Blalock, of Portsmouth, Va.

Mrs. L. A. Broughton, jr., of Portsmouth, a member of the party, said passengers aboard the steamer told them they were occupying the cabin occupied by Keene.

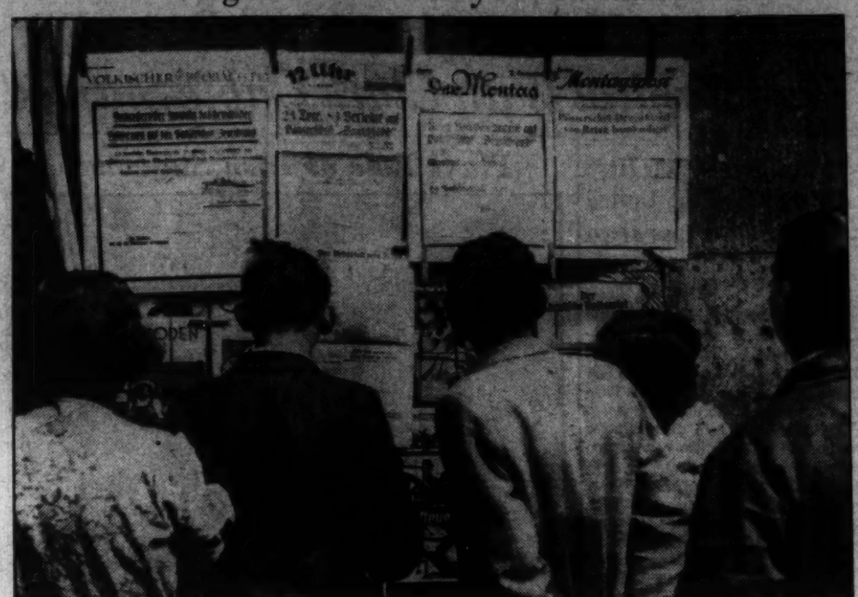
Mrs. Broughton said remarks were made by passengers a few moments before her sister leaped that the boat was passing the point at which Keene's body was found. Relatives said they could advance no reason for Mrs. Scott's act other than that the conversation among the passengers concerning Keene may have had a power of suggestion for her.

Officially Called Murder.

Murder remains the official diagnosis of the disappearance of Charles F. Keene it was stated last night by State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddrix, of Somerset County, Maryland.

He indicated that the original decision of a Maryland coroner's jury would stand, and the case go down in the records as murder, despite the final determination of District and Maryland State police.

Bombing Is 'Smash' Story for German Press



In Berlin, front pages of the newspapers were ruled in heavy black and entirely devoted to the bombing of the battleship Deutschland the day after the incident which took place in Spanish waters near Iviza. Here eager readers crowd close to a newsstand display board.

Unidentified Body Is Found in River

Late last night police had failed to identify the body of a white man found floating in the Anacostia River yesterday afternoon 1 mile north of Benning Power Plant.

Detective Sergt. Jerry Flaherty said one of three persons whose names were found on a slip of paper in the man's pants pocket had been reached by phone, but said he did not recognize the description of the man.

Described as "about 50, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds, and dark-haired," the victim is believed to be a resident of Virginia. The slip of paper bore the names of John Dodd and Marymie Dodd, both of Oak Grove, Va., and Fred Zednick, of Nebraska.

Scheuer Heads C. of C.

On the Air Today

When the Quins broadcast over C. B. S. on their third birthday, the microphone wasn't as big a shock to them as most people might think. In fact, the babies are pretty nonchalant about microphones by now. They've been living with one practically from the time they were born. It's a small microphone and very sanitary looking, painted white and constantly sterilized. But it works.

It's connected up to a recording machine in another portion of the nursery and all the baby noises, laughter and chatter that the five little girls have ever made is now a permanent possession of Dr. Dafoe. All of these records are kept on file, so that medical science may study the progress of the famous Quins.

Fred Allen's talent parade marches on and tonight at 8 over WRC his Town Hall program will introduce two new musical microphone groups and a red-headed Irish tenor. As the initial "premiere" of his broadcast, Host Allen will introduce Four Queens and a Jack, who have individually performed on the radio before. Recently they decided to blend their voices and the outcome is a very delightful vocal team. The other musical group is Joe and Jack, a two-guitar, two-banjo duo. They switch from banjos to guitars and back again, then mix the instruments with hot pickings of any kind of music.

Andy Hayes is the tenor. He started his musical career as a member of the Notre Dame Glee Club. He will feature a medley of typical Irish songs as a special tribute to his host, whose real name is John F. Sullivan. The Mighty Allen Art Players will attempt to answer the question: "What is so rare as a day in June?"

Jessica Dragonette will sing "Alice Blue Gown," the favorite song of millions and her own, too, tonight, WJSV, at 9:30. It has become a tradition with her to sing the song every six months on her program for the past ten years, and every time the selection is sung she purchases a new gown for that particular program. This will be the twenty-first rendition of the musical love story, "Irene," by Miss Dragonette. Supporting her in the presentation of the story and score will be Charles Kullman, Metropolitan Opera tenor, and a symphonic orchestra under the direction of Al Goodman. "Irene," first presented at the Vanderbilt Theater in 1919, enjoyed a run of 670 performances.

Peggy Wood introduces a new series of her own broadcasts this afternoon at 1:45, WMAL. Under the title of Peggy Wood Calling, the series will include song recitals, dramatic readings, playlets and guest stars.

The American Medical Association meeting in convention this week at Atlantic City will offer its first broadcast to the American public at 5:15 this evening, WMAL. Dr. W. W. Bauer, director of the Bureau of Health and Public Instruction of the association, will speak on "Convention News and Highlights."

The world's greatest swindler and counterfeiter, "Count" Victor Lustig-Miller, who was termed by American and European police as "the most dangerous confidence man extant," will be the theme of tonight's Gang Busters program. The dramatization is being presented in two installments and the next episode in the life of the "count" will be presented a week from tonight. The station is WJSV and the time, 9 p. m.

Dramatization of the inception and building of the Grand Coulee Dam in the State of Washington. WJSV, 7 p. m.

Guest Susanne Fisher on the Hit Parade. Miss Fisher is a three-time winner of scholarships to the Juilliard Graduate School. WRC, 9 p. m.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, will discuss immigration problems over WJSV at 9:45 tonight.

Andre Kostelanetz will present a musical tribute to moviedom's Popeye, Betty Boop, Mickey Mouse and Felix, the Kat, WJSV, 8 p. m.

Here and there: Picture Sidney Lenz, a bridge expert, reading his radio script backwards on a re-broadcast the other day. He had left the script in 3-2-1 order after the morning program and forgot to rearrange it . . . Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, of "Happy Am I" fame, receives about 300 pieces of mail each week . . . Gracie Allen's idiocies and George Burns' exasperated comments are being translated into French, to the delight of 50,000,000 Frenchmen or so . . . Jack Benny has carefully stowed away in a safety deposit vault a copy of every script that he has ever done on the air.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What in the world is wrong with boys of today? You may think that an odd question, but I mean it in all seriousness. Recently I have gone out with several young men, none of whom seemed to have any moral principle whatsoever. They seem to believe that ultimate intimacy in courtship is necessary for discovering the proper mate. I have been reared by Christian parents and subscribe to the Christian way of living myself, while enjoying wholesome good times as much as any boy or girl my age. Yet these boys seem to think because I stick to my early training, that I am prudish and hopelessly old fashioned. All of them seemed to be nice boys on casual acquaintance—but in every instance advances were made. One boy is a minister's son and is himself studying for the ministry. You can't imagine my surprise when I went out with him.

• • • •

It seems that young men of today take girls out just for their own amusement. I'm sure that I'm speaking for others in saying this. I've never gone steady with any boy, for when I happen to like one and go with him a few times, I am eventually faced with this same situation. I must explain, however, that not every boy I know is like that; but all the ones who might have interested me were.

• • • •

I am 18 years old, a high school graduate, and am considered very attractive. I suppose such advances are the penalty one pays for being pretty. But don't you think I am right in remaining faithful to my own beliefs, and in trying to live a really decent life? If you think I am right, won't you please make a plea to boys of today to treat decent girls with more respect? Thanking you for whatever help you can give me, I am, sincerely, LORRAINE.

• • • •

What To Believe.

DEAR LORRAINE: Just as one swallow does not make a summer, neither does the disappointing conduct of a few persons in any group necessarily place the whole of their contemporaries under indictment. I am sure if the truth were known, or if your social contacts were sufficiently ample, you would find that not all boys of today subscribe to the pagan standards you impute to them. Before attempting to answer your letter, I made it my business to talk with several college boys.

• • • •

One was inclined to believe you may be "imagining things;" in other words, investing your various suitors' advances with a vicious significance not intended. Another said that whereas some boys may, at times, make unconventional address to girls, usually they have no well-thought-out reason for doing so, and if tactfully put right in the matter, usually are perfectly willing to continue the friendship on a completely above-board basis, providing the girl who puts them right "has something else on the ball besides sex appeal." Still another said that the majority of men his own age (he is in his early twenties) were more convential-minded than some of the girls he knows; and that he could name several (though he didn't) who would have an attack of the jitters at the thought of indulging in compromising conduct with a girl. "And I mean fine fellows: popular, respected, intelligent and capable," he amplified.

• • • •

I talked with another man, a few years out of college and happily married to a girl he courted all through college in the old-fashioned way. "I guess I must have been a 'good boy,'" he laughed, "but one of my better friends went in for conquests. I remember three separate occasions when he came into my room, closed the door against intruders, and admitted he was 'in a jam with a girl.' He's been married twice. The first marriage lasted three months . . ."

• • • •

This man said that one's social experiences usually reflect the company one keeps, and that while he was in college it was his impression that most of the fellows were conventionally-minded and morally straight. Reviewing the scene in retrospect, he now is convinced that about 50 per cent of the student body lived much the same life he did, while the other half lived the life of the boy who was frequently "in a jam."

Incidentally, on a recent evening I was mildly chided for "the sometimes boring morality" of this column's advice, by a charming, gifted and worldly woman whose opinion I value. Whereupon a gentleman, who happened to be standing by, interjected this most reassuring remark: "But didn't you know that morality's coming back into fashion?" And while the conversation was altogether in fun, I think it contained considerably more than a grain of truth.

• • • •

Most of us live to learn that morality is the most becoming, as well as the most enduring and protective garb for the soul. But in every generation of youth there is a certain percentage of youngsters with untrained tastes, plastic characters and badly educated minds who go overboard in pursuit of half truths. Fortunately for the race, the majority of these will-o'-the-wisp chasers will usually be found hailing the prosaic, time-honored, old-fashioned virtues as lifelines in the end. The unrepentant minority goes drifting aimlessly, swept hither and yon by recurrent waves of undisciplined emotion.

• • • •

I wonder if your taste in men isn't largely responsible for your disillusioning experiences. You say: "Not every boy I know is like that; but all the ones who might have interested me were." If, as it appears, you are attracted to a type of man whom you know from experience is more audacious than respectful, it seems the readiest cure for your distress is to revamp your taste in men. Either that, or develop such poise, charm and serene self-assurance—based on a profound dedication to a higher way of life—as will hold their devotion while inspiring their reform. It would, in my opinion, be both farcical and tragic to betray your beliefs in the hope of acquiring transient popularity. Only a pathetically uninformed woman would attempt to win a husband or a sweetheart by the granting of pre-marital intimacy. It is persons who make physical attraction, and that alone, the basis for marriage who are continually journeying from preacher to divorce court and back again.

M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem

Girl asks how to live down tragic moral mistake and overcome ill-starred love for young man who tells her he doesn't love her and will never love or marry any girl. Her problem will be discussed here tomorrow. This column appears Sunday and daily.

A Versatile Suit and the Designer

Harris & Ewing.

'Know Your Silhouette,' Advice Of Washington Dress Designer

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

WOMEN are becoming more and more clothes conscious, but the average woman knows absolutely nothing about her figure. It isn't that she has bad taste, but she doesn't play her silhouette to advantage—she thinks more of the clothes than how they are going to harmonize with her figure. This is the contention of Marian Halstead, instructor in design at the National School of Fine and Applied Arts, and one of the leading young designers of Washington.

In her own designing and in her teaching, Miss Halstead believes that line leads every other phase of dress creation. "No two figures are exactly alike," she commented. "They may have the same measurements, but there the similarity ends. Shoulders, hips and the like, being different in each figure, make for an entirely different silhouette.

In Miss Halstead's classes, the students, to insure well-fitted lines, use the la junelle (twin sister), which is fashioned of molded paper strips, covered with a light-weight jersey. The students drape materials overe these mannequin-like figures, both for designing clothes and fitting them.

"In creating original models, the French draping method is the most satisfactory," Miss Halstead explained. "We create the designs first, drape the material on the 'dummies,' and then do the sketching in the chosen color themes." The fewer number of pieces in a gown, the better the lines, and the more striking the creation, this designer maintains. Her latest frock according to this plan, is made of just three pieces of cloth. "If I see that a student has unusual creative ability, I do all that I can to foster originality and initiative," she said. "The best results are obtained when a student is allowed to be natural in designing, rather than strictly adhering to a lot of rules and time-worn regulations."

As to sources of inspirations, Miss Halstead has this to say: "If you are creative at all, you really don't know what gives you ideas for designs. Keeping up with current events, fashion influences and style trends; going back into the history of costuming; keeping abreast of the ideas of both Paris and American designers and fashion authorities—all these help to keep a designer prolific in designing ideas."

The person is far more important than the clothes she is wearing, Miss Halstead pointed out. But, when the lines and color are wrong, then the individuality is submerged, and the clothes become the paramount issue. In other words, if a person is well-groomed, there is perfect harmony between costume and personality—with the individual taking precedence over the clothes.

"Only good materials are worth the effort it takes to design and fashion the costume, maintains this designer; a pleasing design which flatters the figure, should be created with the idea of wearing it for several years. "For instance," she said, "I have a suit I have worn for three seasons and it is still smart and distinctive. Original creations are designed for indefinite wear not just nonchalantly donning for two or three special occasions."

In regard to skirt lengths, Miss Halstead contends there is a certain line on the leg which determines the length of the skirt for each individual—find that line and wear your skirts longer or shorter, accordingly, and in spite of a prevailing skirt length of a mode.

"Balancing the figure is the main issue in creating a costume for any occasion," Miss Halstead continued. "Plan the lines and color scheme, so that they do the most for your figure's idiosyncrasies." In a recent exhibition at the National School of Fine and Applied Art, the costumes designed, made and worn by the students, showed the influence of all the varied design ideas sponsored by their instructor.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MABEL has been busy on her side porch the last few days. We've had glimpses of her through the trees that dip between her house and our study window. So we were dying so go by and get a good look at things.

We found that she had bought two new porch chairs—reed with beige cushions—a new green porch rug and a new green slat-type roll awning for one side to complement the beige and green striped canvas awning that she already had. She had kept her old wicker settee, making new beige cushions for it, and had brushed up the wicker table to match it. For this she had bought a new tray, quite a big one with a glass over the bottom and firm wicker handles so that a load of refreshments can be carried out and served right from the tray set on the table. She uses natural color stone wave cookie jars and pitchers, with green linen napkins fringed all around, and green glassware.

Mabel is a nice hostess anyway, so you can imagine what pleasant afternoons and evenings her family and friends will have here during the outdoor months. In the evenings she uses fat candles in old-time hurricane chimneys. They give a pleasant shadowy light that's adequate for any need here but reading. And as Mabel remarked about the candle light, "A lady should always remember to flatter herself without actually bringing the subject up. Well, Mabel's husband dotes on her, so take your choice!

But there are lots of other becoming things you could do for summer comfort. We like a wrought-iron table with a glass top—this will reflect a pot of flowers in its base effectively, can hold magazines and cigarettes and that pitcher of iced tea and will do double duty as an out-door dining table. Chairs should be bought primarily for complete relaxation. The Adirondack variety are tilted just right for comfort but are a little hard, so invest in one or two beach mats to pad them.

Prizes Offered For Favorite Picnic Recipes

DOES YOUR family have some pet picnic dish that no outdoor meal would be complete without?

Surely you do have such a traditional or original recipe tucked away in your file that, if submitted in The Post Recipe Contest this week, might win some spare cash for you. The prizes for this contest are $3 for the winner, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional winners.

As a suggestion, your recipe may be for potato salad, baked beans, macaroni and cheese, jellied cold meat, stuffed tomatoes, deviled eggs, kidney bean salad, chicken salad, chocolate cake, meat loaf, ambrosia, baked apples, sandwich filling or escalloped potatoes.

Whatever your recipe may be, copy it neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post food editor, so she will receive it not later than Saturday morning. Write your name and address clearly on your recipe.

Only one recipe may be submitted by each contestant.

Make-up for Spring.

Perc Westmore, Hollywod make-up expert, has experimented and found the ideal make-up shades for the neutral grays and beiges of spring. He recommends rosy powder; rouge, lipstick and nail polish with a rose cast; and green or violet eyeshadow sparingly applied.

Recipe Contest

The winners of the recipe contest featuring favorite strawberry dishes, held by The Post, will be announced on this page later in the week. The winning recipes will also be published.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 8.

EVERY SEASON in this town has its compensations, which is, of course, the only reason we are able to exist at all without being carted off to the tannery or the loony-bin. Thus, even as the red-hot pavements of Fifth avenue blister our pinkies, the trans-Atlantic sailing furor leaps into high gear and furnishes us with many a pranksome hour.

ALICE HUGHES.

Only the other day, with the mercury flirting with 90 and up, the gallant Normandie came snouting up the Hudson with a wondrous cargo. The Glamorous Morgan twins, Gloria Vanderbilt and Lady Furness, came back from the Coronation wearing their favorite black wool jacket costumes, complete with silver fox, and looking lovely as ever. Blonde Glenda Farrell represented Broadway, and so did the perennial Gloria Swanson, who positively gets younger by the clock. Gloria, showing that matchless dental display, received the press in a simple two-piece dress. Her hat was a natural straw fedora with a brown band. And she was in tip-top form, for years of experience and good horse-sense have taught her how to handle the prying Fourth Estate. The reporters down the bay all dote on her.

For instance, one news-sleuth nearly felled the rest of us by asking her age. But it didn't slow up Swanson, who promptly replied "38." This set the more catty of us to figuring. But she entered films at 15—which would be 23 years ago, according to her figures. I for one, won't quarrel with the reckoning. She's too good a fellow—and what's a year or two between friends?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There's a rumor rushing around the heated city that sumptuous Mary Lewis, formerly a light of opera, is to divorce her millionaire spouse, Bob Hague, after six years together. Career trouble is the story. It is said that Mary wants to emerge from her retirement and again trill in the spotlight, brushing up on her Wagner. She and is now in Oslo, Norway, sang a week at a local night club last winter—and it is said Mr. Hague didn't care much for the idea . . .

The stork was about to drop in at the home of Mrs. Sally Graham, of here, a few days ago, and it behooved her sister, Mrs. Dorothy Legault, to make a rapid move. So she dashed into the street and pulled the lever of the nearest box she found—which brought fire engines, a carload of cops and a gas emergency squad, but no doctor. A lenient judge forgave Mrs. Legault for this breach of the peace—and later a seven-pound daughter arrived at the Graham home . . .

With the meeting at Belmont Race Track over, we style snoopers are checking up on what the well-dressed girl is wearing in the paddock this season. Some of our noted horsewomen are among the best dressed women I know—notably Mrs. Dodge Sloane, owner of the great Cavalcade. Another pair are the Whitney wives, Gladys, wife of "Sunny," and "Liz," spouse of "Jock." Many a girl, seeing such golden ladies at the track, rushes home and does a fast bit of copying and they couldn't find better models for spectacular sports duds!

Prowling the bathing suit counters, I find that the Javanese prints continue to be very popular among the dressier beach girls. I saw a beauty the other day in black, brown and cream. Dandy under an umbrella, no doubt, but I'd hate to spoil it with nasty old seawater. Strictly for loungers!

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

A Safe Food for Baby.

NOT SO VERY long ago the summer time was one to be dreaded for the sake of the young baby. Weaning was put off until fall because experience taught young parents that if the baby was weaned during the hot months, it promptly had a serious attack of summer diarrhea. This was due entirely, of course, to milk contaminated by germs. It was only about 1886 that the sterilization of milk by boiling was suggested as a public health measure, although mothers had been scalding milk before giving it to babies for centuries.

Today, at any rate, there is no reason why weaning should not be carried out in the summer as well as any other time. The battle for clean milk has been won. The mothers of today have many kinds of milk to choose from.

Certified is pure raw milk that has been produced under ideal conditions of hygiene and cleanliness. A dairy that is certified by the Association of Medical Milk Commissioners must have a healthy herd, which has been tuberculin tested. The employes who handle certified milk are periodically examined, and every precaution is taken to milk the herd under ideal conditions of cleanliness.

In spite of all these precautions, physicians usually prefer to recommend that infants use pasteurized milk. This has been heated enough after collection to kill off all dangerous germs, but not enough to change basically the composition of the milk. If there is any doubt about the purity of the milk, it should be boiled. This kills all germs, but does change the composition of the milk, precipitating the protein, etc. This, however, is not a drawback and really makes the milk more digestible. Prof. Washburn refers to "the sweet taste of safety" in boiled milk. Children who have had boiled milk from infancy prefer it to raw milk.

Canned milks are available in many forms. Evaporated milk is good, clean milk that has been evaporated so that half its water has been removed. It is condensed in a vacuum and then homogenized by forcing it under pressure through fine nozzles. After the milk has been cooled and canned, it is sterilized in the can. All that is necessary to get it again in the form of whole milk is to add an equal amount of sterilized water. The mother or housewife may be assured that in using evaporated milk she is getting the very best grade of milk possible from the standpoints both of nutritive qualities and cleanliness.

Other processed milks are Klim and Dryco. These are evaported down to a powder. It is very interesting to see them manufactured: the milk is shot into a hot chamber and the dried flakes fall to the floor, resembling a snowstorm. The dry powders are simply added to water in the proper proportion to obtain good wholesome milk. No one would ever think of going camping for any length of time without taking along a few cans of powdered milk.

Condensed milk differs from evaported milk in that pure granulated sugar has been blended with it before the condensing process.

Editor's Note: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instruction for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Learn Culture at Home

UNEDUCATED Ruth drudges in her dreary rut. Cultured Nancy climbs to success. Yet these two girls started on the same level.

Both left school early to earn their living. But Nancy, determined that lack of culture should not hamper her, goes on with her education at home.

She has such fun filling out gaps in her knowledge — it doesn't seem like work at all. She gets tips on subjects to study from newspapers, radio and movies.

"House Considers Constitutional Amendment," the headlines say. So Nancy brushes up on the Constitution and the amendment system. Here she's delighting Jim with the story of Ben Franklin at the Constitutional Convention. Younger delegates had to go everywhere with Franklin, a gossipy old soul, to keep him from spilling convention secrets.

Before a symphony or opera broadcast she finds out all she can about the composer and the story back of the music. This increases her enjoyment of the concert and helps her chat knowingly with musical people.

No subject which ordinarily comes up in conversation trips Nancy. She ties all her fascinating scraps of knowledge together with a planned course of reading. Our 40-page booklet, "Suppose You Haven't Gone to College," lists books easily procured at the library or inexpensive editions to round out your education. How to get greatest cultural value from newspapers, radio, movies, with little work.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Suppose You Haven't Gone to College," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Members and Guests of National Woman's Party See 'Love's Labor Lost' at Alva Belmont House

Maurice Greet Directs Production; Another Show Tonight.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

ALVA BELMONT HOUSE, built by Lord Baltimore for his daughter and now the headquarters of the National Woman's Party, was the background for a performance of "Love's Labor Lost" presented last night under the direction of Maurice Greet. A supper in the garden preceded the play, which was given on the flagged court behind the house, overshadowed by a huge Dutch elm two centuries old, which served as one of the "properties" for the production.

The evening was ideal. The large audience included members of the party, some of whom had come from out of the city, and many lovers of Shakespeare. Mrs. Raymond Gram Swing, a member of the National Council of the Woman's Party, was there from her home in Westport, Conn., with her sister, Mrs. Norborne T. Robinson, of Washington. Miss Alice Paul, also of the national council, who delayed her return to Europe to be here for recent conferences, also was present, with a party of guests. Mrs. Edith Houghton Hooker was there from Baltimore with a large party.

It is the first time such an affair has been planned at Alva Belmont House, but will not be the last, judging from the success of last evening's function. The production will be repeated tonight, preceded again by a supper. In case of rain, it will be postponed until tomorrow.

Receiving the guests as they arrived were Miss Paul, Mrs. Richard Wainwright, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Ernest C. Daniels and Dr. Miriam Oatman, chairman of the District of Columbia branch of the party. Others who assisted included Mrs. Lucy Cooper Shaw, Miss Anita Pollitzer, Mrs. Karl W. Greene and Miss Lela Carrington, who took one of the leading roles in the play.

Mr. and Mrs. Greene had as their guests Senator and Mrs. Carl Hatch and Representative and Mrs. Louis H. Ludlow; Mrs. Wiley entertained Dr. and Mrs. Charles Keefer, Mrs. Aramınta Chew and Judge Henry B. Fruit; Mrs. Paul Myron Linebarger had a party of friends with her, as did Mrs. Emma T. Hahn.

Mrs. A. Burke Summers, whose young son, Paul, was in the play, had friends with her, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniels had as their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Fenning. Mrs. William S. Hilles, past national chairman of the party, drove from Wilmington, Del., with a party of friends.

Among others in the large company were Dr. E. V. Wilcox, president of the Shakespeare Society, and Mrs. Wilcox; Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick Goodhart, Mrs. Lucian Greathart and Miss Laura Berrian, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hogue, Mrs. Norman Underwood, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holcombe, Col. and Mrs. Charles E. Cresson, Mrs. William Boyd Craig, and Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary.

Prof. Otto Simon's quartet of mixed voices provided music through the evening.

Isabell Wamsley To Become Bride

Mr. and Mrs. George Wamsley, of Sparkhill, N. Y., will arrive in Washington this afternoon to attend the wedding of their daughter, Miss Isabell Wamsley, to James Tumulty, jr., of Jersey City, which will take place tomorrow morning in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. Until recently, Miss Wamsley was secretary to James Roosevelt at the White House.

Mr. Tumulty and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Tumulty, also will arrive today and will stay at the Roosevelt, where Mr. and Mrs. Wamsley also will stay and where the bride-to-be has made her home.

The Rev. Maurice J. Sheehy will officiate at the wedding. Miss Margaret Durand will be the bride's only attendant, and John Tumulty, of Jersey City, will act as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bell Green, of New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Bell Green, to Mr. William T. Turner, of Washington. Miss Green attended St. Agatha School, New York, and was graduated from Bryn Mawr College. For the past few years she has been an instructor at the Foxcroft School, Middleburg, Va., and is a member of the Middleburg Hunt. She is a niece of Mrs. D. C. Sands, of Middleburg.

Mr. Turner is a foreign service officer, at present assigned to the Department of State in Washington. His last post abroad was at Tokyo, where he served as Third Secretary of Embassy.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

Mrs. Edward T. Perkins, founder and honorary chairman of the Park View Woman's Club, presided last night at its anual banquet, which was given at the Mayflower. Fourteen years ago, May 16, 1923, Mrs. Perkins and a group of 37 other women of the neighborhood decided to form a club. She drew up the constitution and by-laws with "Plan, Resolve and Perform," the motto of the new organization. When everything was ready and organization meeting was held and Mrs. Ellis Logan, former president of the D. C. Federation, "mother" of many clubs in the District, was invited to preside.

Among the charter members still active in the club are Mrs. Edward Clarke, Mrs. Ruth Stitt, Mrs. Louis Felton, Mrs. Walter Erwin, Mrs. Delmar Kimball, Mrs. Fred Walker, Mrs. L. S. Standish and Mrs. R. J. Morgan.

Study and work along educational and philanthropic lines has been the program of the club. It became affiliated, in its first year, with the District Federation and has given loyal support to all the Federation's philanthropic projects. Meetings were first held in the Park View School but later, as the club grew to its present membership of nearly 60, it met at the homes of members. The second Tuesday of each month sees the Park View women gathering for their regular club day.

Mrs. Perkins last night wore a gown of peach-colored lace which harmonized attractively with the shades of the flowers in the bouquet at the head table. Mrs. Warren H. Wagner, retiring president, was unable to be present and in her place the club founder installed the new officers. They are Mrs. Lawrence E. Murray, president; Mrs. W. O. Hancock, first vice president; Mrs. Fred Walker, second vice president; Mrs. George Jones, recording secretary; Mrs. Clarke, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert A. Jonscher, treasurer, and Mrs. George A. Corbin, parliamentarian. There was a program of music and dancing at the close of the installation.

MRS. DOROTHY KIRCHWEY BROWN, of Boston, director at large of the National League of Women Voters and an outstanding child welfare authority, presented the league's views yesterday at the Senate and House Education and Labor Committees' hearings on the Black-Connery fair-labor standards bill. The league approves, with certain reservations, the child-labor provisions of the measure. The "reservation" is the league's objection to the inclusion of the "prison-made goods" principle for child-labor regulation.

IT WAS A DAY for delegations. The treaties adopted at the Buenos Aires Conference "are ideal in their simplicity and their spirit," Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told a group of women from the peoples mandate committee who called on him yesterday to urge prompt ratification of the treaties now before his committee.

Doris Stevens Club Speaker

THE PRESENT movement afoot in Ecuador to deprive women of the vote was discussed by Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, before the current events group of the Women's City Club yesterday afternoon. The commission of which Miss Stevens is the head is composed of women representing the 21 American republics in the Pan American Union.

Ecuadorian women, who have had the vote off and on for many years and have enjoyed the right of suffrage continuously since 1929, have appealed to the Inter-American Commission for aid in their present effort to thwart the attacks leveled against them.

Following Miss Stevens' talk, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the Women's City Club and long a champion of equal rights, presented a resolution, adopted by the current events group, calling on the acting President of Ecuador, Frederico Paez, to "use his influence to safeguard the right of women to vote." Similar resolutions adopted by women's organizations elsewhere in this country will be forwarded to the president through the Inter-American Commission.

Miss Stevens outlined the history of woman suffrage in Ecuador. The original constitution in 1830 had nothing prohibiting women from voting but neither did it specifically provide they should she said. In 1883, a revised constitution provided that "male Ecuadorians" should vote. In 1897 this provision was taken out, leaving again the possibility of an interpretation granting voting privileges to women and men alike. In 1924 and 1925 women assumed the right and voted.

Finally, in 1929, the constitution was revised specifically providing that every literate Ecuadorian "man or woman" should have the right to vote.

Miss Stevens pointed out that Brazil, Cuba, Ecuador and Uruguay at present give women the right to vote on the same terms as men. In some municipalities in Peru, and Chile they also exercise the franchise.

War Women Are Guests Of Mrs. Bliss

Overseas Service Group Is Entertained at Garden Party.

League of Those Active Abroad Received on Terrace.

NEARLY EVERY BRANCH of service in which women worked abroad during the World War, was represented yesterday afternoon among members of the World's Overseas Service League who were entertained at a garden party at Dumbarton Oaks by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

The hostess was one of the American women active in France from the time the war began—a time at which Mr. Bliss was counselor of the American Embassy in Paris—and is a member of the league.

She received yesterday afternoon on the terrace reached through a conservatory where the guests passed down an avenue of white lilies and tropical ferns. Her chartreuse gown, the skirt and cape edged with a deep border of black chiffon, was figured in white daisies with yellow centers. Following close at her heels to add his welcome as she greeted the members of the Service League was Tango, her friendly little Cairn terrier.

The league members, who had been guests on several occasions of Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the former Ambassador of France, voted informally to send, through Mrs. Bliss, their love and greetings to her. A plan was under way to make her an honorary member of the league at the time she left on her return to France.

Mrs. Benet Present.

Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, a member of the league who, like Mrs. Bliss, was a resident of France during the war, was among yesterday's guests, as was Miss Mabel Boardman, of the Red Cross. Another was Lena Hitchcock, who went over as an occupational therapist with the New York unit of the Army Medical Corps. Mrs. Fred W. Franke, acting president of the Washington League, was with the rolling canteen in the Bordeau area; Dr. Nell Bartram, first vice president, served in Albania. She was accompanied yesterday by Mrs. A. C. Ebbels, of New York, who is her guest for a few days.

The entertainment service was represented by Mrs. Forrest Rutherford, who, with Mr. Rutherford, spent her time giving programs for the men in camps and hospitals behind the lines. Miss Theresa McDavid, who was among the guests, did both canteen and entertainment work in Paris and London; Miss Ann Gray was with the Red Cross in Italy and France; Miss Lillian Schmitt, Miss Nellie Bryant and Mrs. J. J. Keegan were together in Paris with the Federal Compensation Commission; Miss Faustine Dennis, a past president of the National League, served in St. Germain des Fosses; Miss Edith Lacey was with the Red Cross in France; Miss Virginia Nelson with the canteen service in the leave area; Miss Alma Winningham with the Red Cross in France, and Miss Katherine Reed, one of the new members, was also in the nursing service.

Were in Active Service.

All members of the league must have been in active war service abroad, and every way one turned yesterday were interesting women, an account of whose work would be a gripping story. Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the District branch of the League of American Pen Women, was another present.

The league, which has increased its membership 50 during the past year, devotes itself chiefly to caring for overseas service women who are now in need of financial or other assistance. Yesterday's party closed its season.

Carlson-Mann Wedding Held At Home Here

At a quiet home ceremony yesterday morning Miss Eleanor Edith Mann, daughter of Mrs. Beatrice Coultes Mann, was married to Dr. Herbert Austin Carlson, son of Mrs. John Frederick Carlson, of Minneapolis, Minn., Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, officiating.

The bride wore a simple gown of hand-drawn lace and carried a white prayer book, which was an heirloom of her mother.

Among the out-of-town guests to attend the wedding were Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence, Minneapolis, Minn., and Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Carlson, also of Minneapolis. Senator and Mrs. Gerald P. Nye and Senator and Mrs. Lundeen were also present.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Michigan and attended Wellesley College Preparatory School. Dr. Carlson is a practicing physician in Minneapolis and is on the faculty of the University of Minnesota Medical School.

Chinese Embassy To Have New Home

The Chinese Legation, which has for many years been located at Nineteenth and V streets, will after the latter part of this month be at Twin Oaks, home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell.

Dr. Cheng Ting Wang, the new Chinese Ambassador, and his two daughters, Miss An-Fu Wang and Miss Yoeh Wang, will move into the newly leased home soon after Mrs. Bell leaves for Denver, Colo., where she will visit with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell.

Family to Spend Summer in New Hampshire.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, son and daughter-in-law of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with their children, Sara Delano and Kate, have returned from a short visit to North Hampton, N. H., and Boston, Mass., where Mr. Roosevelt participated in the 299th anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston.

They will be leaving soon for the cottage at Little Boar's Head at North Hampton which they have leased for the summer from Mrs. Albert W. Clemons.

Probably planning to spend a good deal of the time this summer on the water, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt have again chartered the yacht Sewanna. It will be anchored at Little Harbor, New Portsmouth.

Rumanian Party Honors King Carol

Throngs Forget Time and Stay Late at Legation.

Formalities Are Forgotten Under Spell of Davila Hospitality.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Could King Carol have been present at the reception given in his honor yesterday at the Rumanian Legation, he would have been proud indeed he returned from exile to his throne seven years ago.

Official and residential Washington turned out in droves to celebrate that return. Whether every person who filed up the blue-carpeted steps and into the ballroom at the legation yesterday knew why he was there—or cared—made no difference: it was an event to be remembered.

From 5 to 7 o'clock guests came, and stayed, greeted each other and talked in a dozen different tongues and the minutes passed and the hour of departing rolled around. And still they stayed, with the Minister and members of his staff still hospitably insisting they stay longer.

The spacious ballroom, fragrant with pink peonies, was filled with diplomats, socialites, Senators and Representatives for well over three hours, although the time set stipulated only two. Every type of feminine attire—from sweeping afternoon frocks to spectator sports ensembles—could be singled out in the throng that surged around the long table loaded with dainties at one end of the ballroom. Every type of masculine apparel, from street suits to formal afternoon attire, was in evidence in the crowd around the three French windows at the opposite end of the room.

As attractive and as delightful a bachelor host as the Diplomatic Corps can boast, the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles Davila, greeted his guest at first in formal continental manner before they entered the ballroom, and then went in later to mingle with them, democratic fashion. Unofficial hostesses for the affair were blonde Mme. Nabes, wife of the First Secretary of the Legation, and Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Financial Counselor.

Mrs. Houghton Busy.

Also busy introducing guests to each other and seeing that everyone had a good time was Mrs. Woodson Houghton, who felt very much at home herself because she is a Rumanian and friend of members of the legation staff.

Every embassy and legation, the Cabinet (at least the distaff side of it), the House of Representatives, the New Deal and Old Deal Capital, as well as residential Washington, was represented at the reception. Persons seen at virtually every diplomatic event plus some present only at "cave-dweller" or official functions were present.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, in a frock of black and white chiffon, set off with a double strand of pearls and a wide-brimmed black hat, was glimpsed chatting with a number of guests, including Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, who wore white and burgundy chiffon and a big hat.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, garbed in white from hat to shoes, was the center of a group of men and women who collected near the buffet toward the latter part of the party and chatted merrily with the minister-host. The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun were other guests, as were the genial Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera.

Troyanovskys Present.

Also the center of animated groups of guests during the earlier part of the event were the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, the Hungarian Minister, Mr. John Pelenyi; Senator Arthur Capper, the Yugoslav Minister, Mr. Constantin Fotich, and the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Senor Don Andres Pastoriza.

Mrs. William E. Borah, in a red-ingote frock of blue and white and a small hat; Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, in a spring print; Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. B. Kleijn Molekamp, the First Secretary of the French Embassy and his sister, Mme. Simone Gaucheron, were there.

Among others were Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis, whose "Rippon Lodge" has been the scene of a number of social events recently; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Nan Wood Honeyman, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, of Georgetown University; Representative and Mrs. Lawrence E. Imhoff and Representative and Mrs. Oliver Frey.

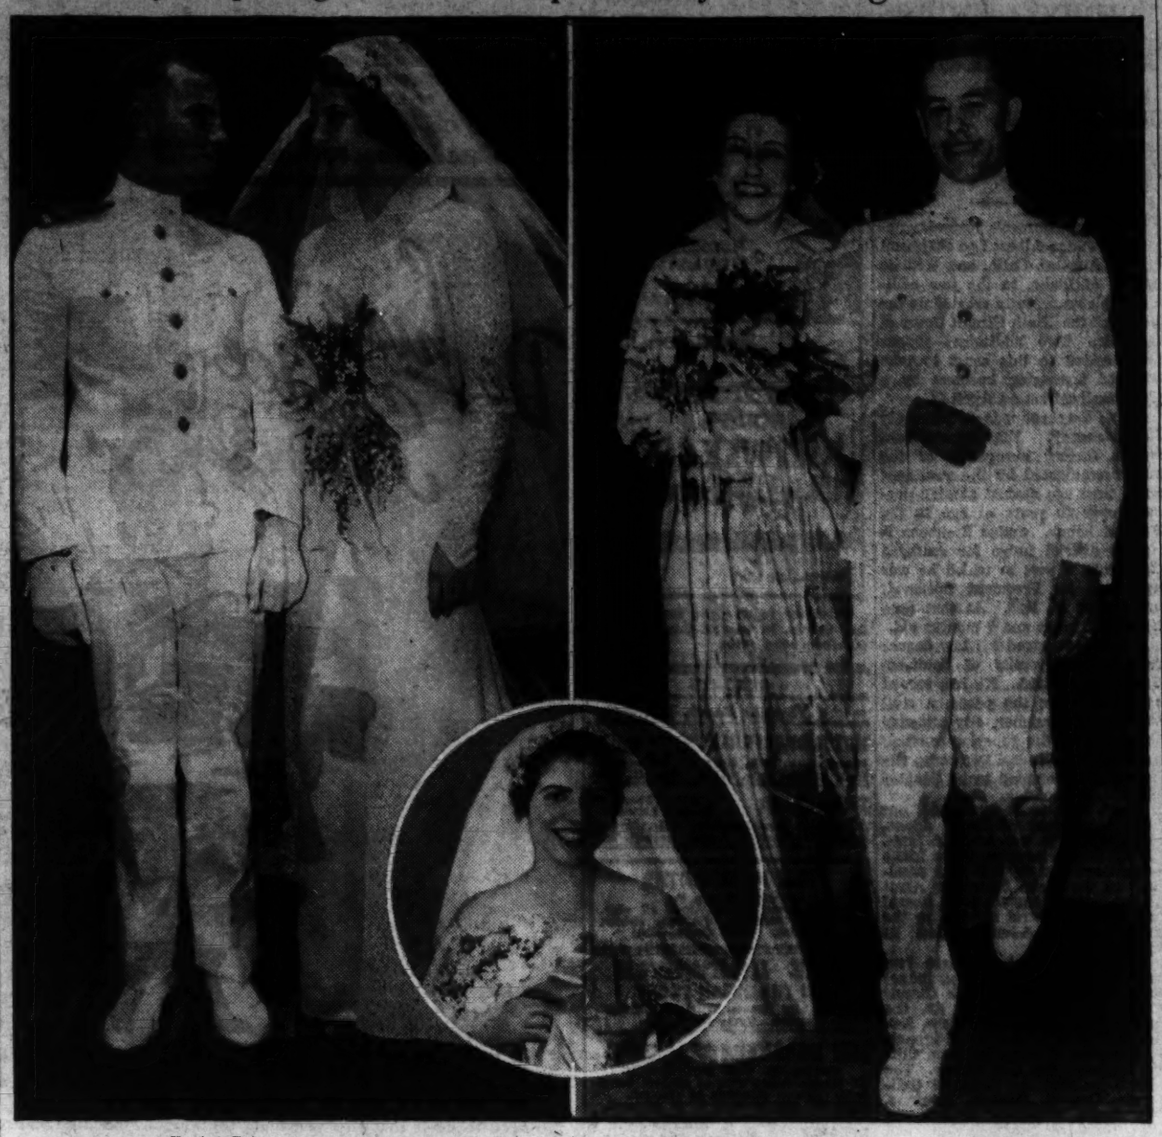
Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will leave today for Mexico, where they will spend several weeks. Later, they will go to their summer home in Maine to remain until the Supreme Court convenes.

Yesterday's Spotlight Turned Upon Navy Weddings in D. C. Area



Harris & Ewing. Bachrach. Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Henderson Is Wed Here to Ensign Packard

MISS MARGARET Kinsley Henderson, daughter of Mr. Irving J. Henderson, was married to Ensign Wyman Howard Packard at noon yesterday in All Souls' Unitarian Church. The Rev. U. G. B. Pierce officiated. Ensign Packard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Packard, of Brockton, Mass.

Mr. Henderson gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's gown was of white lace, made in redingote fashion over white slipper satin. Her short tulle veil was held in place with a cap of rose point lace, a gift of the bride's grandmother. The cap was trimmed with a cluster of orange blossoms at the back.

Carries Arm Bouquet.

Mrs. Emory E. Hackman, of Fort Hancock, N. J., was matron of honor. She wore a frock of hyacinth blue marquisette made with a tight bodice, full sleeves and flowing skirt. She carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers and wore a wreath of tiny flowers matching the bouquet.

Miss Elizabeth Packard and Miss Mary Louise Packard, sisters of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They were attired in yellow and rose marquisette, fashioned on the same lines as the dress of the matron of honor. They also wore wreaths and carried arm bouquets of spring flowers.

Mr. Robert D. Cox, of Brockton, a cousin of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Lieut. Emory E. Hackman, of Fort Hancock, N. J.; Mr. Robert H. Billingsley, of New York; Mr. Ben H. Dyer, of Washington, and Ensign Edwin N. Denby, jr., of Detroit.

Reception Held.

Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the home of the bride's father, 168 Monroe street, with Mrs. Stephen J. Murphy, aunt of the bride, acting as hostess for Mr. Henderson. She wore a gown of black and white printed chiffon and a corsage of violets. Her wide-brimmed hat was of black stitched taffeta with a rolled band of black and white chiffon circling the crown.

Miss Virginia Hustvedt Is Wed To Ensign Hauck at All Saints

ALL SAINTS Episcopal Church yesterday at noon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Virginia Isabel Hustvedt, daughter of Commander and Mrs. O. M. Hustvedt, to Ensign Philip Frederick Hauck, U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hauck, of New York City, the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiating.

The church was decorated with palms and pink gladioli. The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory Alencon lace over ivory satin, with a Queen Elizabeth collar, and long tight sleeves. Her finger-tip veil was of ivory tulle caught at the sides with orange blossoms and banded across the brow with a narrow edging of the same lace as her wedding gown. She wore a corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley at her waist.

Miss Mary Spear, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Ray Spear, and Miss Elizabeth Hill, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Harry W. Hill, were the only attendants and they wore full-skirted frocks of pale pink mousseline de soie, with short puff-sleeved jackets. Their hats—of pink horsehair—were trimmed with pink flowers. Their bouquets were of spring flowers.

Mr. Charles Hauck, jr., cousin of the bridegroom, was best man, and Ensigns E. B. Gibson, jr., Harry Barton, Fillmore Gilkeson, W. R. Branshaw, R. E. Erby and Cadet James J. Jones were ushers.

A wedding breakfast was given at the home of the bride's parents immediately following the ceremony.

Mrs. Hauck attended school in Washington and Long Beach Calif., and is a granddaughter of the late Judge Henry E. Copper, of Honolulu. Ensign Hauck graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1935.

They will make their home at Long Beach, Calif.

June 19th Chosen By Miss Jackson As Wedding Date

Miss Hope Jaskson, daughter of Mr. Robert Jackson, has chosen the afternoon of Saturday June 19, as the date of her wedding to Mr. Francis Patrick Garvan, jr.,

The ceremony will take place at Green Court, the country place of Miss Jackson's sister, Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, in Brookville, Long Island. Miss Mary Louise Marsh, of Washington will be Miss Jackson's maid of honor.

Later in the summer, Mrs. Morgan will sail for Europe to visit the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Biddle in Warsaw.

Naval Officer, Miss Ducey Wed; Off for Coast

A WEDDING of much interest in Navy circles took place last evening at 8 o'clock when Miss Cabell Sandford Ducey, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. David F. Ducey, U. S. N., and Ensign John Stuart Fletcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fletcher, were married at the home of the bride's parents, the Navy Yard, with Chaplain W. N. Thomas officiating.

The bride chose for her wedding gown a floor-length frock of old ivory brocade, off the shoulder, and wore a finger-tip veil. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Jane Winston Ducey, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Little Joanne O'Malley acted as flower girl. Charles Abson was the ring bearer, and Lieut. H. G. Walker, U. S. M. C., acted as best man.

Mrs. Bacon's Party Honors Newswomen

Throng Attends Julep Party at Old John Marshall House.

Affair Held in Garden; Many Congressional Guests Present.

By Lucie Eberly.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon's mint julep party given yesterday afternoon in honor of the outgoing and incoming presidents of the Newspaper Women's Club, Miss Margaret Hart and Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, was a delightful al fresco affair.

Receiving in the high-walled garden of her lovely home, the famous old John Marshall and Justice Fuller house, Mrs. Bacon met everyone with the gracious hospitality for which the Bacon family is famous.

And it seemed as though social Washington had turned out en masse to be there. Aside from the "ladies of the press" the Diplomatic, Congressional and residential circles were well represented.

Garden tables and chairs were placed everywhere for the convenience of the guests, and frosted mint juleps in true Southern style were passed in large silver mugs with other refreshing drinks. Sandfiches and other dainty tibits were served. Under the vine-covered arbor in one corner of the garden, beer was to be had, and this favorite vied with the juleps for popularity with the masculine guests, who composed the largest attendance seen at an afternoon party in a long time.

Representative Bacon was on hand to play host, welcoming the guests and seeing that all were served. A flock of his colleagues from the "Hill," however, were ever ready to corner him for a chat, and among those to join in jovial conferences were Attorney General Homer F. Cummings, Senator James J. Davis, Senator Wallace White, Sen. Robert J. Bulkley, Senator Frederick Steiwer and Representatives Ralph Brewster, Clarence E. Hancock, Ralph Church and Albert E Carter.

The Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freye y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil, Mme. Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, and the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik were among those to arrive late.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, who are associate members of the Newspaper Women's Club, were among those to attend. Among others were Mrs. Lucille Foster MacMillan, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Peter G. Gerry, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, and Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers and Nan Honeyman.

Mrs. Bertram Snell, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. John John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley, Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs. McCook Knox were among those to arrive early.

Others to drop in during the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Wallace White, Mrs. James Davis, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Frederick Steiwer, Mr. Fleming Newbold, Mr. Max Kaufman, and Miss Vertha Hildebrandt and Miss Rose Szekelyhidy, both of Budapest, Hungary.

Misses Martha and Virginia Bacon, daughters of the host and hostess, and their friend, Miss Katherine Bulkley, mingled with the guests and answered questions about their three white West Highland terriers.

D. C. Girls Win High Honors at Trinity College

Four Capital Students Get Top Awards at Exercises.

Washington students received high honors yesterday at Trinity College commencement exercises. Miss Edith Sullivan, of Washington, was the only member of the class to be graduated magna cum laude, while Miss Mary Reges and Miss Rosaline Murphy, also residents of the Capital, received the only cum laude awards.

Miss Helen Watson, also of this city, received the Sister Marie Cecelia memorial prize for excellence in mathematics. Degrees were conferred on 78 graduates by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore.

In his commencement address Dr. Joseph J. Reilly, of Hunter College, spoke of the attempt which may be made to tax privately endowed colleges. The only way college graduates can defeat this proposal is to show that they are rendering back to the public at least as much as they received from it.

The most valuable contributions the graduate can make to society, Dr. Reilly believes, are culture, moral courage and tolerance. By producing men and women with these attributes colleges are hastening the attainment of Utopia.

The following received bachelor of arts degrees:

From this city—Margaret M. Batchelder, Mary Elizabeth Bruns, Rita Buddeke, Grace Mary Cauliflower, Alice A. Dante, Eileen deBettencourt, Kathryn Gallaher, Miriam E. Hartnett, A. Elizabeth Healy, Anne Jennings Hemelt, Marita Houlihan, Isabel H. Johnson, Nancy D. Kengla, Mary Kennedy, Mildred C. McDonald, Rosalind A. Murphy, Margaret M. O'Connor, Lucille M. Purdulin, Mary L. Reges, Margaret M. Rover, Edith R. Sullivan, Helen M. Watson.

Out-of-town graduates included Lucille E. Ahern, Cincinnati, Ohio; Frances Barnett, Chicago, Ill.; Adele L. Beven, Chicago, Ill.; Margaret T. Bough, New York, N. Y.; Elizabeth A. Bowen, Lynn, Mass.; Eleanor F. Brandy, Methuen, Mass.; Rosemary E. Brennan, Chicago, Ill.; Rosemary J. Brennan, Buffalo, N. Y.; Madeleine Caine, Nanatuck, Conn.; K. Cliffs Balk Search For Plane Victims

Salt Lake City, June 8 (AP).—Forbidding crags and other natural barriers tonight blocked the search for the bodies of seven occupants of a sky-liner which crashed six months ago high in the Wasatch Mountain wilds.

Half the fuselage and one wing could be seen through binoculars upon a craig 200 feet below a lofty cliff, scene of the December tragedy. Plans were made to try to reach the crag in the hope bodies may rest there. It was admitted this might not be possible for days.

"—and there's nothing burns me up more than waiting for the phone call that don't come."

American youth answers this question Sunday in "America Speaks"—"What do you think about the big questions of politics, society?"

100,000 Youths Tell Their Story Sunday, in America Speaks

Every year hundreds of thousands of young Americans reach voting age and add their weight to American public opinion. Last November there were 8,000,000 young persons eligible to vote for the first time in a Presidential election. What does this great new army of voters thinks about the New Deal? About war and peace? About their chances of getting a job and making a home? These are a few of the questions the American Institute of Public Opinion has put to young Americans—more than 100,000 of them—in recent months. Their outlook for a place in society, as told in their own words, comes to you in this important poll Sunday, exclusively in The Post.

Queen of Spain Offers Personal Jewels for Sale

New York, June 8 (AP).—The personal jewels of the former Queen of Spain are on the market, a young Fifth avenue jeweler returned today from London to announce.

The jeweler, Paul Flato, said he had completed negotiations with Victoria Eugenie, begun last year when she visited this country, to put on sale gems valued at about $1,000,000.

Flato said the "sad Queen" told him she did not "have the right" to sell any but personal jewelry and that crown jewels would not be included. The jewels will be "shipped here later," he said.

He displayed a letter signed with the Queen's name and describing how a 65-carat emerald cross, all in one piece, was handed down to her from Queen Isabella II of Spain through Empress Eugenie of France and Queen Victoria of England.

Expectant Mother Is Sent to Prison

Boston, June 8 (AP).—An expectant mother and her husband, both of Detroit, turned toward Federal prisons tonight to pay their penalties for violating the Lindbergh kidnap law.

Jack Benson, 23, received a sentence of ten years after he pleaded guilty of kidnaping Roland Robichaud, of Lawrence, and forcing him to drive to St. Louis. Benson's wife, 21, also known at Rhea Prema, was given a year-and-a-day sentence. Federal court attaches said she would become a mother next November.

Stephens, Healy Named Judges In 9th Circuit

President Fills 2 Places Provided by Congress in April.

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed Judge Albert Lee Stephens, of Los Angeles, Calif., and William Healy, of Idaho, to the two additional places recently created on the bench of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Two additional judges were added to this court to take care of increasing business by a Congressional act on April 14.

Judge Stephens was 63 years old last January. His appointment marks further abrogation of the rule promulgated by the President some time ago against naming persons over 60 years of age to the Federal bench. Judge Stephens is now a district judge for southern California, a post to which he was appointed by President Roosevelt on August 24, 1935. At that time he was 61 years and 7 months old.

Stephens received his law degree from the University of Southern California in 1903. He has served as a justice of the peace, a civil service commissioner, city attorney and judge of the superior court of Los Angeles. He is a Democrat. His patron is understood to be Senator William G. McAdoo.

Healy, who is 55 years old, has been a resident of Boise, Idaho, since 1914. He was born in Iowa. He has been a member of the Idaho Legislature and in 1933 was president of the Idaho State Bar Association. He is known as a liberal and is now general counsel to the Farm Credit Administration at Spokane, Wash.

The appointment of these two men brings the number of judges on the bench of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals up to six, the others being Curtis D. Wilbur, former Secretary of the Navy; Francis A. Garrecht, William Denman, Clifton Mathews and Bert Haney. The circuit includes the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, Montana, Washington, Idaho and Arizona, and the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska.

Western to Mark Birthday of Payne

John Howard Payne, composer of "Home, Sweet Home," will be honored on the 146th anniversary of his birth today, as Western High School students gather around his monument in Oak Hill Cemetery, Georgetown.

The memorial services at 3:15 p. m. will be in charge of the school's history club, whose members will place a wreath of magnolia blossoms on the song writer's marker.

Mrs. Bertha A. Y. Warthmer, of the Western High School faculty, will talk on Payne's life, and the Rev. George W. Dow will offer prayer. June Thomas, president of the club, will have charge of the wreath laying exercises.

The memorial program will close with the singing of "Home, Sweet Home."

Lee Scores 3d Win Over Easterners

Tigers Trim Macks, 5-0; Auker Allows 1 Hit; Red Sox Victors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 8.—With Lefty Thornton Lee scoring his third victory over the New York Yankees this season, by a score of 5 to 4, the White Sox ran their winning streak to ten straight games.

As the Indians lost to the Red Sox, the Sox triumph put them in a first-place tie with the world champions, who have led the American League since May 24. They are a full game ahead of Cleveland.

Lee, who was touched for nine hits, had most of his trouble with Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig, who accounted for all the Yankee runs. DiMaggio hit his ninth home run of the year and fourth in four days in the fourth inning.

In the sixth, after Frank Crosetti had smashed a two-bagger to left and Red Rolfe had singled, DiMaggio scored Crosetti with a long fly to center. Gehrig then clouted his eighth four-bagger of the season, to score Rolfe ahead of him.

Johnny Broaca, the Yanks' starting pitcher, and Johnny Murphy, who relieved him in the sixth, gave up 13 hits.

Ray Radcliff's double and Mike Kreevich's triple produced the first Sox run, in the third. Radcliff's third straight hit, a single, and another by Kreevich, combined with a base on balls, brought another in the fifth.

Zeke Bonura and Luke Appling singled, Minter Hayes sacrificed, Tony Piet walked and Luke Sewell doubled for two runs and Broaca's exit in the next frame. Murphy came in and Lee's long fly brought home Piet, but that was the end of the Sox scoring.

Tigers Blank Macks; Auker in Rare Form

Detroit, June 8 (AP).—Elden Auker, veteran Detroit right-hander, blanked the Philadelphia Athletics with one hit today, missing a perfect performance only because of Bob Johnson's solid smash for two bases against the scoreboard in the fourth inning. The score was 6 to 0.

Auker struck out two batters and walked four. Gaining control as the game progressed, the "submarine ball" hurler retired in succession the last 12 A's to face him. Johnson and Lamar Newsome, who walked in the third and was sacrificed, were the only players to reach second base.

Red Sox Batter Tribe Hurlers

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox landed on three Cleveland pitches for seven hits and eight runs in the ninth inning today to win, 10-8, what appeared an inning earlier to be a hopelessly lost game.

The Indians were leading, 8-2, going into the ninth. Doerr came up first for the Red Sox and was walked by Johnny Allen, who seemed to be headed for his third straight victory.

Three successive singles followed the walk and Heving went in to pitch for the Indians just in time to be credited with the defeat. He allowed three runs and was replaced by Wyatt, who gave up three more.

Grissom Holds Bees; Reds Win, 4 to 0

Boston, June 8 (AP).—Lefty Lee Grissom, who has appeared in 18 games for the Cincinnati Reds, today hurled his last-place teammates to a 4-0 shutout by holding the Boston Bees to 4 hits. Grissom, while gaining his fourth victory of the season, had 6 strikeouts and was never threatened.

The Reds gained all of their runs against Lou Fette, Boston's brilliant freshman righthander, before the Bees could register their first putout in the third inning. The veteran Bob Smith relieved Fette at that point and held the visitors to 4 hits during the rest of the action.

The only threat from the Bees was in the eighth when Smith and Gil English, who replaced Debs Garms at third, each singled with one out. Those runners each advanced a base when Gene Moore grounded out to Jordan, but Tony Ciccinello retired the side by flying out.

Bucs Defeat Phillies, 8-1; Reds Walk In

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 8.—Hitting safely in every inning but the first and eighth, the Pittsburgh Pirates today snapped their five-game losing streak with an 8-1 rout of the Phillies. The Buccaneers banged out 13 hits, including home runs by Al Todd, Bill Brubaker and Woody Jensen, off the delivery of Wayne Lamaster and Leon Pettit.

Only Orville Jorgens, who replaced Lamaster in the seventh and pitched one inning, escaped unharmed. The Pirates scored one run in that heat, but it had been put on base by Lamaster.

The triumph gave the Bucs a four-point shade on the idle Cubs in the percentages, though they are tied for second place, a game and a half behind the Giants, in the won and lost column.

While Todd, with two singles, and Brubaker and Jensen, with one each in addition to their homers, were leading the Pittsburgh attack, young right-handed Russell Bauers was limiting the Phils to six hits and fanning seven.

They scored their lone run in the third, when Bauers followed up Lamaster's single and Earl Browne's force out with three straight walks. He spread the six hits over as many innings.

The Pirates scored twice in the second on Todd's four-bagger and singles by Brubaker and Lloyd Waner. They picked up another in the third. Todd's single bringing home Gus Suhr, who had doubled.

'Dizzy' and Hubbell May Vie in Opener

New York, June 8 (AP).—Rained out today, the league-leading New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals will play a double-header at the Polo Grounds tomorrow, with Carl Hubbell and Dizzy Dean likely to hook up in the opener.

It will be their first meeting since the memorable afternoon in St. Louis on May 19, when "Hub" turned back the Cards, 4 to 1, for the twenty-second in his string of 24 consecutive National League victories, and Dean's "dusting off" of the Giants precipitated a free-for-all fight.

Californian Triumphs in British Golf

Barbara Thompson Wins by 4 and 2; Plays Excellent Game.

Turnberry, Scotland, June 8 (AP).—A lone American—long-driving, self-taught Barbara Thompson—remained in the running for the British women's golf championship today as the field was reduced to 32.

A series of brilliant recoveries enabled Miss Thompson, who is a member of the Los Altos (Calif.) Country Club, to win her second-round match from Betty Henderson, of Great Britain, 4 and 2, but Betty Buechner, of Glen Cove, N. Y., was eliminated by Jean Hamilton, of Great Britain, 2 up.

Frequently in bunkers, Miss Thompson saved herself today by remarkable recovery shots that plunked safely on the green only a few feet from the cup. She clinched the match, as a matter of fact, with a streak of brilliant golf on the seventh, eighth and ninth holes. She played these in 4-3-5 and won them all to turn 3 up.

Miss Buechner put up a good battle before bowing to Miss Hamilton. She was 1 down at the turn and 2 down with only three holes to play. At the sixteenth, however, she made a fine recovery from a bunker, put a spoon shot 4 feet from the pin and won the hole. That merely staved off the inevitable. She sliced into rough with her drive at the eighteenth, took 3 to the edge of the green and barely failed to sink the putt that would have halved the hole even if it wouldn't have saved the match.

The day's principal upset saw Wanda Morgan, English champion and former British titleholder, beaten by Jean McCulloch, of Scotland, 2 and 1. Pamela Barton, defending champion and holder of the American title, crushed Mrs. H. J. Percy, 7 and 6, and looked more than ever like she was the class of the field. She has lost only one hole in two days of play.

D. C. Women Leading in Md. Tourney

Helen Dettweiler Is Low With 86 for Medal; Tie for Second.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, June 8.—Women golfers from the District of Columbia dominated the 18-hole qualifying round of the Maryland State championships on the difficult Five Farms course here today.

Helen Dettweiler, of the Congressional Country Club, led the field of 43 entrants with an 86.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, and Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, were tied for second place in the qualifying round with 88s.

Mrs. J. T. Towell, of Congressional, was far out of the money with 108, as was her clubmate, Mrs. G. R. Goetzman, who required 113 strokes to navigate the 18 holes.

Miss Dettweiler's good performance was attributable largely to her well-nigh perfect putting. On the 18 holes she three-putted only one green.

The out nine was scored in 42. For seven holes, which she traveled in par figures, Miss Dettweiler played clocklike golf. On the eighth and ninth the Dettweiler drives went amiss.

Misses Tee Shot.

On the par four eighth, Helen missed her tee shot, but finally wound up canning the ball in five strokes. On the final hole of the out nine, Miss Dettweiler again muffed from the tee and wound up scoring a five on the par three hole.

Driving against a tree on the par four tenth forced the Congressional star to record a five. Helen settled down on the eleventh and twelfth, which she covered in par figures. Miss Dettweiler's one three-putt green came on the thirteenth, where she shot a one over par four. The balance of the in nine was shot in even par figures for a total of 44 strokes.

Miss Dettweiler's card:

40 to Start Today In Manor Tourney

Several post entries, including Louis Fuchs, of Indian Spring, will swell the starting of the Maryland State amateur tourney at Manor over the 40 mark.

A 36-hole qualifying round will start today at 9 a. m., with 32 low scorers playing in the championship bracket. Spencer Overton, defending champion, leads the Baltimore representatives, while Volney Burnett, whose subpar easily won the Government tourney, will pace the local representatives.

Match play starts tomorrow with a pair of 18-hole rounds trimming the field to 8. Quarter and semi-finals will be played on Friday with the finals scheduled on Saturday over the 36-hole route.

Appointed to West Point

Bill Guckeyson, University of Maryland all-around athlete, whose appointment to the West Point Military Academy was announced last night. He will enter with the plebe class July 1.

Guckeyson Appointed To Military Academy

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bill Guckeyson, probably the greatest athlete in the University of Maryland's history, last night was notified of his appointment to West Point by the United States War Department. He has been ordered to report with the plebe class entering the academy July 1.

Recipient of every honorary award obtainable at Maryland, Guckeyson starred in four branches of sport at various times. He won all-Southern halfback honors last year and honorable mention on several all-America elevens. Football, which brought him his greatest fame, and track are his favorite sports.

But Guckeyson is also adept at basketball and baseball. Walter Johnson called him one of the best major league prospects he ever saw and predicted a bright future for him if he turned to the diamond. He plays the outfield. In track he devoted his time to field events, specializing in the javelin.

The Old Line star hung up a new District A. A. U. javelin record only last week with a toss of 208 feet 5½ inches. He was second in the Penn Relays with a throw of 204 feet. In 1935 he won the national junior A. A. U. and Southern Conference championships. The following year he was forced out of competition by a strained shoulder muscle.

Guckeyson is scheduled to compete in the national A. A. U. championship meet scheduled June 18 and 19 at Berkeley, Calif.

News of his appointment definitely dispels whatever hopes several pro football teams entertained that he would join the paid grid ranks. He was headed for a berth on the All-America team scheduled to oppose the National League champions the latter part of this summer at Chicago, although he did not seek that honor.

The Washington Pros, of the Dixie League, made him an attractive offer, and the Redskins were interested in him, although he was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles at the termination of the last football season. Guckeyson had said that in the event he failed to win an appointment to West Point he would not play pro football, and meant it sincerely.

His loss will be an irreparable blow to Maryland's 1938 track hopes, for he was counted an invaluable part of what promises to be a championship team.

Air Raid!

Battle of the Ether Will Be Waged by Announcers.

Fight history will be made next Sunday at 1:30 p. m., between those two exponents of the noble art of adjective tossing, Arch (Hoople) McDonald and Art (Country Boy) Godfrey.

Godfrey and the man who regularly broadcasts out-of-town games of the Nats over Station WJSV in co-operation with The Washington Post, and General Mills, each will take one game of a double header to decide—or rather let the public decide—which is better suited to the task.

Both boys appear to be in top shape for the fray. McDonald has settled down to serious training. He does road work running around the table every morning. He appears calmly confident.

Godfrey, also, expressed the utmost confidence.

"All I can say is, let the best man win," he said, "and, after all why shouldn't I?"

Riggs Wins Match On Southern Court

Nashville, Tenn., June 8 (AP).—Bobby Riggs, of Los Angeles, swept through two opponents today to join other favorites in the third round of the fifty-second annual Southern amateur tennis tournament on the Belle Meade courts.

The top-seeded star erased Earl Reynolds, of Nashville, in the first, and then eliminated Dick Covington, Asheville, N. C. Joe Hunt, second-seeded California, defeated Marvin Bacon, Vanderbilt University, in the second round, and Joe Folk, of Nashville, fell before third-seeded Art Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla.

Walter Senior, of San Francisco, trounced Ross Chesire, of Nashville, in the initial round, and went into the third with a default. Defending Champion Ernie Sutter, Tulane University ace, advanced with ease, trampling Nashville's Ken Cram.

Thorne to Drive Foreign Race Car

New York, June 8 (U.P.).—Joel Thorne, heir to a large New York banking fortune, will drive an Alfa Romeo in the Vanderbilt Cup Race, July 3, officials of Roosevelt Raceway announced today. The car is the one in which Ray Sommer, of France, took fourth money in the revival of the old classic held last year.

Thorne bought the car from Sommer. The purchase brought Thorne's "stable" of racers to 12, and made his the largest collection of racers in the United States.

Harris Busy Over Phone; Team Jumpy

Manager Silent; Boston Hinted as Probable Dickering Club.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 8.—Trade winds are blowing a veritable gale in the camp of the Washington Nationals tonight, and the air is electrified with the belief on all sides that an important player deal impends.

Manager Bucky Harris refuses to voice any hint of a player swap but his ball players, scenting serious business afoot in view of Harris' frequent calls to the long-distance telephone, are a-buzz with speculation.

In low tones, and with sidelong glances toward Harris, the players who have been gathering in small groups seek to draw sach other out, their curiosity piqued by Harris' strange taciturnity and mysterious movements.

Team Is Panicky.

The Washington team is panicky, that's certain. Both Harris and Owner Clark Griffith are in a mood to gamble with their talent and the ball players recognize the setting for a trade, what with the team having sorely disappointed both Harris and Griffith.

In which direction Harris is angling is not known but there are grounds for belief that the Boston Red Sox may be involved in a swap with the Nats. Manager Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, displayed an avid interest in the Washington talent on the Nats' last trip to Boston.

The Nats' need for pitchers is critical and Harris is believed ready to go to great lengths to strengthen his hurling staff, even to the point of giving up players who are regarded as fixtures in the Washington lineup.

The Red Sox, too, have a crying need of pitchers and were it not for the fact that the Boston club is frantic to acquire an outfielder also, a trade with Cronin's team hardly would be possible.

Cronin Wants Chapman.

Outfielder Ben Chapman was the object of Manager Cronin's trade talk with Harris when the Nats were in Boston two weeks ago and on that occasion Harris laughed off an offer of a deal that would involve Chapman.

But with the Nats' plight getting no better rapidly, it is reported that Harris is not now so aloof in discussing a trade for Chapman, provided that he acquires a Boston pitcher, or two, in the deal.

A thunderstorm that struck Sportsman's Park ten minutes before game time this afternoon caused the postponement of the Nats' scheduled battle with the Browns today. Jimmy DeShong will pitch for the Nats in the single game tomorrow.

Greenleaf Wins Two Exhibition Matches

Ralph Greenleaf, world pocket billiards champion, squared his match with George Kelly by taking both exhibitions yesterday at Arcadia. Greenleaf won the afternoon competition 125-72, with a high run of 30 to Kelly's 25. He took the second, 125-78, chalking up a run of 33. Kelly's best run was 48.

Timber Lady, Second Choice, Breaks Record in Charles Town Victory

Half Length Victor Over Small Change

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, June 8.—W. A. Jones' Timber Lady set a new track record for the Charles Town course of slightly more than six furlongs while winning the Webster Purse, feature race of today's program of the Jockey Club. The trim little daughter of Tall Timber circled the course in 1:16 1-5, two-fifths of a second better than the mark previously held by Postponement.

Timber Lady, second choice in the wagering at a $7.60 mutuel, downed Claude Feltner's Small Change by a half length with Trixie Lass third and a length farther back. Jockey G. Terhune turned in one of his best rides on the winner.

She seemed to hesitate at the break but Terhune rushed her to the turn and took command as she banked for the backstretch. Once in front Timber Lady hustled along, drawing out to a two-length lead on Small Change. However, entering the stretch, she bore out but Terhune, riding desperately, straightened her in time to drive on to the wire ahead of the charging Small Change.

She Knows, the favorite, was the big disappointment of the race. The Jack High filly was third most of the way from a slow beginning but weakened when placed to a drive.

The program was conducted over a lightning-fast track and under a bright sun. A cool breeze made it a comfortable day for the 4,000 present.

Ktwo, with Jackey L. Machado in the saddle, scored a front-running victory in the first race and brought a legion of backers a $5.60 mutuel. While Idle Susan and sime of the others had trouble getting away in a poor start, Ktwo, from her outside position, was away winging and led Lady Gurzil to the wire by three lengths. Gloss, forwardly placed throughout, was third.

At a $9.40 mutuel, Whiskora, ancient son of Whiskalong, scored an easy victory over seven other platers in the second race. He led Vanvola to the payoff station by four lengths, with Warned Off third. Jockey R. Root gave the winner a helpful ride.

Penny Can triumphed by eight lengths in the third race, never giving her backers an anxious moment. June G. was second, ahead of Gentleman, a long shot. Black Mars, a paddock tip, drew a heavy play, but went lame after running forwardly for a half. The winner paid a $5 mutuel.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al,

Trainer Bert S. Michell, former Denemark trainer, who was cleared of doping charges in Florida, was a visitor at Washington today and left for the new track at Delaware Park, where he will obtain stables for several horses. Michell is now employed by the Coldstream Stud. Don Yates has become a trainer again. The good-natured fellow who formerly had Foggy Dawn and others has taken over the horses of Mrs. J. H. Elliott. Guy Lombardo, the orchestra leader, may be a visitor at this track tomorrow. He has an engagement to play for a dance in this State, and has promised to try to get to the races. At any rate, the feature race has been named for him. Beverley Broun, head of the West Virginia Racing Commission, has left for his home in Charleston. Palumbo still holds the lead in the battle for jockey honors at the meeting. Machado is second. Former Jockey George Windle has taken out a trainer's licence here. "Squirrel" and the rest of the boys want their friends to know that they are doing all right. I'm glad to see that the assistant starters have stopped trying to hold two horses at the gate.

BILL.

First race—Stealing Home turned in a promising effort last out and may show to advantage in this field of maidens. Croix de Tour has worked well and will have Palumbo to do the riding. Sandid has seldom run as cheap and may turn in a good effort.

Second race—Good Gracious, second last out, will be a hard horse to beat if the also eligible list is not called upon. Loch London has worked impressively and promises to be a keen factor. Silver Arch for the minor award.

Third race—Gay Bride seems well placed in this field and needs only the right handling. Gemwick is long overdue here in the mountains and could surprise. Sea Finn and Halloo would be threats if in action.

Fifth race—Wise Money, impressive winner of his last, will like this route and I'm going to string along. Morun and Fredalva to take the place and show money.

Sixth race—Standby may beat any man's horse as long as those ancient legs hold out. The abbreviated distance gives the sore-legged Prince Turley a chance. The Pierce entry of Trixie Lass and Royal Veil for the show. Stool Pigeon would be the one to beat but is a doubtful starter.

Seventh race—Porphyry and Pukka Heaven seem likely to battle it out in this field. I prefer them in the order named. Plain Ace may take a peek at the money.

Eighth race—Bay Wrack gets my call over Dressmaker in the day's finale. Amasin is better than that last and could take it all at a fair price.

Best bet—Gay Bride.

Charts of Yesterday's Charles Town Races—By Walter Haight

TUESDAY, JUNE 8, 1937.
WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:30½. Off at 2:33. Winner, Mrs. R. L. Gheen's b. f. (4), by Ed Crump—Frappe. Trained by R. L. Gheen. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $810. Time, 1:20 3-5.

RED COMMANDER	(Munoz)	113	3	7	8	8	8	8	21.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KTWO, $5.80, $4.00, $2.60; LADY GURZIL, $4.40, $2.60; GLOSS, $3.00.

KTWO, off alertly, outran her field on the outside to the first turn, swung over to save ground when in front and finished with speed in reserve. LADY GURZIL, forwardly placed throughout, got little help from rider. GLOSS was in the thick of contention from the start and weakened. IDLE SUSAN went in air at break and showed good effort thereafter. VINNY BOY and RED COMMANDER had little chance with the start.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:02½. Off at 3:04½. Winner, L. Rodriguez's blk. g. (6), by Whiskalong—Miss Dora. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:18 2-5.

CAUTIOUS BO	(Wisner)	115	3	4	7°	8	8	8	11.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHISKORA, $9.40, $7.00, $3.80; VANVOLA, $5.20, $3.60; WARNED OFF, $9.00.

WHISKORA, much the best, sprinted into the lead at once, was rated along to stretch and drew out to win easily. VANVOLA, closest to the pacemaker from the start, closed gamely. WARNED OFF came with a belated rush on the outside. PRINCESS WRACK saved ground and closed willingly. OAKHURST had speed in spots. COUNSELLOR BILLY had some early speed. JUSTA CANTER weakened from hustling tactics in the opening quarter.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:33. Off at once. Winner, G. G. Waugh's b. m. (5), by Canter—Grand Peggy. Trained by A. S. Bowman. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:20 2-5.

	(McMullen)	102	5	6	7°	8	8	8	40.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEGGY CAN, $5.00, $3.20, $2.40; JUNE G., $5.60, $3.20; GENTLEMAN, $14.60.

PEGGY CAN, hustled into command going to the first turn, drew far out and easily held sway to the end. JUNE G. was forwardly placed throughout and closed willingly. GENTLEMAN worked his way up on the outside to show a good effort. SURRY was hard ridden throughout and weakened. BLACK MARS went lame in the running after being forwardly placed for a half.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $16.80.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01½. Off at 4:03½. Winner, H. C. Vaughn's b. g. (6), by Runantell—Talisman. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:50.

BROOKE HEROD	(Garrett)	111	3	5	6	6	5°	5.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STOOL PIGEON, $3.80, $2.80, $2.60; NAY NAY, $3.00, $2.40; ROYAL VEIL, $3.20.

STOOL PIGEON, away in the first flight, took a brief lead nearing the first turn, saved ground and drew out gradually under good handling. NAY NAY, closest to the pace from the start, swerved in the stretch. ROYAL VEIL could not better position under hard riding. CRUSHED ICE, slow to break, closed gamely. ADRIATIC ran wide throughout. BROOKE HEROD showed nothing.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:30½. Winner, W. A. Jones' br. f. (3), by Tall Timber—Upsetter. Trained by J. T. Harris. Value to winner, $450; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:16 1-5. (Track record.)

SHEKNOWS	(Root)	111	6	6	5°	5°	2°	5°	1.40
FLAG RAISING	(Berg)	111	5	5	6	6	6	6	55.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIMBER LADY, $7.60, $3.80, $3.80; SMALL CHANGE, $4.00, $3.20; TRIXIE LASS, $5.40.

TIMBER LADY, sent to the front soon after the break, was hard ridden and hung on with good courage to hold SMALL CHANGE safe in the final drive. SMALL CHANGE, off well, saved ground and was wearing down the winner steadily in the stretch. TRIXIE LASS closed gamely. SOUPCON saved ground throughout and had no excuses. SHEKNOWS failed to rally when placed to a drive while running on outside.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01. Winner, C. Beal's b. m. (6), by Mackenzie II—Truthfulness. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:17 3-5.

MISS TRYCOM	(Garrett)	113	2	1	1nk	2½	1°	7°	20.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VERITAS, $15.20, $7.20, $4.80; EASTER HERALD, $4.40, $3.40; SKEABOY, $4.40.

VERITAS, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, rallied sharply when placed to a drive approaching the stretch and disposed of EASTER HERALD. The latter ran MISS TRYCOM into defeat and continued gamely, but could not resist the winner. SKEABOY loomed menacingly entering the stretch, but hung at the end. LADY DUNLIN had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:29. Off at 5:31. Winner, W. G. Townsend's br. m. (5), by Petee Wrack—Rose Quartz. Trained by E. B. Townsend. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED LABEL, $8.60, $4.40, $2.80; PRECIOUS KING, $8.60, $4.60; NEVER IDOL, $3.80.

RED LABEL took command when LADY CIREK stopped and drew out to good lead and was in hand at the end. PRECIOUS KING, steadied along close to the leaders, hung on gamely in final drive. NEVER IDOL moved up with a rush along the backstretch, but hung at end. LADY CIREK tired from setting the pace. CANTIE could not threaten. COLORIST'S boy was almost unseated when bumped by TIANA. The latter ran out at the first turn and was pulled up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles; purse, $500; claiming; for 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:58. Off at 6:00. Winner, Mrs. R. L. Kearney Betting Plant a Refined Place

By Shirley Povich.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Louis, Mo., June 8.—There is nothing furtive about Tom Kearney's place here, where you can bet on a prize fight, take a fling at the nosses or get down on a ball game. You simply pays your money and you take your choice and it's a business transaction.

POVICH.

Folks don't slink in and slink out of Tom Kearney's place with a stealthy over-the-shoulder peek at a passing cop. It's respectable, like visiting your broker, if you have a broker. The coppers don't bother Kearney's place where they say everybody gets a fair shake for his money. Kearney's place has been doing business in downtown St. Louis for nigh onto 30 years.

The coppers out this way are sensible about places like Kearney's. One of 'em was saying to your correspondent today: Kearney's place never gave 'em any trouble, and besides, they're not interested much.

* * * *

"We don't fool around with this petty stuff," the chevroned cop was saying. "We're interested in keeping St. Louis clean from big mobs and that keeps us busy. We do a pretty good job of that. There isn't a single mob in St. Louis—none of this chain store crime you have in Chicago and the East.

* * * *

"They tried to get in here, those mobsters but we run 'em out. I doubt if there's a machine gun in St. Louis outside of police headquarters. But if we started fooling around with places like Kearney's those big shots would be in the city in a minute. Besides, nobody squawks about Kearney's."

* * * *

Charley Burke, who came out of St. Louis' Irish Kerry Patch District 50 years ago and graduated to bookmaking on the New York tracks, is the No. 1 man at Kearney's now. He took over the place when old Tom died a year ago, but except for the absence of Kearney, Kearney customers see no change in the place.

* * * *

Burke worked for Kearney for 15 years and he has retained in the place all of the colorful accoutrements that typified Kearney—a gambler born, who learned early in his career that the bookmakers percentage was the best gamble of all.

* * * *

Kearney came out of the early West where he dealt roulette with Tex Rickard and served as a croupieer at Goldfield, Nev. On the walls of the gaming room are huge lithographs of those early Western gambling houses with mustachioed fellows in wide-brimmed hats playing "Bucking the Tiger" or the "Double OO" and one of them looks amazing like the late Rickard.

* * * *

There are easy chairs for the customers now though, with flunkies dancing in attendance, and telephones bringing the race results and baseball scores by the minute. From points as far as Juneau, Alaska, and Nova Scotia come telegraphic money orders placing bets with Burke.

* * * *

A huge counting room takes care of Burke's out-of-town customers. At the end of the week, wins and losses are checked, a statement mailed to the losers and a statement and check mailed to the winners. It's all very businesslike.

* * * *

The bulk of the play in the place is on the hosses. But Burke will quote you odds on every big league baseball game every day. And today he published his first odds on the Braddock-Schmeling fight.

* * * *

There are no gambling tables—craps, roulette and cards, they're out, said Burke. "Too big and too fast a turnover in those games," he said. "Folks win and lose too fast—it makes for trouble, so we don't bother with those games. Because we don't want any trouble."

* * * *

He is quoting Joe Louis as a 1-to-4 favorite to beat Jimmy Braddock at Chicago later in the month. But that means only that you can get one to four if you want to bet on Louis. If you want to bet on Braddock, Burke will lay you only five against two. The discrepancy represents the well-known bookies percentage.

* * * *

"But this will be a big-betting fight," Burke was saying today. "A white man against a black man is always a good betting fight. The sharpshooters take the favorite and the other folks get down on the man they want to see win. There's plenty of money both ways. It's the bookmakers' dream fight. We balance our books at the right odds and sit back and win money, no matter who wins the fight."

Matulewicz Ready To Battle Irving

Durham, N. C., June 8.—Ray Matulewicz, former Southern Conference light-heavyweight champion from Duke University, will make his second professional start as a middleweight against Henry Irving, of Washington, here next Wednesday night. They are scheduled to box 10 rounds.

Max Novich, another outstanding college boxer from North Carolina, and Glenn Pennland, of North Carolina State, also will appear on the same card. Novich will meet Red Lewis, of Richmond, who was defeated by Matulewicz several weeks ago.

Pennland will draw Jack Mathews.

Sarah Moore, Edith Clarke Are Winners

Mrs. Robinson Will Meet Miss Moore Today in Big Event.

Baltimore, Md., June 8.—Mrs. Stanley Robinson, of Washington, seeded second to the defaulting No. 1 player, Mary Cootes, breezed through three rounds of the Maryland State women's tennis tournament today on the Baltimore Country Club's turf courts with the loss of no sets and only seven games.

In the quarter-finals at 11 a. m. tomorrow she will face Sarah Moore, a Washingtonian. Mrs. Robinson is No. 1 in the Middle Atlantic area, and Miss Moore No. 7. The former is also a 14-handicap golfer. Miss Moore is seeded fifth in this event.

Edith Clark, ranked No. 2, 1937 runner-up in the City of Washington tournament, swept through two rounds today in order to meet Mrs. Barry Wood in tomorrow's quarter-finals. One of Mrs. Wood's two victories today was a default. She is the Elkridge Hunt Club open champion and defeated the Elkridge runner-up, Eleanor Colston, 6—1, 7—5, today. Miss Colston is the Green Spring Valley Hunt Club Open winner.

Anne Ellis, of Washington, will match strokes with Frances Grimes, of Morgantown, W. Va., seeded No. 4, tomorrow. The former eliminated Mrs. S. S. Janney, jr., in the only three-set engagement of the day, 5—7, 6—3, 6—1. The loser was the Florida State champion several years ago, won the singles and shared the mixed doubles in the Piping Rock, Long Island, events and was sharer of the runner-up position in the women's doubles.

Miss Grimes took a pair of triumphs today, one of them from the Baltimore City champion, Grace Parker, 6—3, 6—0.

Anne Harrison, ranked sixth, only Baltimorean seeded, played only one match today and will oppose Eugenia Carton, one of the more youthful of the contestants, tomorrow. Miss Harrison was graduated from Greenwood School this month.

Consolations will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow and the women's doubles will follow the completion of the singles quarter-finals.

Preliminary Round.

First Round.

Sarah Moore, Washington, defeated Anne Vernon-Williams, 6—3, 6—3.

Second Round.

Miss Moore defeated Mrs. A. R. Stewart, 6—1, 6—1.

Miss Clark defeated Mrs. M. Prichard, Washington, 6—1, 6—0.

Mrs. Wood defeated Eleanor Colston, 6—1, 7—5.

Anne Ellis, Washington, defeated Mrs. S. S. Janney, jr., 5—7, 6—3, 6—1.

Tomorrow's Pairings.

Singles quarter-finals at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Robinson vs. Miss Moore; Miss Clark vs. Mrs. Wood.

Miss Carton vs. Miss Harrison; Miss Grimes vs. Miss Ellis.

Doubles—First Round.

Upper bracket:

Mrs. Robinson and Miss Clark vs. Mrs. W. Richard and Miss Ingram.

Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. C. O'Donovan vs. Miss Davis and Miss Hagner.

Miss Harrison and Mrs. Wood vs. Frances Carter, and Barbara Conard, both of Washington.

Miss Ellis and Mrs. Prichard vs. Mrs. A. W. Morton and Mrs. Robertson Griswold.

Mrs. C. W. Brown and Mrs. R. T. Shackelford vs. Mrs. J. E. Howard and Miss Xanders.

Welsh Beats Alloo In Men's Division

More tennis of the sparkling variety was offered at the Baltimore Country Club yesterday as most of the third-round matches in the Maryland State Championship tournament were completed.

One of the most interesting was the victory achieved by Barney Welsh, of Rockville, No. 1 player in the seeding, over Modeste Alloo, of the University of California, by 6—2, 7—5. Both are capable in every department of the game, and they brought off some brilliant shots.

Welsh took advantage of his rival's occasional lapses to achieve two breaks of service and gain a big advantage in the first set. But the second was a battle all the way until the score reached 5-all. Here Alloo blew up with a loud bang and it was all over.

Welsh showed under pressure that his game is somewhat near its best. His drives on both forehand and backhand skimmed the net with little clearance and zipped close to side and back lines. His volleying left something to be desired, but he showed little disposition to go to the net unless drawn by a short shot.

Anne Page Beaten In Keystone Play

Philadelphia, June 8.—Diminutive 25-year-old Edna Smith, of Cleveland, scored a major upset in the Women's Pennsylvania and Eastern States tennis championships today, defeating Anne Page, of Philadelphia, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4.

Miss Page, twice winner of the Women's National squash rackets title, played on even terms with the Cleveland girl until the middle of the last set. Then, with games tied at 3-3, Miss Smith took two successive games to gain a commanding edge.

Miss Smith will play Cecelia Riegel in the quarter-finals tomorrow.

Team Trophy Is Won By Revenue Bureau

Burnett's Great 139 Easily Takes Medalist Honors in Inter-Departmental Golf Play; Jack Olmstead Second.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Jock Olmsted, a General Accounting Office clerk, from the Argyle Club, proved the second day's sensation of the inter-departmental tournament, shooting 75—69—144 at Indian Spring yesterday, but the score was still 5 strokes behind Volney Burnett's record-breaking 139, posted Monday.

The Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department won the coveted Andrew Mellon team trophy, with a gross score of 619, garnered by Jack Lynch, 157; J. W. Harvey, 156; R. H. O'Malley, 153, and Johnny Miller's 153.

Burnett's subpar score easily won the Crain and Pearson medalist trophy, while Paul Smith, of the Navy Department, won the net prize with a score of 134. C. P. Redick and Tom Oakley were the respective winners of the Class B gross and net.

George Gist, representing the Interior Department, posted a 74-76, 150 for third low gross honors, trailing Burnett and Olmstead. Other low Class A scores yesterday included A. E. Willmett's 74-78, Tommy Webb, 77-75, W. W. Seay, 77-77 and Col. K. Buchanan, 80-76.

A three over par performance on the sixth hole, where he took three shots in a sandtrap, cost Olmsted his morning round 75. He nearly holed his tee shot on the seventeenth hole, a spoon shot stopping an inch from the cup.

The slender Argyle Club champion shot the first nine of the afternoon round in 36, one over par, but returned in subpar 33 figures, including birdies on the eleventh and twelfth, both balls stopping less than a foot from the pin. He sank an 8-foot putt on the final hole for a birdie, his fifth 3 of the nine holes.

G. P. O. and G. A. O. shared four of the six team trophies, P. W. A. and Treasury splitting the others. Oliver Caswell and D. J. Farrelly were C class winners.

Class A. Treasury, Internal Revenue, 619—J. R. Miller, 153; J. J. Lynch, 157; J. W. Harvey, 156, R. H. O'Malley, 153.

His home run, double and single that led the Detroit Tiger attack against the A's yesterday also boosted Hank Greenberg up to the top of the American League batting parade. There is, however, little margin among the junior circuit's trio in the "Big Six." Greenberg and Beau Bell, of the Browns, are tied at .3837, with Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, third at .3836.

Yankee Sails Through Rain To 2d Victory

Beats Rainbow Again in Light Breeze; Has Two Minute Margin.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., June 8.—Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee sailed through the rain today to her second victory over Chandler Hovey's Rainbow in the opening series of trial races to select a defender of the America's Cup against the second challenge of T. O. M. Sopwith, English sportsman.

The course was an irregular 23.7-mile triangle, which gave the big sloops a 10-mile run before a faint northeasterly wind to a racing buoy, an 8.1-mile beat to windward and a reach of six-tenths of a mile to the finish line at the Brenton Reef Lightship.

At the finish Yankee led Rainbow by 2 minutes and 3 seconds.

Rainbow went over the starting line about a minute ahead of Yankee, but apparently Yankee had more way on her, for she almost immediately drew into the lead. A beautifully setting spinnaker assisted her in the light air and she rounded the first mark almost ahead of her rival. Rainbow's spinnaker, much of the time, flapped as listlessly as a flannel blanket.

Elizabeth Hovey, daughter of the Rainbow's skipper-owner, took a trick at the wheel soon after the start but she had little chance of beating Yankee off the wind. Yankee this year has consistently outrun her rivals.

Tonight the Cup committee announced all three boats, Yankee, Rainbow, and Harold S. Vanderbilt's undefeated Ranger, would race in the final event of the preliminary series tomorrow. In their previous meeting Ranger beat Rainbow. Ranger has twice defeated Yankee.

The summary:

Course, 23.7 mile triangle. Start, 12:10 p. m. (E.S.T.).

Yacht, Yankee; skipper, Gerard B. Lambert; 10 miles, 1:48.24; 18.1 miles, 2:59.33; finish, 3:34.50; elapsed time, 3:24.40.

Yacht, Rainbow; skipper, Chandler Hovey; 10 miles, 1:49.33; 18.1 miles, 3:00.25; finish, 3:36.53; elapsed time, 3:26.53.

Alice Marble Triumphs in British Net

U. S. Champion Defeats Sylvia Henrotin in Big Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 8.—Alice Marble, United States singles titleholder, moved ahead toward the final round of the Beckenham tennis tournament today as Hal Surface, of Kansas City, and Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., qualified for third-round play in the men's division.

Miss Marble, beaten this spring in the final rounds of the Surrey, Middlesex and St. Georges Hill tournaments, dropped the opening set of her second-round match with Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, but rallied to win, 3—6, 6—1, 6—1.

Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and New York, bowed out of the competition, losing in straight sets to the English star, Dorothy Round, 6—3, 6—3.

Harris had no trouble with Robert Tinkler, of England, winning 6—2, 6—0, but Surface had to travel three sets to eliminate Nigel Sharpe of England, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4.

15 Colts Set For Latonia's Feature Race

Covington, Ky., June 8.—A field of 15, including the Kentucky Derby show horse, Reaping Reward, was indicated today for the $15,000 added Latonia Derby.

Four "also rans" from the Kentucky classic also will go to the post Saturday for the fifty-fifth running of the Latonia feature race for 3-year-olds.

War Admiral and Pompoon, win and place horses at the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, were among the 51 nominated on May 10, but neither will start. The injury to War Admiral in the Belmont last Saturday prevented Sam Riddle's colt from trying for the $5,000 premium offered by Latonia if the winner of its Derby also won the Kentucky Derby.

Secretary Will Shelley received word today that the Milky Way Farm's entry of Reaping Reward and Military would arrive from Chicago tomorrow, along with Mrs. W. H. Furst's Over The Top, a former stable companion of War Admiral; the Valdina Farm's Eagle Pass, and Raoul Walsh's Sunset Trail II.

The lone starter from the Eastern sector, John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot, also is due Wednesday. Whitney has engaged Johnny Gilbert, one of the leading riders in the East, to ride Flying Scot, winner of the Withers Stake at Belmont a couple of weeks ago.

Reaping Reward, running the mile in 1:37 1-5, won his first race of the year at Washington Park Monday. Coming from eighth place, he won by a length over Albubble, to whom he conceded seven pounds.

The Three D's stock farm's Heelfly, that won the $2,500 added Inaugural Handicap on Latona opening day, and J. W. Parrish's Dellor head the list of nine horses now at Latonia preparing for the mile and one-quarter test.

Sports in Brief

St. Louis, June 8.—Charles Gevecker, president of the Ozark A. A. U., announced today the National A. A. U. walking race will be held here June 22.

Pittsburgh.—Gus Greenlee, manager of Light Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis, agreed today to send his fighter against one of four proposed heavyweights in Detroit at some day between June 21 and July 1.

Greenlee made the deal with Jack Kearns and Tom Walsh, Detroit promoters, who returned to the automobile city by plane tonight.

East Lansing, Mich.—The University of Iowa scored in the tenth inning today to defeat Michigan State College, 7 to 5, and split their two-game series.

New York.—Enrico Venturi, Italian lightweight champion, easily outpointed Jimmy McLeod, of Tacoma, Wash., in an eight-round bout before a crowd of 4,000 at the Coney Island Velodrome tonight. Venturi weighed 139 and McLeod 135½.

Los Angeles.—Promoter Joe Levy announced tonight he had signed Pedro Montanez, sensational Puerto Rico lightweight, and Eddie Cool, Philadelphia, for a ten-round bout at Gilmore Stadium here June 28.

2 Roosevelt Netmen Enter Semifinals

The quarter-final matches of the interhigh schools' first singles tournament ran true to form when the first four seeded players reached the semifinals as a result of the matches yesterday in Potomac Park. Roosevelt placed two representatives and Western and Central one each.

The survivors are Johnsen and Royal, of Roosevelt, seeded 1 and 2 respectively, Durst of Central, seeded No. 3, and Nunez, of Western, seeded 4.

Roosevelt, however, lost an even chance of having a winning representative when semifinal pairings pitted her two sons against each other.

The semifinals will be played tomorrow between 3 and 5 p. m. in Potomac Park, with the finals at the same time on Friday.

Durst (C), defeated Burnside (W), 6—3, 3—6, 6—4.

Nunez (W), defeated Bonham (W), 4—6, 6—2, 6—4.

Robertson, Kurtsinger Win Five of Six Races

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—Al Robertson and Charley Kurtsinger, veterans who have won their share of rich stakes in the past, monopolized Washington Park's card today, winning five of the first six races between them.

The survivors are Johnsen and Royal, of Roosevelt, seeded 1 and 2 respectively

Wheat Soars As Black Rust Sweeps North

Futures Close 2⅜ to 3⅜ Cents a Bushel Over Previous Day.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 8.—Black rust sweeping northward on a front 125 miles wide, and threatening to repeat 1935's wholesale spring crop destruction, whirled wheat prices skyward today.

At Minneapolis, the Nation's principal spring wheat marketing center, wheat values today skyrocketed 5 cents a bushel, the extreme immediate permissible limit. Almost 4 cents bulge was scored in Chicago, where winter wheat rather than spring is chiefly the kind dealt in.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures, after a day of fast trading, were 2⅜ to 3⅜ cents above yesterday's finish; July, 1.09⅛@1.09¼; September, 1.08⅞@1.09; December, 1.10⅝@1.10¾. Corn ⅝ to 2¼ up; July, 1.17¾1.18; September, 1.03¾@1.04; December, 76⅛@76⅝. Oats 1¼ to 1⅞ advanced; July, 39¾@39⅞. Rye showed 1¾ to 2⅜ bulge; July, 88⅛. The outcome in provisions varied figures to a setback of 22 cents.

The Market

Stocks Advance Slowly in Dull Trading; U. S. Bonds Drift Lower; Wheat Strong.

New York, June 8.—Stocks improved a little without change in trading activity. Sales volume again floated around 600,000 shares. Government bonds were weaker and grains plumped ahead.

In the financial field the weather vanes shifted further toward the inflationary side, but the markets took no great notice of the fact. To begin with, the authorities seem to be determined to match rumor with statement in the gold field. Sir John Simon, speaking for the British government, put in his oar to pull with President Roosevelt in denying that any change in gold policy was contemplated. So far as Great Britain is concerned, that doesn't mean much, for the policy on the other side has been rather vague all along. Britain is committed to no particular price on gold, nor to buy the metal at all, for that matter. On the other hand, the statement of Sir John Simon will be received generally as a hint as to what our own Government plans to do, namely, not to change the price downward.

Return to Inflation.

Once the impression spreads that the leading nations have no intention of retracing any inflationary steps, the way will begin to crowd up with bull speculators, and it would not be surprising to see a fresh attempt to bull commodity and stock prices. Commodities in any event are headed toward higher levels, just as money rates are pointing upward, over the long term, and as bank credit is beginning to expand.

Another return to more familiar ground was seen in the crackling sound around the French franc. It has now been about two or three months since the franc enjoyed a "crisis," and a new one is overdue. Fundamentally the position of the franc is no stronger than it was. The Socialist government has put on a few brakes but has showed no real change in policy. French capital is no more anxious to return home than before. The government continues to operate at a deficit. The betting on francs, under those circumstances, is for a decline. Francs today were heavy.

Labor Troubles.

Undoubtedly one reason why the swing toward higher prices on the basis of credit inflation attracted little attention when the disheartening turn in labor affairs, particularly in the steel district of Ohio and the motor portions of Michigan. It is not so much the mere fact of a strike at certain steel and motor plants, with the prospect of business shutdown and higher costs as it is the fundamental principles of property rights and individual liberty involved.

The demonstration by organized labor that it can do as it pleases with the United States mail (and with the approval if not connivance of the Government), and that it can take charge of a State's capital, with nothing worse than temporary embarrassment to the Governor, scarcely ring true with the numerous if phoney assurances by the newsdealers that only with the current Administration could the country be saved from riot and upheaval. It is as foggy as ever just what may be the goal of the new economic management, but it is clearer than ever that the deep distrust of Wall Street in particular and of business in general of the intentions and probable results achieved by the Administration in power is amply justified.

Back Door Favor.

Something drastic needs be done to overcome that lack of confidence, and that something must be other than a crusade against those who do not turn over their entire incomes to the tax collector, a bill to pack the courts and delivery of full payment on political promises to labor leaders. To look at the matter from one angle, the recent developments clinch the case for no deflationary step on the monetary side, for the Government will need to go even further perhaps along the inflationary line to overcome the deadweight on business of those other burdens.

Securities rackets were inclined to reverse their trends of yesterday. Government bonds, after the flush of reception for the new short term loans, weakened, and stocks managed to harden after an unchanged opening and a softening process around midday. Trading in both bonds and stocks continued small. Commodities improved in certain of the previous day's weak spots, but cotton worked lower. Wheat rose sharply, the Winnipeg price jumping more than 4 cents a bushel. Minneapolis wheat climbed the day's limit of 5 cents a bushel. September wheat at Chicago closed 2⅞ cents higher at $1.08⅞ a bushel.

Banking Position.

Because of the change in manner of reporting items on the weekly statement of member banks of the Federal Reserve System in leading cities, a number of comparisons cannot be made with the previous week and a year ago. On other items the statement shows liquidation of securities, both Government and other bonds, doubtless connected with June 1 operations, and a rise in loans to banks. Demand deposits dropped sharply (by $254,000,000) and Government deposits were down, but interbank deposits rose. The rise in foreign bank deposits was slowed down to a mere $7,000,000 on the week.

Montgomery Ward Sets Sales Record

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today that May gross sales totaled $39,140,008, an increase of 29 per cent, compared with May, 1936. It was the largest volume for the month in the company's history.

For the first four months of Ward's fiscal year sales totaled $136,327,259, an increase of 32 per cent, compared with the corresponding 1936 period. This was also a new record for the first four months' period.

Local Realtors Hold Outing at Congressional 400 Members of Real Estate Board Gather at Country Club.

Attended by 400 members and guests, the fourth annual outing of the Washington Real Estate Board yesterday at Congressional Country Club was the most successful in the history of the organization. While the party began at 10:30 a. m. with a golf tournament for The Washington Post Trophy, the main body of picnickers moved to the club at 12:30 p. m. from headquarters of the board at 1417 K street northwest, in a motor caravan escorted by District and Maryland motorcycle police.

In the afternoon there were horseshoe pitching contests, tennis tourneys, baseball games and races between teams from member offices and at 4:30 o'clock an exhibition game was played by the Cafritz Construction Co. and District, Lawyers & Washington Title Insurance Co.'s teams in the Soft Ball League of the board. Prizes in the contests were awarded following a dinner at the clubhouse in the evening. Entertainment features included the Realtors' Trio, composed of William C. Miller, Raymond M. Taylor and DeVere R. Weedon, Henry C. Nestor and the Four Beales. Music was furnished by Stephen Le Sieur's Orchestra.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Some pressure on the French franc caused that currency unit to decline narrowly in foreign exchange dealings yesterday. The pound sterling likewise lost ground and the Swiss franc mounted.

In New York the French unit was quoted at 4.45¼ cents, off .00⅛ of a cent from the previous close. Sterling, at $4.93¼, was ⅛ of a cent lower and the Swiss franc gained .00⅛ of a cent at 22.84½ cents. The Netherlands guilder, at 54.99 cents, and Canadian dollar at 100.00 cents, were unchanged.

Trading was quiet in London, where the dollar gained ⅛ of a cent to close at 4.93¼ to the pound. In Paris it finished at the equivalent of 4.450 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 4.456 cents.

Exchange traders noted with interest the statement of the British chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon, that the government's policy with regard to gold buying was unchanged, but said it had little effect on foreign exchange dealings.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury June 5:

Employment Rises Sharply During April

Total of 6,981,000 Idle Is Lowest Since Summer of 1931.

New York, June 8.—Unemployment in the United States declined in April by more than half a million persons to a total of 6,981,000, according to the National Industrial Conference Board, today.

This number, constituting the lowest total for any month since the summer of 1931, when conditions were steadily becoming worse, marks a decrease since January of this year of 1,400,000 persons.

The April unemployment total compares with 7,513,000 in March and 8,116,000 in February of this year and with 9,325,000 in April, 1936, according to the conference Board.

The decline in unemployment between March and April of 532,000 workers was due largely to the increase in employment of 270,000 workers in agriculture, 110,000 workers in manufacturing and lesser amounts in other fields of enterprise.

Total employment in April aggregated 45,913,000 workers, of whom 34,877,000 were employed in nonagricultural and 11,036,000 in agricultural pursuits. The April total of 11,802,000 workers employed in manufacturing reflected a gain of almost 5,000,000 persons, compared with the July, 1932, low for this field of enterprise. This total, according to the Conference Board, was almost 500,000 greater than during September, 1929, the highest month of employment in that year, when 11,371,000 workers were engaged in manufacturing activities of all kinds.

Between March, 1933, the month of low ebb of employment in all fields of activity, and April of this year there has been an increase in employment of 10,327,000 workers.

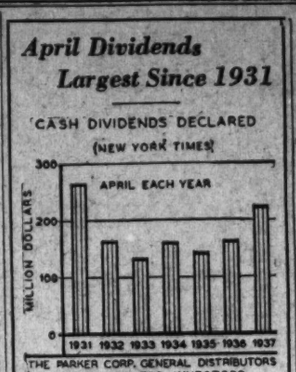
April Dividends Largest Since 1931



Boston, Mass., June 8.—Dividend payments continue to increase. Although April payments were slightly under those in March they exceeded a year ago by 37 per cent and were the largest for any April since 1931. During the first four months of this year 15 per cent more money was paid out to stockholders in dividends than in the same 1936 months.

Cotton Declines To Further Lows

New York, June 8 (AP).—Cotton sold off to further new low ground for the movement today but resistance developed as prices approached the 12-cent level. October, which had eased from 12.26 to 12.12, closed at 12.19, with final prices 9 to 12 points net lower.

G.W.U. Honors 54 Leaders of Student Affairs

Prizes Are Awarded at Class Night Exercises in University Yard.

Fifty-four awards for scholastic excellence and for leadership in campus activities were presented at George Washington University's class night exercises last night in the university yard.

Seven hundred and nine students will be graduated from the university tonight at the 116th commencement, at 8 p. m. in Constitution Hall.

Three honorary degrees are to be conferred upon women who have made distinguished contributions to education Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, of Washington, D. C. and Rochester, N. Y., philanthropist and benefactor of education, will receive the degree of doctor of laws. The degree of doctor of laws also will be conferred upon Dr. Helen Taft Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr College. Dean Elizabeth Peet, of Gallaudet College, an eminent teacher of the deaf, will receive the degree of doctor of pedagogy.

Award Is a Memorial.

At the class night exercises, Ross Pope, son of Senator and Mrs. James P. Pope, of Idaho, received the Joshua Evans 3d award, conferred for the first time. This award is a memorial to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., of Washington, who last year himself was recipient of one of the highest of the university's awards, the Morgan Richardson Goddard prize. The Evans award is to be made annually to that man in the graduating class "who has demonstrated signal ability in the social and political sciences, and who has given promise of the interpretation of this ability in good citizenship among his fellows."

Edmund Lewis Browning, jr., 2001 Sixteenth street northwest, received the Morgan Richardson Goddard award, for the highest average in economics, business administration, foreign commerce and public accounting.

The Delta Tau Delta and Pi Beta Phi awards, to the man and the woman graduate, respectively, who have done the most constructive work in student activities, went to Paul Brogren, Muskegon, Mich., and Margaret Graves, Kensington, Md.

Ten campus leaders were tapped for membership in Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary student activities fraternity, including Jack Brown, George Croft, Sidney Cross, Joseph Goldman, Ray Howard, Robert Howell, Charles Kiefer, Winfield Rankin, Edward Stevlingson and Robert Williams.

Moscow, Wednesday, June 9 (U.P.).—Pilot Anatole Alexeev, who landed on an ice floe while en route from the north Pole to Rudolf Island, 560 miles away, prepared to take off today after a relief plane found him.

The plane, piloted by the Russian flier, Golovin, left from Rudolf Island at 7:50 p. m. yesteray and landed near Alexeev at 8:44 p. m. Gasoline was pumped into Alexeev's plane, which made a forced landing when it ran out of gas.

Pilot L. G. Kruze, who was unreported for a time while looking for Alexeev, returned to Rudolf Island at 8:45 p. m.

the world," the radio man continued, "that we're all as happy as clams." (Dr. Richtmyer is Cornell University's representative in the party.)

As the seconds ticked off toward the approach of totality, Hicks described a scene which reminded one of infantrymen awaiting the zero hour.

Hands are Poised.

"Father McNally (Paul A., director of Georgetown Observatory) is peering through his camera. Dr. Richtmyer, on my right, has his instruments ready. Charles Bittinger has his brush poised over his easel."

For almost a month the party had been on the island, making precise arrangements for the brief sight of the moon casting its shadow across the sun. Previously there had been months of preparation in the United States.

Birds flew over the island in large numbers until the eerie, greenish light, herald of totality, gradually bathed the landscape. Darkness fell swiftly and in a few moments the dazzling corona, shooting its brilliance millions of miles outward, had appeared.

"The birds have come in from the sea to roost," Hicks said. "The sky is-is-is dark blue." (The grandeur of the sight was playing tricks on his tongue.) "The sun is an impenetrable black circle. This is magnificent!"

Venus in Sky.

At the height of the eclipse the planet Venus was plainly visible in the heavens. It was so dark the announcer could not read the time on his watch. Fifty seconds before the end, however, he could do so.

As the shadow began to lift, the island took on a green-lavender haze. The scientists put on their smoked glasses to view the closing phase. Soon the birds were out again, soaring over the shark-infested lagoon nearby and out to sea.

Hicks reported "a lovely crescent of yellow" around the sun. About him the scientists, still silent with wonder, had their hands on their hips. The job was done and a nervous letdown was setting in.

It is expected that most, if not all of the many photographs which they made will be shipped to Honolulu in air-conditioned containers for development. As Dr. Briggs explained, fresh water is extremely scarce on Canton Island, making this important phase of the expedition's work impractical at the scene.

Describe Phenomenon.

Late last night the scientists halted their packing for their trek back to civilization for a brief time to give their first-hand descriptions of the great eclipse to the world in their final broadcast from Canton Island.

"Nature was very successful in showing us her great phenomenon," said Father McNally.

"A splendid eclipse," commented Dr. Richtmyer.

"I hope I can appropriately portray on canvas the glory of the sight we saw today," asserted Charles Bittinger, the artist.

"It was a glorious day, and everything went splendidly," stated Dr. S. A. Mitchell, of the University of Virginia, leader of the expedition.

"The good Lord gave us the most perfect visibility ever seen," said Capt. J. F. Hellweg, director of the Naval Observatory.

Congratulations Sent.

All the scientists united in saying that the results of the eclipse would be of vast value to astronomy.

From Washington congratulations were flashed to the expedition by Dr. Lagorce, Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Capt. Hickey.

In Southern California, observers got some good views, although scattered clouds at the start aroused fears the eclipse would not be visible. In Hollywood, scores visited Griffith Observatory. There and elsewhere along the southernmost portions of the United States from Los Angeles to Palm Beach thousands stared at the sun through smoked glass for a glimpse of the phenomenon which, for scientific purposes, may turn out to be the best ever offered by nature.

Observed From Steamer.

Successful observations of the eclipse were made by astronomers aboard the freighter Steelmaker in the South Pacific for the duration of 7 minutes 6 seconds, the Associated Press reported.

The theoretical time of the total eclipse was 7 minutes 2 seconds, but an additional 4-second observation was obtained by the 8-knot eastern speed of the Steelmaker, which kept the ship in the shadow cast by the moon more than a half hour.

Observations were made about 1,000 miles southwest of Honolulu, near the Marquesas Islands, as the freighter proceeded from Hawaii toward Panama.

Dr. Briggs "Pleased."

"The equipment was in good condition, the weather was perfect and I am very much pleased," Dr. Briggs commented afterward. "The various observations were most comprehensive."

The Bureau of Standards was represented on the expedition by Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, one of the Washingtonians who went to Russia last year to view a solar eclipse which proved a scientific "bust" because of inclement weather.

Incidentally, yesterday's display narrowly escaped a similar fate. Less than five minutes after the sun reappeared, clouds swept across the sky.

LaGorce, visibly relieved when the totality period ended with the scientists having had full opportunity to make their observations, voiced his gratitude to the Navy, Georgetown University and other institutions whose co-operation made the expedition possible.

It will take years to evaluate some of the data which was obtained yesterday, it was said here. The "artillery" which was trained on the sight by the expedition included six spectrographs, instruments which split up light into a spectrum or rainbow of various wave lengths, which is then photographed; a polarization camera, three large telescopic cameras, and other special devices, some of which were never used before.

Charles Bittinger, a former president of the Arts Club of Washington, painted a picture of the eclipse as the phenomenon unfolded, and motion pictures also were taken.

Pictures and scientific information also were obtained by American, Japanese and Peruvian scholars stationed in the Andes and along the north Peruvian coast. Towering above them all was Miss Dorothy Bennett, assistant curator of the Hayden Planetarium, who made observations at Cerro Pasco, 14,000 feet above sea level.

Capt. A. W. Stevens, Army stratosphere flier, flew 30,000 feet up to make photographs of the spectacle.

An unidentified faint star was sighted near the sun by a member of the crew of the Steelmaker, it was reported by the Associated Press. Nate Greene reported he saw the star while scientists were viewing the eclipse.

W.H.Malone Guilty In Income TaxCase

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—William H. Malone, wealthy former chairman of the Illinois tax commission, was convicted in Federal court tonight of evading income taxes in 1929 and 1930.

A jury reached its verdict in less than two hours. Malone was convicted on both counts of an indictment.

The Government charged he evaded taxes of $59,000 on $330,000 of concealed income during the first two years of the depression.

Prosecutors devoted their last efforts to an attack on Malone's story, told to the jury yesterday, that he was paid $700,000 in 1920 for his services in the late Gen. Leonard Wood's unsuccessful campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination.

The erstwhile State official had testified the money was given him in $500 and $1,000 bills by the late Col. William C. Procter, Cincinnati soap manufacturer, for his work in Wood's behalf in South Dakota and Cook County (Chicago).

Duke Telegraphs Thanks to Hitler

Noetsch, Austria, June 8 (AP).—The honeymooning Duke and Duchess of Windsor thanked Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany today for his good wishes on the occasion of their marriage.

"For your cordial wishes we thank you heartily," the telegram to Hitler read.

The duke hoed weeds in the garden for two hours this morning, and got big blisters in his hands.

Commissioners to Ask No New Taxes, in View of Imminent Crisis.

from established taxes falls below present estimates.

The only substantial changes made in the District bill as it passed the Senate, in comparison with the measure as reported, were legislative amendments offered by Senator Thomas on behalf of the committee.

Two of these, however, were ruled out on points of order. One sought to place jurisdiction over the new Police Court Building in the hands of the Commissioners instead of the judges, while the other proposed establishment of parking meters.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, raised the first point of order and refused to be argued out of his position by Senator Thomas, who pointed out that the Commissioners wished to utilize space not needed by the courts.

The second point of order was raised by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska. Similar legislation, however, is carried in the omnibus tax bill and is not subject to a point of order although, of course, it could be eliminated by amendment.

Other Riders Adopted.

Other legislative riders, including the transfer of control of the hospitals from the welfare to the health department, were adopted without dissent or debate.

Senator Thomas explained that the change in administration of Gallinger Hospital and the District Tuberculosis Sanatoria was proposed by the committee upon recommendation of "an eminent authority," Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, who is a physician.

The only fight on committee amendments to the bill proper came from Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota. He contested the reduction from $450,000 to $350,000 in the initial appropriation for the Northern High School to be built at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest.

Senator Thomas stated that the $350,000 had been recommended by the Budget Bureau and that the reduction was necessary to readjust the proportion of appropriations between colored and white schools.

Frazier also criticized placement of the proposed junior high school on the Banneker playground, but he did not contest it. The committee was sustained in a vote on the Northern High School appropriation.

$328,600 Added.

Monetary additions to the budget total on the Senate floor amounted to $328,600.

This amount was accounted for by a $325,000 initial appropriation for a new Pennsylvania Avenue bridge, and $3,600 for a marshal in the U. S. Court of Appeals. The span, to be built of steel at a cost of $2,000,000, was authorized in a legislative rider attached to the bill.

Among other legislative amendments adopted were provisions authorizing the commissioners to build an asphalt plant if paving material prices rise too high and restrictions on the advertising of delinquent tax lists in the newspapers.

As the bill went to conference it exceeds by $24,176 the Budget Bureau estimates.

Due to the absence of Chairman Collins, of the House subcommittee, it is unlikely a conference will be held on the Senate and House differences this week.

Miss Keyes Is Wed To Joseph Shimon

Joseph Shimon, headquarters detective sergeant, and Miss Elizabeth Keyes, of Asheville, N. C., and Palm Beach, Fla., were married yesterday at the First Congregational Church by the Rev. Joseph S. Loughran.

The ceremony was followed by a reception in the Washington Hotel, after which the couple departed for a wedding trip through New England.

The bride is a graduate of Holton Arms School. Her mother, Mrs. Joseph Keyes, and a brother, Joseph Keyes, jr., both of Asheville, attended the wedding.

Shimon is regarded as one of the most capable detectives in Washington. He took a major part in two important cases last year—the arrest of George Garcia, the "full dress bandit," and the solving of the Bugher $300,000 jewel robbery.

Southern Unit OffersProgram To Help Cotton

Price-Fixing at 1909-14 Level Is Asked of Congress.

By Russell Smith

Congress has been offered a farm legislative program by 13 Southern commissioners of agriculture tantamount to a campaign to restore King Cotton to his throne.

The 12-point program formulated for Senate and House Agriculture committees is based almost exclusively upon reinforcement of cotton's position as the basic Southern cash crop.

The major recommendation is that cotton prices be fixed at the level occupied during the 1909-14 period. The view of these Southerners is that Secretary of Agriculture Walace's "ever normal granary" and the Farm Bureau bill now before Congress embodying the granary will do little to give cotton growers "parity" prices.

Dependence of cotton growers on world prices and methods of giving them higher prices occupied most of the testimony at two days of committee hearings, with Chairman Smith, of South Carolina, assailing the protective tariff system, the Johnson act and other trade barriers, and even questioning Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade treaties as of no value to Southern growers.

Cite "Discrimination."

The principal recommendations put before Congress by the commissioners, aside from cotton proposals, were for enactment of the Bankhead farm tenant bill and for removal of "unreasonable discrimination against Southern products in the freight rate schedule."

Other cotton recommendations included:

A tariff sufficient to protect American cotton, on jute, sisal and similar products, and purchase of cotton by the Government; retention of State warehousing system for cotton storage; expansion of grading and classification for cotton and cottonseed; investigation of handling, financed by Federal funds; establishment of a research laboratory, provided in the Bilbo bill, for development of new uses for Southern farm products, especially cotton.

Sherwood School Graduates Twelve

The Sherwood School graduated nine high school seniors and awarded certificates to three grade pupils at exercises yesterday morning at 2128 Wyoming avenue.

Robert C. Henderson, headmaster of the school, made the commencement address, and Robert E. Bruce, dean, awarded the diplomas and certificates.

Leon H. Berger, Curtis W. Chapman, jr., James R. Dienelt, R. Hamilton Long, jr., J. Stanley Woolfolk, Roland J. Spritzen, Donald M. Stoezer, Thomas B. Wolfe, Samuel H. Henton, jr.

Grade department certificates went to:

Earl F. Dorsey, jr., James S. MacLean, jr., Bruce E. Younger.

Navy Orders Changes in 12 Commands

Changes in commands of various units in the United States fleet, involving 12 high naval officers, were announced yesterday by the Navy Department. The changes are effective immediately.

Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig relieves Rear Admiral Edward B. Fenner as commander of cruisers, scouting force; Rear Admiral Fenner will report for duty as commander of the Thirteenth Naval District, Seattle, Wash., early next month. Rear Admiral Taussig has been commander of battleship division 3 since June of last year.

Rear Admiral James O. Richardson has been ordered to the Navy Department as assistant chief of naval operations, relieving Rear Admiral William S. Pye. Rear Admiral Richardson's former position as commander of destroyers, scouting force, will be filled temporarily by Capt. Laurence N. McNair until Rear Admiral Pye reports.

Rear Admiral Walton R. Sexton assumed command of destroyers, battle force, relieving Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward. The latter will report for duty as commandant of the Third Naval District, at New York, in August. Rear Admiral Sexton had served as a member of the Navy General Board since 1934.

Rear Admiral Walter S. Anderson relieves Rear Admiral Harry L. Brinser as commander, cruiser division 4, scouting force. Rear Admiral Brinser has been ordered to Washington for duty as president of the board of inspection and survey. Rear Admiral Anderson recently served as naval attache at the American Embassy in London.

Capt. William Baggaley relieves Capt. David W. Bagley as commander, destroyer squadron 20, scouting force. Capt. Bagley, who has been selected for promotion to the grade of rear admiral, will report as commander, minecraft, battle force. Capt. John H. Newton was detached as commander, destroyer squadron 3, scouting force, for duty as chief of staff, commander, destroyers, battle force.

Baltimore Blaze Injures 2 Firemen

Baltimore, June 8 (AP).—Most of Baltimore's downtown section was shrouded in murky, ill-smelling smoke, two firemen were injured, and sections of a large crowd of onlookers were liberally drenched late today, during the course of a four-alarm fire near the waterfront.

The upper floors of a five-story brick building were swept by the blaze, but firemen prevented it from reaching the first floor, where a quantity of small arms ammunition, owned by a hardware company, was stored.

France to Damascus Air Race Substituted

Paris, June 8 (AP).—The French Aero Club announced today the air ministry has approved a France to Damascus air race as a substitute for the canceled New York to Paris flight.

The original New York to Paris race, scheduled in honor of the tenth anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's solo flight across the Atlantic, was called off when the United States Department of Commerce refused to grant licenses for the take-off.
